GOOD NEWS FROM NEW-YORK STATE.

ULSTER AND GREENE COUNTIES.

BRIGHTER PROSPECT IN ULSTER—CHEERING OUTLOOK FOR A REDUCED DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY—THE REPUBLICANS HARD AT WORK—SIMILAR GOOD NEWS FROM GREENE COUNTY.

RONDOUT, Tuesday, Oct. 31, 1876.

Ulster County is generally classified among the Democratic counties, and the Democrats here, until within a few days past, have been claiming it for Tilden by majorities all the way from 1,500 to 2,500; but an analysis of the last sixteen years shows that, on a full poll, the county is really Republican. In 1860 and in 1864 it was carried for Lincoln, and again in 1872 it was carried for Grant by a majority of 930. In 1868, when the Tweed Ring scattered their fraudulent naturalization papers all over the State, the Democrats succeeded in carrying the county for Seymour, but this is the only time it has gone Democratic in a Presidential election since 1856. Now it is a curious fact that the Democratic vote of the county in 1872, when the Republicans carried it by 930, was only 55 more than it was in 1875, when the Democrats carried it by 2,420, while the Republican vote in 1875 was 3,122 less than it was in 1872. The same facts appear in the vote at every election when the Democrats have carried the county. Their full vote has always been polled, and remained almost exactly the same each year, while the Republicans have not polled anything near a full vote since 1872. This year they are coming out, and unless there have been great changes which Republicans are not aware of, the county ought to give a majority for Hayes and Wheeler on Tuesday next. All agree that there has not been a time since 1860 when the Republicans of this county were so fully aroused and in earnest as they are now. There never has been a time when political meetings were so well attended or when the prospects for the Republicans were brighter. There is a very large foreign population in the county, employed on the Delaware and Hudson Canal, in the flag-stone quarries, and in the manufacture of cement, the larger portion of which usually vote the Democratic ticket. A good share of the German voters, however, are with the Republicans, and they will be more than usually so this year owing to a speech delivered here the other evening by Carl Schurz. There will also be a reduction in the Democratic vote this year, owing to the depression in those industries employing large numbers of Irishmen, which has driven them out to other localities. On the whole the Republicans have a fair show of carrying the county, if Tilden's money is not used to bribe the floating vote, and in any event the Democrats will only be able to succeed by a small majority, if at all. Ulster elects three Assemblymen, and the delegation last year stood two Democrats to one Republican. This year it will be reversed, and there is a fair probability of the Republicans electing all three of their candidates.

In the First District, Frederick H. Stephan, a German, has been nominated by the Republicans against Thomas Hamilton, the last year's member, who has been renominated by the Democrats. The Republicans feel quite sure of electing Stephan, and the Democrats are not at all confident.

In the Second and Third Districts, Nathan Keator and Methusalem Hornbeck, the Republican candidates, are almost certain of success. There is also a good prospect of electing the Republican candidate for Sheriff of the county, Mr. Robert A. Snyder, of Saugerties.

The Democratic candidate for Congress in this district, which comprises the Counties of Greene, Ulster, and Schoharie, is of course reasonably certain of being elected. His name is Samuel Mayham, and his Republican opponent is Thomas H. Tremper. To sum up the situation in Ulster County, the Republicans will probably elect their Sheriff, will gain one and perhaps two Assemblymen, and will reduce the Democratic majority on the electoral and State tickets to a very low figure, if they do not wipe it out altogether.

GREENE COUNTY.

CATSKILL, Oct. 31, 1876.—Green County is one of the very few rural counties of the State that can be relied on to give a majority for bogus Democracy. It is not a very large majority, but being rare and generally sure, it is highly prized by the party that usually has to seek its majorities in the slums of the large cities. The population of Green County are not as a whole the most intelligent to be found in the country districts. Sleeping, as they do in the shadow of the Catskill Mountains, they have a touch of the Rip Van Winkle about them, and are apt to wake up on election day with the delusion that Gen. Jackson, or some other hero whom their fathers worshipped in the better days of the Democratic Party, is still in the field as a candidate for office. As very few of them ever saw Samuel J. Tilden, and as the pictures of him that are scattered about here have about the same resemblance to the original as they do to "Old Hickory," it is not improbable that a majority of the Greene County Democrats may mistake Tilden for Jackson on Tuesday next. If they do, the county will give its usual Democratic majority of 700 or 800. The Republicans, however, think they will be able to keep it down to 500 or 600. The village of Catskill, where much of the civilization of the county lies, is about evenly divided in politics, but may give a small Republican majority. The Republicans are hard at work in all parts of the county, and will do the best they can in view of the benighted field of missionary labor which they are called on to fill. They say they are reasonably certain of electing their member of Assembly, Mr. Oliver Burke, of this village, which will be a gain. They also have some hopes of the sheriff, but their main energies are devoted to securing the Assemblyman, and cutting down the Rip Van Winkle majorities on the national and State tickets.

THE CAMPAIGN IN GREENE COUNTY—REPUBLICAN RALLIES IN CAIRO AND CATSKILL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CATSKILL, Oct. 31.—The closing week of the work of the campaign in Greene County promises to be very active on the Republican side. Meetings are to be held every night at all the principal places in the county. To-day a large mass-meeting was held at Cairo, which was addressed by ex-United States Senator John M. Thayer, of Nebraska; Gen. Theodore B. Gates, of Kingston, and Thomas H. Tremper, of Rondout, our candidate for Congress. The speech of Senator Thayer was a remarkable and powerful production, logical in its reasoning and carrying conviction to every one present. He contrasted the record of the Democratic Party when in power with that of the Republican Party, to the great favor of the latter, and showed the claims of S. J. Tilden as a reformer to be the biggest fraud ever attempted to be palmed off on a free people. He also showed how Tilden organized fraud on a gigantic scale in 1868, by which the people of this State were cheated and Hoffman counted in as Governor. The speech of Gen. Gates was mostly upon the financial question, showing how, by the bad management of the Democrats when in power, the national credit went down so that money had to be borrowed at the rate of twelve per cent., and the Government bonds sold at twelve per cent. below par, while under Republican rule our bonds are at par in all the markets of the world, and we can borrow money at four and one-half per cent. The danger of a "solid South" was shown, and the danger to be apprehended by the Southern claims, which were introduced in the last Congress, wherein the South demands payment for losses during the war, was discussed, and it produced a marked impression upon the farmers and tax-payers present. In the evening Senator Thayer spoke at Catskill, in the Opera-house, to a large audience. His speeches have done great good, and the Republican cause in Greene County is gaining every day.

MR. BLAINE IN STEUBEN COUNTY.

A MAGNIFICENT MEETING IN CORNING—DELEGATIONS PRESENT FROM SURROUNDING TOWNS AND COUNTIES—SPEECHES BY SENATOR BLAINE AND OTHERS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CORNING, Oct. 31.—The meeting here to-day was in every sense a magnificent success. Early in the day, from the surrounding towns and from Alleghany, Livingston, Yates, Chemung, and Schuyler Counties, in this State, and Tioga, the people poured in by thousands. Gen. Rufus Scott, of Alleghany presided. Speeches were made by Gen. Scott, Charles D. Baker, Hon. Mr. Niles, of Wellsboro, Penn., and Hon. William A. Stone, of Tioga, Penn. After which, Mr. Blaine having arrived, was introduced to the innumerable crowd of eager listeners amid a burst of applause such as was never before heard in old Steuben. He said: "I bring good news from the great West. Everywhere the intelligence of the country is alive to the real issue of the campaign. The question is whether the Democratic Party, controlled by a solid South, shall be called to govern the nation. All other questions, civil service reform, finance, &c., shrink to nothingness before it. Mr. Riddle, author of the bill authorizing the payment of war claims, telegraphed his indorsement of Mr. Tilden's letter of acceptance. This Riddle bill makes no distinction between citizens that are loyal and the rebels of the war. Under the new rule of evidence established by it, the oath of the claimant supported by one witness is sufficient. Thus the worst rebels are enabled to hunt in couples. One man presents a claim, the other swears he is a reputable citizen; and then they exchange situations, the claimant becoming the witness and the witness the claimant. The introduction of this bill caused a sudden revival of loyalty throughout the South. The most reliable check upon this species of fraudulent hunt upon the Treasury was the archives of the Confederacy in the possession of the Government, which are carefully arranged by numbers and lettering so that a ready reference can be had to the claimant's record, and in many instances rebel claimants had been made to stand aside by a reference to these archives, wherein the claimant's name is found recorded as having held an important office under the Confederacy."

The speaker then referred to the connection of Mr. Tilden with the thieves of the Tammany Ring, characterizing them as "sneak-thieves." The Government of the City of New-York under the rule of these men had been guilty of corruption, ballot-stuffing, and thieving unparalleled in our history as a nation. He did not want to see this state of things transferred to Washington. Democrats ask for the control of the Government for the sake of restoring the credit of the nation. The people don't want credit restored in that way. Mr. Blaine alluded to the speech of Ben Hill in Congress, charging the North with cruelty to the rebel prisoners, and called attention to the fact that but one man among all the Democratic members from the North dared to give the lie to the base slander, and that man was "Charley" Walker, of Steuben. The people of the North do not understand the South. It would have been more consistent to have called the old Tory Party to take charge of the Government than now to surrender it into the hands of the Democrats. He did not want to hurt them, but he objected to be governed by them. The salvation of the nation depended upon its being governed for thirty years to come by loyal Union men, and the amendments to the Constitution must be enforced or repealed. "Don't allow the dry-rot to attack the Constitution," said he. The meeting numbered not not less than ten thousand persons. The torchlight procession in the evening consisted of 2,500 in line.

MASS MEETING OF ONTARIO COUNTY REPUBLICANS—1000 MAJORITY PROMISED FOR HAYES AND WHEELER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CANANDAIGUA, Oct. 31.—The Republicans of Ontario County held a grand mass meeting here yesterday afternoon and evening. The afternoon meeting was addressed by ex-Gov. Noyes, of Ohio, and Hon. John A. Kasson, of Iowa, and the one of the evening by Mr. Kasson and Sherman S. Rogers. All of these gentlemen delivered eloquent speeches and produced an excellent impression. The evening meetings were preceded by a parade of the Ontario County Battalion of Boys in Blue. The streets were thronged with thousands of enthusiastic Republicans, and many of the buildings and private residences were brilliantly illuminated. Great enthusiasm prevailed, and a determined effort was manifested to contribute to the glorious result which is expected on Tuesday next. Ontario County is good for 800 and possibly, 1,000, majority.

A GREAT GATHERING OF REPUBLICANS AT HUDSON—SPEECH BY HON. C. M. DEPEW.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HUDSON, Oct. 31.—Hon. Chauncey M. Depew delivered a characteristic speech, full of fire and energy, before an immense audience in this city to-night. He crowded into an address of an hour and a half a complete review of the political situation, excoriated Tilden's Democracy, exposed the scheme of a solid South, refuted the false claims of Tilden's economy, and closed with a magnificent tribute to our next President, Rutherford B. Hayes. The solid truth has never been more convincingly told during the campaign, nor with more telling effect than by Mr. Depew to-night.

AN IMMENSE MEETING IN OSWEGO—SPEECHES BY SENATOR BOUTWELL AND COL. CARTER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

OSWEGO, Oct. 31.—Another immense Republican mass meeting was held here this evening. The State Armory, a large building, was crowded, and great enthusiasm prevailed. Senator Boutwell and Col. Carter made two of the most telling speeches of the campaign. The meeting was the largest and most successful held in this county.

A STUPENDOUS RALLY IN ALBANY—OVER 50,000 PERSONS PRESENT—THE REPUBLICANS MORE HOPEFUL THAN EVER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 31.—The most stupendous Republican demonstration known to this vicinity took place in this City to-night. Seven thousand men were in procession, and nearly fifty thousand persons lined the streets. Excursion trains from the north and west swelled the multitude, and created the liveliest enthusiasm. The illumination of business and private houses was almost universal, the city having the appearance of a grand celebration, rather than the demonstration of one political party. There were several unique and interesting features in the great procession, among which was a division comprising three hundred of the leading business men of the city, and a troop of mounted citizens, over five hundred horsemen being in line. The greatest enthusiasm prevails all over Albany to-night, which speaks well for the success of the national and State tickets in this county, and the election of Hamilton Harris for Congress. During the past ten days there has been evidence of apathy on the Republican side in this city, but to-night's gigantic demonstration changes all that, and from now until election day will be waged an aggressive and confident warfare upon the wavering Democrats.

A LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING IN JAMESTOWN.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

JAMESTOWN, Oct. 31.—A large and enthusiastic Republican meeting was held in the Opera House, in this city, this evening. Able addresses were delivered by Senator Fenton and Judge Marvin. They were listened to with earnest attention, and the discussion of the political issues was received with marked favor.

AN UP-TOWN RALLY.

A SPIRITED REPUBLICAN MEETING IN THE TWENTIETH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT—SPEECHES BY LEVI P. MORTON, GEN. DANIEL E. SICKLES AND OTHERS.

The Republican Campaign Club of the Twentieth Assembly District had a spirited rally last evening at Terrace Garden, Fifty-eighth street, near Third avenue. The spacious hall was occupied by a large and attentive audience, and a parade of the Boys in Blue was held outside. The principal speaker of the evening was Gen. Sickles, but a brief address was delivered by Hon. Levi P. Morton, the nominee of the Congressional District, and speeches were also made by Judge Dittenhoefer, I. Albert Englehart, and others. Mr. Charles H. Wilson opened the proceedings by nominating Mr. M. M. Vail as Chairman of the meeting. He then presented a list of Vice Presidents, which included the names of George Opdyke, A. B. Cornell, Salem H. Wales, I. Albert Englehart, Elliot F. Shepard, Solon B. Smith, Jacob Hess, Sinclair Tousey, and others.

The Chairman, after a few remarks, introduced Mr. Levi P. Morton, who was warmly received. Mr. Morton briefly returned thanks for the honor which had been done him in offering him the Republican Congressional nomination of the district. He was not a politician, he said, but a man of business. He believed the Republican Party had a right to command his services, and he promised his best efforts to protect the interests of his fellow-citizens. The country had been passing through a period of great trial, but he believed that with the feeling of security which would come of the election of the Republican candidate, it would start upon a new era of prosperity. That the financial policy of the Republican Administration tended toward permanent prosperity, no candid man would deny. The country wanted, above all things, a sound currency, a definite policy of resumption at a definite time. Because the Republicans had such a policy he was a Republican, and was in favor of the honest payment of gold in 1879. [Applause.]

Mr. John E. Flagler reported a preamble and series of resolutions heartily indorsing the nominations and platform of the Cincinnati Convention, and also the nominations of Edwin D. Morgan for Governor and Sherman S. Rogers for Lieutenant Governor. The resolutions also declared that all history and experience contained the admonition that when a nation or a people so far forget themselves and their duty to coming generations as to intrust their national, State and Municipal affairs to a party tainted to the extent of a majority thereof, or to any extent, with treason or disloyalty to the Constitution and flag, the seeds of dissolution and decay had evidently taken root. The resolutions were adopted by acclamation.

Gen. Sickles was then introduced. He first congratulated the candidate for Congress, Hon. Levi P. Morton, who, he said, had not sought the honor. The honor had sought him and had found him. Belonging to a class of citizens too frequently overlooked, he recalled to his mind the time when it was their pride to be represented in Congress by the best citizens of the country, and he was glad to see that that Congressional district proposed to return to the better days of the Republic. The Republican Party, he proceeded, had been in power in this country for fifteen years, because it was right. The Democratic Party had failed to gain power because it had been wrong. Had it then, he asked, done anything lately to commend itself to the confidence of the people of the country? He challenged anybody to point out a worse governed city than New-York had been under Democratic rule. The Democratic Party undertook to divide the Union, took out of it ten Southern States, and organized a Democratic Administration under Mr. Jefferson Davis. Every man in the Cabinet was a Democrat; every man in the Congress was a Democrat; every man in the Army who went there willingly was a Democrat, and all of them living to-day were Tilden men. Was there anybody in the country who wanted to trust that party for four years, to illustrate the principles which had been carried out at Montgomery under Mr. Jefferson Davis. Such a man would not, in his judgment, be a wise man; he much doubted if he could be a loyal man. Gen. Sickles then reviewed the career of Mr. Tilden, scouting the idea of his being a reformer. Let him, he said, first reform his own party. Until he could do that he did not believe that he would be able to reform the Republican Party. No doubt the Republicans had made some mistakes. He thought their greatest mistake was that they had not advanced with more rapid steps toward specie payments. The way, however, to remedy that was not to elect Tilden, who would take no steps in that direction, but to elect Hayes, who was pledged to resumption. Mr. Tilden's pretense of having saved the State nearly $7,000,000, his fraudulent income returns, his manipulation of bankrupt railroad concerns, and his action during the war were exposed in detail, and in conclusion Gen. Sickles exhorted his hearers to work strenuously to secure the election of the Republican candidate.

Mr. Englehart, Judge Dittenhoefer, and other speakers followed. Some spirited Republican campaign songs were also sung in the course of the meeting.

THE CAMPAIGN IN NEW-JERSEY.

LARGE REPUBLICAN MEETING IN TRENTON—SPEECHES BY GEN. FRYE, OF MAINE, AND CAPT. RICKS, OF OHIO.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TRENTON, Oct. 31.—A large and appreciative audience filled Taylor's Opera-house to-night to hear Hon. William P. Frye, of Maine, and Capt. A. J. Ricks, of Ohio, for ten years a resident of Tennessee, on the issues of the day. Gen. Frye spoke with very great force and eloquence, and produced a marked effect. Capt. Ricks presented the Southern claims question and the temper of the South with equal force. The meeting was a great success. Trenton promises a large vote, and Republicans are confident of carrying the State.

DISHEARTENED DEMOCRATS—THEIR MEETING IN PASSAIC A FAILURE—REPUBLICANS CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PASSAIC, Oct. 31.—The Democrats tried to wake the enthusiasm which their speakers failed to call forth in, Whitehead's Lyceum Hall this evening, by bringing forward a woman with a squeaky voice to sing a ribald song. She was followed by a Hollander who addressed the meeting in Dutch, and succeeded in nearly dispersing it before he closed, as there were only a baker's dozen present who could understand him. This was meant to draw the thunder from the Holland Republican meeting which is called for Thursday night, but it was a perfect failure. Just before the meeting some boys amused themselves by breaking pickets, unhinging gates in the neighborhood, and when chased found refuge in the crowd around the door of the hall. The Democrats say it was only Hallow Eve sport, but others think it was done by the "Roosters." Thursday evening the Holland Republicans will hold a meeting. Friday evening there will be a grand rally of Republicans in Retlinger's Hall, with addresses from Hon. John Hill and others, and on Saturday there will be a grand Republican torchlight parade. Passaic will be heard from one week hence for Hayes and Wheeler.

A REPUBLICAN BANNER SET ON FIRE.

THE FLAMES EXTINGUISHED BY A POLICEMAN—A REWARD OF $100 OFFERED FOR THE DETECTION OF THE CULPRITS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PRINCETON, Oct. 31.—About 1:30 o'clock this morning an attempt was made to burn the large and beautiful Hayes and Wheeler banner which is suspended over Nassau street in front of the Republican Head-quarters. Fortunately the watchman arrived in time to extinguish the flames and prevent its total destruction, though it was nearly half destroyed. The officer caught sight of one of the escaping fellows and discharged his revolver at him, but without effect. Great indignation prevails among the townspeople and students. Many think that it is the result of a long-matured plan on the post of a few Democratic students, to whom the banner has always been an eyesore. Others insinuate that it was done by Republicans, with the deliberate purpose of casting suspicion on the Democrats. But the most plausible explanation seems to be that it was the work of a few Freshmen, influenced, possibly, by partisan feeling, but more probably by a desire to do something smart. Four years ago a similar attempt was made upon a Greeley and Brown banner. The Chairman of the Republican Executive Committee has offered a reward of $100 for the detection of the culprits.

THE CAMPAIGN IN NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

RESULTS OF A CAREFUL CANVASS OF THE STATE—CERTAIN INDICATIONS OF A REPUBLICAN VICTORY—SMALL TACTICS OF THE DEMOCRATS—THEY VIRTUALLY ACKNOWLEDGE DEFEAT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 31.—Information received here from the most authentic sources shows beyond doubt that the Republicans can carry New-Hampshire by the customary majority. A careful canvass has been made of every town in the State, and the most satisfactory results have been obtained. Col. Daniel Hall, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, makes a statement as follows: "We may not be able to get out as large a vote as we did last Winter, for we cannot get all our voters home; but what we lose in that respect we shall gain in the Temperance vote, the larger portion of which will be thrown in our favor. We do not know exactly what the Democrats are doing. They have without doubt what we have not, aid from outside. Their tactics are shrewd, and to a certain extent, disreputable. Whenever we announce a public meeting, they will at once get up a torchlight processiyn in the same town, and persistently march up and down by the hall, thus disturbing our speakers and drawing off the crowd who would otherwise be with us. Still, our meetings have been very successful and spirited. There is no dissension in our ranks. We will poll our full vote to within a very small figure, and those of our people who do not vote with us will not come out at all. New-Hampshire has been left to our care, and we will see that it does right."

Gov. Cheney says: "I have not the slightest doubt of our success. A week ago I was not so sanguine; it did not look quite so bright; but now we can see our way clear. It takes some effort to get our people up to the fighting pitch. We had an exhaustive campaign last year, and the tension on the public mind was great. Then there was a reaction, and it required vigorous work to so stretch the strings again that we could confidently count on the old enthusiasm. As to majorities, I cannot say that we can hope for so large a vote as we had last year; but on the other hand, our opponents are likely to fall off quite as much. Then, we have the advantage of the Temperance vote, three-fourths of which will be with us, so that on the whole our majority may be as large as that of the last State election. The Democrats are making a very effective campaign, and we are unable just yet to get at their actual strength. They undoubtedly have aid from outside, which we have not. It is always unsafe to underestimate the strength of your opponents. They turn out largely in torchlight processions, and are thoroughly equipped. The money must come from some place, and I hardly think it was collected in the State. There is no doubt that we will carry the election."

The Democrats, on the other hand, claim to be able to carry the State, but do not talk very confidently. They deny having any money to spend, but there is no doubt that they are following a "still hunt." Mr. Butterfield, the Secretary of the State Committee, stated that they were not prepared to claim the State, but he would not be surprised if they carried it by a small majority. They had no evidence of a single defection from the ranks; the party was thoroughly united on all the issues of the campaign, and had the advantage of confidence in the result of the national contest, which their opponents had not. He expected that the full vote would come out if the day was pleasant, and if so, there was no reason why they could not gain the victory. From every town and city came assurances of enthusiasm and confidence. Important gains were reported from nearly every important centre, and he had yet to hear of a single voter of the party going over to the other side. He admitted that the circulation of the war claims had hurt them, as the property owners were afraid of raids on the Treasury.

CONNECTICUT REPUBLICANS.

GRAND DEMONSTRATION IN HARTFORD—A PROCESSION OF 5,000 TORCHES—THE ENTHUSIASM OF THE POPULACE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Oct 31.—The grandest political demonstration seen in Connecticut since the memorable days of the first Lincoln campaign is taking place to-night, by the Republican organizations of Hartford and many other places. There are over five thousand torches in line, and twenty thousand people at least are upon the principal streets. The illuminations of public and private buildings are very extensive and beautiful, and the enthusiasm of the populace is intense. The line extends over a distance of more than a mile and a half, and it will not reach the end of its route till about midnight.

DEMOCRATIC MOB VIOLENCE.

VIRGINIA REPUBLICANS ASSAULTED BY REBEL DEMOCRATS—HOW TILDEN'S FOLLOWERS TREATED RESPECTABLE CITIZENS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 31.—A large and enthusiastic Republican meeting was held in Oxford Hall last night. M. D. Ball, of Alexandria; Hon. James Segar, and John Dezendorf spoke. The Democrats disturbed the meeting, and at its close attacked the Republicans. Bricks were thrown at the stage while Mr. Segar was speaking. In the street frames pistols were fired and clubs were used. Mr. Dezendorf was badly hurt on the head, and required medical assistance. The Police were not equal to the occasion and the ruffians escaped unpunished.

SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION IN MISSOURI.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31.—E. T. Allen, who was appointed a few days ago Chief Supervisor of Elections for the Eastern District of Missouri by Judge Treat, of the United States Court, presented a list of Supervisors to the court to-day, which was accepted by Judge Treat, and commissions will be issued to them to-morrow.

EXPLOSION IN A PENNSYLVANIA MINE.

POTTSVILLE, Oct. 31.—An explosion of fire-damp occurred last night in the Wadesville colliery, near St. Clair. Three men named Dormandy, Ryley, and Welsh, were shockingly burned, but it is thought not fatally. The damage done was considerable, and it will be several days before work in the mine can be resumed.

THE CONFEDERATE DEBT.

LAST MEETING OF DAVIS' CABINET.

INTERESTING READING IN THE LIGHT OF TO-DAY—WHAT SOUTHERN MEMBERS OF TILDEN'S CABINET WOULD BE LIKELY TO PROPOSE—DEMOCRATIC CONGRESSMAN REAGAN'S VIEWS, AS REBEL POSTMASTER GENERAL, OF THE STATUS OF THE REBEL DEBT—REMARKABLE NOTIONS ABOUT TERMS OF PEACE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Pending the negotiations between Gens. Sherman and Johnston for the surrender of the rebel army, commanded by the last-named officer, the terms of surrender were presented to Jefferson Davis, who was at the time, with the members of his Cabinet, flying by rail from Richmond. Davis convened his Cabinet in a freight car at Charlotte, N. C., and in submitting Sherman's terms requested each member of his Cabinet to state his views on the subject in writing. The several papers thus submitted by these gentlemen were among the property captured by the Federal Army, and are now on file in the War Department among the rebel archives. John H. Reagan, member of the present Congress, from Texas, was at that time Confederate Postmaster-General, and submitted his views at great length to his chief. The conclusion of Mr. Reagan's letter on the terms of surrender was devoted to the payment of the rebel war debt by the United States Government, and will be read with peculiar interest at this time. The letter, like those of his colleagues in Davis's Cabinet, was dated Charlotte, April 22, 1865, and concludes as follows:

Nothing is said in the agreement about the public debt and the disposition of our public property, beyond the turning over of the arms to the State Arsenals. In the final adjustment we should endeavor to secure provisions for the auditing of the debt of the Confederacy, and for its payment, in common with the war debt of the United States. We may ask this on the ground that we did not seek this war, but only sought peaceful separation to secure our people and States from the effects of unconstitutional encroachments by the other States; and because, on the principles of equity, allowing that both parties had acted in good faith, and gone to war on a misunderstanding which admitted of no other solution, and now agree to a reconciliation and to a burial of the past, it would be unjust to compel our people to assist in the payment of the war debt of the United States, and for them to refuse to allow such of the revenues as we might contribute to be applied to the payment of our creditors. If it should be said that this is a liberality never exercised by the conqueror to the conquered, the answer is that if the object of the pacification is to restore the Union in good faith, and to reconcile the people to each other—to restore confidence and faith and prosperity and homogeneity—then it is of the first importance that the terms of reconciliation should be based on entire equity, and that no just ground of grief or complaint should be left to either party. And to both parties, looking not only to the present but to the interest of future generations, the amount of money which would be involved, though large, would be as nothing when compared with a reconciliation entirely equitable, which should leave no sting to honor, and no sense of wrong to rankle in the memories of the people, and lay the foundation for new difficulties and for future wars. It is to this feature, it seems to me, that greatest attention should be given by both sides. It will be of the highest importance to all, for the present as well as for the future, that the frankness, sincerity, and justice of both parties shall be as conspicuous in the adjustment of past difficulties, as their courage and endurance have been during the war, if we would make peace on a basis which would be satisfactory, and which might be rendered perpetual. In any event provision should be made which will authorize the Confederate authorities to sell the public property remaining on hand and to apply the proceeds, as far as they will go, to the payment of our public liabilities, or for such other disposition as may be found advisable. But if the terms of this agreement should be rejected or so modified by the Government of the United States as to refuse a recognition of the right of local self-government and our political rights and rights of person and property, or as to refuse amnesty for past participation in this war, then it will our duty to continue the struggle as best we can, however unequal it may be, as it would be better and more honorable to waste our lives and substance in such a contest, than to yield both to the mercy of a remorseless conqueror. I am, with great respect, your excellency's obedient sevant.

JOHN H. REAGAN,
To the President C. S. A. Post Master Gen'l.

CHARACTER OF THE INDORSERS OF TILDEN'S LETTER—NOTORIOUS REBEL CLAIMS PRESENTED BY THE STATE OF MISSOURI—HOW THE GUERILLA RAIDS OF BLACKBURN, A TILDEN INDORSER, WERE STOPPED IN MISSOURI.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The State of Missouri has on file in the Treasury Department, in the office of the Third Auditor, war claims growing out of the rebellion amounting to $2,382,132 67. These claims, with the vouchers, were filed Dec. 21, 1874, the State authorities requesting that they be placed on the file until Congress shall decide to take them up for examination and payment. Among these claims are over three hundred of the class which Gov. Tilden professes he would not approve if elected President of the United States, and these deserve special notice.

During the rebellion, loyal citizens of Missouri were made the victims of attack and pillage by bands of guerillas, headed by such leaders as Joseph C. S. Blackburn, now a Democratic member of Congress from Kentucky, and whose signature was attached to a paper published last week indorsing Gov. Tilden's utterances on the non-payment of rebel claims. While on these predatory excursions, the guerillas never made the mistake of descending upon the disloyal Missourians for tribute, the unerring certainty of their movements showing they were guided to the houses of Union men through information furnished by those who symphathised with the rebellion. In these incursions the guerillas would take from Union men money, cattle, forage, and such supplies as might be within reach, and frequently burned their barns and standing crops. In order to put a stop to these depredations, and knowing that the guerillas were guided by information furnished by the disloyal element, Major-Gen. Schofield, who was in command of that department, in the early part of 1864 issued a general order assessing upon disloyal persons residing in the neighborhood where such depredations were committed, for the relief of the sufferers, the full value of all damages sustained by Union men by visits from guerilla bands. Gen. Pleasanton, who succeeded Gen. Schofield in command of the department, continued the system of assessment, which finally resulted in putting a stop to the depredations.

An act was passed by the Legislature of Missouri, and approved by the Governor, March 19, 1874, entitled "An act to audit, adjust, and pay the claims of the militia of Missouri and of citizens for supplies furnished to the Army in active service." Commissioners were appointed under this act to collect claims against the United States, the Commissioners issuing to each claimant who proved his claim a certificate for the amount of the claim, the certificate specifying that the amount allowed "is not payable until after the claim has been presented to the United States Government, and the amount allowed and paid to the State." Under this act the disloyal persons upon whom assessments were made by the military authorities presented their receipts, and in every instance the Commissioners allowed the full amount paid under the military assessment, and issued the certificate of the State, stamped with its broad seal, as the basis of a claim against the United States. This class of claims forms a considerable portion of the war claims filed by the State of Missouri, and at the last session of Congress earnest efforts were made by her Senators and Representatives to have them allowed. No proof of the loyalty of this class of claimants was required by the Missouri authorities, and it is very certain no such proof could be offered, the existence of the receipt given by the military authorities for the assessment made furnishing positive evidence that every man holding such a certificate in his own name was an active participant in, or furnished aid and comfort to, the rebellion. In the event of the Democrats gaining possession of the legislative and executive departments of the Government, these claims and all others of which they are the representatives, would undoubtedly be allowed, and whatever may be Mr. Tilden's intentions now, he would be, as President of the United States—owing his election to the votes of those owning and pressing such claims—forced to approve legislation providing for their full payment.

THE BALTIMORE REPEATERS.

THE SHERIFF ANXIOUS TO GIVE THEM A CLEAR FIELD IN NOVEMBER—A SCHEME TO ARREST UNITED STATES DEPUTY MARSHALS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Two citizens of Baltimore have sent to the Department of Justice a letter stating:

"It is currently reported that the Sheriff of this city, through his deputies, is contemplating the arrest of a large number of United States Deputy Marshals on or before next Tuesday, with the evident intention of weakening the force of the power and presence of those officers on election day, and that the fear of insufficient protection from the United States Government in case of the arrest of the said Deputy Marshals has produced a a profound sensation among the Republicans, which makes it exceedingly difficult to procure a sufficient number in some localities of volunteers for the position of Deputy Marshals on election day."

The department, having nothing before it excepting the above report, has taken no action on the letter, nor is it supposed that the Sheriff would place himself in antagonism with the United States authorities, as the latter would, it is inferred, vigorously resist such proceedings.

THE SHERIFF DENIES.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 31.—Sheriff Mills, of this city, says the report that he intends to arrest the United States Deputy Marshals on or before election day is utterly without foundation. On the contrary, he will assist the United States Marshal with a posse comitatus, if called upon.

TERRIBLE RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

SERIOUS DISASTER ON THE DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA AND WESTERN ROAD—A CENTENNIAL EXCURSION TRAIN WRECKED—SEVERAL PERSONS KILLED AND A NUMBER INJURED.

SCRANTON, Oct. 31.—A fearful accident occurred on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad last night at a small station known as Lehigh Summit, on the Pocono Mountains, twenty miles from Scranton. The regular afternoon train to New-York and Philadelphia, consisting of seventeen passenger coaches, drawn by three engines, had about twelve hundred passengers on board, principally bound for the Centennial Exhibition. The train was two hours behind time, and, reaching the summit shortly after 8 o'clock, stopped to take water from the tank. While there a heavy coal train, drawn by three engines, ran into the rear of the passenger train, telescoping two of the cars through and through and breaking five others. The scenes that ensued were heart-rending, although by a most miraculous circumstance the number of killed is small. The Scranton Republican this morning gives the following list of dead and wounded:

Wounded—Truman Seymour, of Rome, N. Y.; Cornelius Gay, Preble, N. Y.; Lena Dowall, Hamilton, N. Y.; Mrs. Duffy, Hamilton, N. Y.; Mrs. D. R. Pierce, Hamilton, N. Y.; John Parker, of Hamilton, N. Y.; Mrs. Abbott, of Hamilton, N. Y.; Mrs. A. L. Tuttle, of Columbus, N. Y.; Mrs. W. S. Parker, of North Brookfield, N. Y.; Frank Duffy, of Morrisonville, N. Y.; Edward Brainard, Richfield Springs, N. Y.; Albert Thomas, Shelburne, N. Y.; Hugh Reilly, Columbus, Chenango County, N. Y.; Enos Parker, Morrisonville, N. Y.; Mrs. D. L. Norton, Columbus, N. Y.; Miss Maggie Perry, Watertown, N. Y.; Mrs. Armor, Morrisonville, N. Y.; Mr. Armor, Morrisonville, N. Y.; J. R. Smith, Greene County, N. Y.; E. Jackson, Richfield Springs, N. Y.; Mrs. Latimer, Sodus, N. Y.; making in all two killed outright and twenty-five severely injured.

The wounded were conveyed to the Goldsboro' Hotel, where several surgeons from Scranton attended their injuries. Mr. Seymour, Mr. Gay, Mrs. Dowall, and Mrs. Pierce are not expected to recover. A passenger car caught fire in the wreck and was consumed upon the track. The dead were conveyed to Scranton this morning at 2 o'clock. The passengers on the wrecked train were transferred to a special train under the direction of Superintendent Halstead and proceeded on their journey at midnight.

Cornelius Gay, of Preble, N. Y., one of the victims of the disaster, died of his injuries at Gouldsboro this forenoon. His remains were conveyed to this city. The bodies of Deacon Bragg and D. Pierce are also here. The bodies were enclosed in caskets and consigned this afternoon to their late homes. Eight of the wounded persons passed through this city from Gouldsboro to-day en route for their homes in Madison County, N. Y. The balance of the wounded, about twenty in all, are still cared for at the Simons House by a corps of Scranton surgeons and their attendants. The death of Mrs. Brown, who was unconscious all of to-day, is expected momentarily, and also that of Mrs. J. L. Tuttle. The majority of the injured are in a hopeful condition.

A THIEF LEAPS FROM AN EXPRESS TRAIN.

UTICA, Oct. 31.—Harry Hardaker, an English thief under five indictments for burglary in this city, and who has been a fugitive for eighteen months, jumped from the first Atlantic express train near Oriskany to-night, and is probably killed. He was going through the cars, looking for water, in charge of Detective Wheeler, of Utica, who had arrested him unexpectedly in Syracuse. The train was moving forty miles an hour.

A CONSCINCE-STRIKEN THIEF.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 31.—During the yellow fever empidemic here in 1873, George Lambeth, a messenger of the Southern Express Company, on the Mississippi and Tennessee Railroad, stole a package containing $4,0[illegible]0, and fled. To-day he walked into the Express Office here, and surrendered himself. He was committed for trial.

THE COUNTY REPUBLICANS.

GEN. JOHN A. DIX FOR MAYOR.

STRONG AND POPULAR CANDIDATES SELECTED FOR THE MINOR OFFICES—FULL PROCEEDINGS OF THE LAST MEETING OF THE CONVENTION—SKETCHES OF THE SEVERAL CANDIDATES.

The final meeting of the Republican County Convention, at Republican Hall, last night, was one of the largest and most harmonious in the annals of City politics. The best of feeling prevailed, and but one purpose was apparent throughout the proceedings—to submit the best attainable ticket for the support of the voters of this City. Long before the Convention was called to order, it was generally understood that Gen. Dix had consented that his name should be used for the office of Mayor, a piece of intelligence that was everywhere hailed with satisfaction. The universal feeling was that with Dix for a standard-bearer, and other well-known and tried Republicans for the additional local offices, the Republicans of the City would poll the heaviest vote ever cast by them. Shortly after 8 o'clock the convention was called to order by District Attorney Phelps. Mr. Willard Bullard acting as Secretary. After the calling of the roll, Hon. John D. Lawson, from the Committee of twenty-three on Nominations, reported the following ticket:

For Mayor—John A. Dix.
For Sheriff—William H. Gedney.
For County Clerk—Thomas Murphy.
For Surrogate—Charles A. Peabody.
For Justice of the Superior Court—Henry J. Scudder.
For Justice of the Marine Court—Louis S. Goebel.
For Coroners—Robert A. Barry, William H. Stiner, Louis Naumann.
For Aldermen at Large—Joseph C. Pinckney, Rufus B. Cowing.

The mention of the name of Gen. Dix was the signal for an outburst of cheering, which lasted several minutes. The names of Messrs. Gedney, Murphy, and the other candidates were also received with applause. When the reading of the report was concluded, Col. Charles S. Spencer moved the nomination of the entire ticket presented. His reference to the public spirit and self-sacrifice of Gen. Dix in consenting to run at this juncture was a deserved tribute to the gallant old soldier, and was received with enthusiastic cheering. Mr. Gedney, the Colonel continued, was a resident of the old Ninth Ward, and he trusted that it would not damage him in the eyes of his fellow-citizens to know that he was born in this country. [Applause.] Mr. Thomas Murphy [renewed cheering] was a gentleman who had devoted his time and the greater part of his fortune to the maintenance of the Republican Party in this City. Mr. Peabody, the nominee for Surrogate, had formerly sat upon the bench of the Supreme Court, and was in every way capable of discharging the responsible duties of the office to which they now proposed to elect him, while Hon. Henry J. Scudder, the candidate for Justice of the Superior Court, had already served in the lower house of Congress with credit to himself and his constituency. A satisfactory representative of the German element had been found in Mr. Louis S. Goebel for Justice of the Marine Court, and the candidates for the remaining offices were gentlemen who were thoroughly worthy of the confidence reposed in them. The remarks of Col. Spencer were received throughout with great enthusiasm, and the motion to nominate the full ticket reported was carried by a unanimous vote. After the adoption of resolutions indorsing the ticket presented by Mr. H. Charles Ullman, and the passage of a further resolution empowering the Committee on Nominations to fill any vacancy that might occur before the day of election, the convention adjourned. The following are the proceedings in detail:

THE PROCEEDINGS.

Precisely at 8 o'clock District Attorney Benjamin K. Phelps, Chairman of the convention, rapped for order, and the Secretary read the names of the delegates. The minutes of the last meeting having been read, the report of the Special Committee on Nominations was called.

Mr. John D. Lawson, the Chairman of the committee, said: The committee of twenty-three on nomination, appointed by this convention at its meeting on Wednesday last, have directed me to report the result of their deliberations. The committee, after its organization, addressed itself first to the consideration of the character of the nominees that they should present for your acceptance. After a careful and deliberative consideration of that question, it was determined to present a straight Republican ticket, [applause,] and in the performance of that duty they have endeavored to select from the members of the party gentlemen well known and of high character. In doing so they have selected as your candidate for Mayor, and with his full assent, that honorable and veteran patriot, Gen. John A. Dix, [cheers;] for Sheriff, William H. Gedney; for County Clerk, Thomas Murphy; for Surrogate, Charles A. Peabody; for Judge of the Superior Court, Henry J. Scudder; for Judge of the Marine Court, Louis S. Goebel; for Coroners, Robert A. Barry, William H. Stiner, and Louis Naumann, and for Aldermen at Large, Gen. Joseph C. Pinckney and Rufus B. Cowing.

The names of the candidates presented to the convention were received with cheers, and Mr. Charles S. Spencer rose to move their adoption. He said: I move, Sir, that the nominations reported by the committee be adopted and made by this convention. And, Mr. Chairman, I congratulate this convention and I congratulate the Republican Party that in this contest there is to be on the part of the Republican Party no morganatic marriage with any fragment of the Democracy. [Applause.] I believe that the fact is at last recognized that late, but not too late, the Republican Party of the City of New-York has awakened to the consciousness of the great truth that, in the maintenance of its organization it is necessary not only to vindicate principle but to nominate men believing in principle; and I believe that the intelligence that the Republican Party of the City of New-York has nominated a ticket composed wholly of Republicans will give new faith and confidence and energy to the Republicans of the State and of the country. The names of the men that are presented are almost as familiar to us as household words. At the head of the ticket is John A. Dix. [Cheers.] He has already lived beyond the years allotted to man; he has lived an honorable and useful and busy life. He has filled very many offices of honor and responsibility and trust; his record is a part of the record which makes up the history of the country; but in no part of his life has he deserved better of his country than now, when in this Presidential campaign, in the midst of the great issues before us, he has consented to head our Municipal ticket, in the hope that he may aid us in the salvation of the country, and when the history of John A. Dix is written, there will be no page of it more brightly illuminated than that which records his consent to become our candidate to-day. His sun, in the ordinary course of events, is setting, but by this self-sacrifice, he has spread its horizon all over with a golden glory. Mr. Chairman, your candidate for Sheriff is William H. Gedney. He has represented the old Knickerbocker Ninth in the Legislature. He represented it in the Board of Aldermen, and I don't conceive that it can be made an objection to him that he was born in the United States. He is presented to the people of this City as an honest and a reliable man, with a record which cannot be questioned. I, Sir, have not any language in which to convey my appreciation of the services rendered to the Republican Party of the country, and more especially to the Republican Party of this City, by Thomas Murphy. [Applause.] He has given his time, and he has sacrificed almost literally his fortune, in the service of the Republican party, and that Republican that refuses to vote for Thomas Murphy does not deserve the name. For the office of Surrogate, Mr. Chairman, the committee has presented to you the name of Charles A. Peabody, a gentleman that has already served a term as a Justice of the Supreme Court of this State—a gentleman who nobly and faithfully discharged the duties of a high judicial office in the City of New Orleans—a gentleman who, if elected to the office, as I believe he will be, will honorably and properly discharge its duties, and I shall expect to-morrow to see my personal and able friend the editor of the New-York Sun place the name of Charles A. Peabody as candidate for Surrogate, at the head of its columns. For the offices of Aldermen at Large we have presented you the names of two well-known citizens, one of them, Mr. Cowing, an honorable and recognized member of the Bar, and a faithful and true Republican, and the other, Gen. Pinckney, who stood by the cradle when the babe christened the Republican Party was first placed in it. They have been always true and always faithful, and it is a source of congratulation to us that whatever else may happen we shall certainly elect them to the offices for which they are nominated. For Justice of the Superior Court this committee has presented to you the name of a gentleman who has already honorably represented an adjoining district in the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, a resident of this City, a member of the Bar, deservedly of the highest standing, Mr. Henry J. Scudder; and for Justice of the Marine Court I am proud and happy to say that the German element has finally been recognized. We have presented to you as a candidate for that office the name of an honorable and high-minded gentleman, Mr. Louis S. Goebel; and finally for the offices of Coroner we have nominated for your support the names of three good men. Mr. Stiner we all know and we all appreciate; Dr. Naumann has already served one term as Coroner in this City, and speaking of the last named upon the ticket, I seem to grow younger, and to remember the time when, boys of fifteen, we together entered the same class in college. The Mayor is important, the Sheriff is important, all these offices are important; in the discharge of the duty delegated to me I have spoken freely of all, but I am very proud and happy to say that the third candidate for Coroner is my old Sigma Phi class-mate in college—an expression well known in the Orient—an able, honest, brave, popular, and successful physician, Dr. Robert A. Barry. And now, Mr. Chairman, these candidates are presented to the people of the City of New-York and to this convention for its approbation. I hope that this ticket will be adopted. I hope that the Republican party will to-night take a new departure; I hope at no time in the future will it be found affiliating with antagonistic principles; I hope from to-night will date a period when the Republican party will find its own representatives within itself, and that this ticket and that our State and National ticket will be elected, and one week from to-night we will meet together and congratulate each other that by the grand triumph of the Republican Party this country is assured a future of honor and of glory. [Cheers.]

The motion of Mr. Spencer for the adoption of the committee's report was then put to the convention and carried amidst cheers. On the motion of Senator Lent, the Committee on Nominations was instructed with power to fill any vacancies if any should occur.

Mr. H. Charles Ullman proposed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the thanks of this convention are due to Hon. Chester A. Arthur and the gentlemen composing the Nominating Committee, for the brave, determined, and unselfish manner in which they have discharged the duty assigned to them. That we recognize in their action the true spirit of patriotism and an unflinching determination that the people shall no longer be compelled to make a choice of evils in deciding for whom to cast their ballots.

Resolved, That in presenting the names of the eminent citizens who have been nominated to the voters of New-York, we call upon all good citizens, regardless of party affiliations or political opinion, to unite with us in electing, by an overwhelming majority the ticket presented, and thereby prove to the world that the virtuous masses of the Republic may be depended upon to rescue the Government from the hands of the despoiler, be they oath bound societies or political demagogues, and restore to the people their right of self-government, that by their efforts the Government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from off the earth, but shall be handed down to succeeding generations in the vigor and purity in which it was received from our forefathers.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted and the convention adjourned amid cheers for the candidates nominated.

SKETCH OF THE CANDIDATES.

GEN. JOHN A. DIX.

Gen. John A. Dix, the Republican nominee for Mayor, was born in Boscowen, N. H., July 24, 1798, and is consequently seventy-eight years of age. He entered West Point in 1812, but soon left it to take part in the war of 1812-15, having, in 1813, received an appointment as Ensign in the Fourteenth United States Infantry. The following year he was promoted to Second Lieutenant. In 1818 he was made a First Lieutenant of Artillery, and in 1819 was assigned to duty as Aide de Camp to Gen. Brown, then Commander in Chief. In the year 1825 he was promoted to the grade of Captain of Artillery, serving in that capacity until 1828, when he resigned from the army and entered the legal profession at Cooperstown, N. Y. In 1830 Gov. Throop appointed him Adjutant General of the State. In January, 1833, he was elected Secretary of State and filled the office with honor. By virtue of his office he was Superintendent of the Common-Schools, a member of the Canal Board, and one of the Commissioners of the Canal Fund; the last two bodies having charge of the vast works of the internal improvement of New-York State, and also of its complicated financial affairs. In 1842 he was elected to the Assembly from Albany County, and in 1845 he was selected to fill a vacancy in the United States Senate, caused by the election of Silas Wright as Governor. He remained in the Senate until March 4, 1849, taking an active and distinguished part in the discussions of that exciting period. In 1852 he was selected by President Pierce for Secretary of State, but declined in favor of Gov. Marcy. He afterward accepted as a temporary employment, in 1853, the post of Assistant United States Treasurer in New-York City, but resigned soon after, and remained inactive until 1860 when he was appointed Postmaster in New-York City. When the Southern officials deserted President Buchanan, on the announcement of secession, Gen. Dix was called to the Cabinet as Secretary of the Treasury. It was while holding this office that he wrote his famous dispatch: "If any one attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot." In the Summer of 1861 he was appointed Brigadier General, and subsequently made a General of Volunteers, being placed in command of the Federal forces at Baltimore; previous to that he made a great speech at the loyal meeting in Union square. While in command at Baltimore, he made a strategic movement by which the eastern shores of Maryland were wrested from the rebels. Gen. Dix was subsequently placed in command of Fortress Monroe, and in 1863 performed one of the best manœuvres of the campaign. In June he sent a portion of his command to the White House, at the junction of the Pamunkey with the York River. In this position he threatened both Richmond and the communications of Gen. Lee, who was advancing along the Peninsula. This movement defeated all of Lee's plans, and so frightened Jeff. Davis that he wrote an affecting letter to Gen. Lee, saying that it had "rendered him more anxious for the city than at any former time." In July the Department of North Carolina was added to that of Virginia, and both places under the command of Gen. Dix, until he was transferred to the command of the Department of the East. At the close of the war Gen. Dix resigned his position in the Army, and was temporary Chairman of the National Union Convention in Philadelphia, Aug. 14, 1866. In the Autumn of that year, he was nominated by the President United States Minister to France, which position he accepted, being presented to the Emperor in January, 1867.

In 1872 he was elected to Governor of this State by nearly 53,000 majority, and during his two years in the office instituted many reforms, the credit for which Tilden is now endeavoring to lay claim to. Gen. Dix has been the author of several very valuable works, including the Resources of the City of New-York, published in 1827, and the laws relating to common-schools, issued in 1837. His speeches and public addresses were compiled in 1865 and form two handsome volumes of interesting reading.

HON. WILLIAM H. GEDNEY.

Hon. William H. Gedney, the candidate for Sheriff, is a native of Westchester County, but came to this city when quite young, and established his residence in the Ninth Ward, where he has lived ever since. He is fifty-three years of age, and a builder by occupation. He was School Trustee for fifteen years; was a member of the City Council in 1853, and of the Board of Aldermen in 1865—66. He was elected to the Assembly in 1874, and served one term.

HON. THOMAS MURPHY.

Hon. Thomas Murphy, the nominee for County Clerk, was born in Ireland, and is about fifty-two years old. He emigrated to this country at the age of ten, and was educated in the common schools of this City. For many years he was engaged in business as a hatter, and in 1861 was elected State Senator. He was appointed Collector of this Port by President Grant in 1869, and since his resignation of that position has not held office.

HON. CHARLES A. PEABODY.

Charles A. Peabody, the candidate for Surrogate, was born in New-Hampshire in 1815, and is consequently in the sixty-second year of his age. He bears his years, however, lightly, and few, on looking at the upright bearing of the man and his firm, elastic carriage, would suspect that more than three-score years have passed over his head. He entered Dartmouth College in his youth, and afterward was graduated from Harvard Law School. After his admission to the Bar, in 1840, he settled in this City, and devoted himself with untiring ardor to his profession, in which he attained not only success, but also an enviable reputation born of true ability and honesty. In 1859 he was appointed by Gov. E. D. Morgan to fill a vacancy on the Supreme Court Bench in this City, and discharged the duties of the office in such a manner as to win the regard and esteem of all with whom he was brought in contact. During the civil war he was appointed by President Lincoln Judge of the Provisional Court of Louisiana, and he served until the abolition of the court. Shortly after beginning his legal career, Mr. Peabody was the leading member of the firm of Peabody & Wynkoop. Of late years he has sustained the same relation to the firm of Peabody, Baker & Peabody. His judicial impartiality and freedom from bias were recognized in a flattering manner quite recently in two noteworthy instances. One of these was his appointment as one of the elisors to draw the special or struck jury in the six million dollar Tweed suit. The other was his selection as one of the committee to choose the members of the tribunal which investigated the charges against Charles O'Conor. Mr. Peabody has long been recognized among the members of his own profession as a lawyer of undoubted merit and unquestioned honesty, and his nomination will bring to him and the party he represents the support of all thinking, honest men, irrespective of party. As a man, Mr. Peabody is genial and companionable, and has won the regard of hosts of friends, who will only be too glad to help elevate him to the honorable office for which he has been made a candidate, and which he is so well fitted in every way to fill. His sympathetic and kindly nature, not created over, but rather made more tender by age, will find free and proper scope in the position for which he has been put in nomination, dealing as it does with the woes and wounds of affliction; while his judicial cast of mind and freedom from prejudice will enable him to hold the scales of justice with a firm and equal poise. In politics Mr. Peabody has been a stanch Republican ever since the organization of the party.

HON. HENRY J. SCUDDER.

Henry J. Scudder, the candidate for Judge of the Superior Court is a gentleman well known in the legal profession as the head of the firm of Scudder & Carter. He was born in Suffolk County in this State, and is about forty-eight years of age. He has practiced law for more than a quarter of a century, and has established an excellent reputation for ability and probity. His specialty is the department of Admiralty law, in which he has no superior in this State, and perhaps none in the whole country. He is also recognized as a very able practitioner in the other branches of his profession. He has taken very little active part in politics, but was elected to Congress in 1872 from the First District in this State, and is the only Republican who ever represented that district in the House of Representatives. Mr. Scudder is well spoken of by his professional brethren, and is recognized by all as an able and honest man.

LOUIS S. GOEBEL.

Louis S. Goebel, the candidate for Judge of the Marine Court, is a native of the City, and is now about thirty-five years of age. He attended the public schools of this City and the Free Academy, afterward known as the College of the City of New-York. He studied law at Columbia College Law School in this City. He was a candidate last year for the office of Civil Justice for the Fifth Judicial District and made an excellent run, receiving many votes in excess of the regular Republican ticket. This was in a great measure due to his popularity among the Germans, by whom he is very well liked, and among whom he numbers very many warm personal friends and clients.

DR. ROBERT A BARRY.

Dr. Robert A. Barry, one of the candidates for Coroner, is a native of this City, and fifty years of age. He is a graduate of the New-York College, and is a successful physician. He is a warm friend to educational interests, and has for fifteen years been a Trustee of the common school in the Seventeenth Ward.

WILLIAM H. STINER.

Mr. William H. Stiner, another of the candidates for Coroner, was born in this City, and is forty-two years of age. He received his education in the common-schools, and for twenty years was engaged in journalism. During the rebellion he was a newspaper correspondent. He was appointed Excise Commissioner by Mayor Havemeyer in November, 1874, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Commissioner Voorhis, and during his term of service distinguished himself by breaking up a large number of the low concert saloons in the lower part of the City.

DR. LOUIS NAUMANN.

Dr. Louis Naumann, the third candidate for Coroner, is a practicing physician and a successful druggist, having two stores in the City. He is of German descent, and fifty years of age. He was elected Coroner about fourteen years ago, since which time he has not held office. He is at present Chairman of the German Republican Central Committee.

GEN. JOSEPH C. PINCKNEY.

Gen. Joseph C. Pinckney, one of the candidates for Alderman at Large, is so widely known and esteemed as scarcely to need mention. He was born in this City, and is about fifty-two years of age. At the breaking out of the war he went into service as Colonel of the Sixth New-York Militia, afterward known as the Sixty-sixth New-York Volunteers. He served three years honorably, and returned as a Brigadier General, to which position he had been promoted for gallantry and faithfulness to duty. Prior to his military career he had served as Clerk of the Bureau of Arrears of Taxes in this City, under Controller Robert T. Haws. He was afterward Clerk of the Board of Aldermen, and is at present an Alderman representing the Sixth District. He bears an unsullied reputation and has always been a consistent Republican in politics.

RUFUS B. COWING.

Mr. Rufus B. Cowing, the other nominee for Alderman at Large, is a native of Chautauqua County, in this State, is thirty-six years of age, and was a graduate of Harvard College. He is a lawyer by profession, and although he has been prominent in politics in his ward, has never held office. He ran for member of Assembly last year, and was defeated by 30 votes, having polled 4,000. He is President of the Twenty-first District Republican Association, and was a delegate to the last national and State Conventions from that district.

REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

The Fifth Assembly District Republican Convention met last night and renominated George W. Betts for Assembly.

The Republicans of the Seventh Congressional District nominated Wallace P. Broome for Member of Congress last evening. Mr. Broome is a merchant of many years' standing, a member of the Chamber of Commerce, and a life-long Republican withal.

Ferdinand Ehrhardt and Frederick Fink were nominated for Aldermen by the Republicans of the Sixth Senatorial District last evening.

The Republicans of the Eleventh District last night nominated Elliot C. Cowdin for Assembly.

The Republican Aldermanic Convention of the Sixth District last night nominated Ferdinand Erhardt and Frederick Finck for Aldermen.

J. C. Julius Langbein has been nominated by the Republicans of the Twenty-first District for Assembly, and Simeon E. Church in the Nineteenth District.

SUICIDE OF A VETERINARY SURGEON.

Arthur S. Copeman, a prominent veterinary surgeon, committed suicide last evening at his residence, No. 63 West Thirty-seventh street, by shooting himself in the mouth with a pistol. The deceased was sixty-three years of age and had amassed a large fortune by the practice of his profession. For several years past he had been suffering from severe nervous headaches, and during last Summer he took a trip to Europe for the benefit of his health, returning home about six weeks ago. He did not derive the benefit he expected from his tour, and became very much depressed in spirits, particularly as on his return he found his wife sick. Yesterday he was suffering severely from headache and remarked to his son that he "could not stand it much longer; he would rather kill himself." Between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon he left his office, which is situated in the basement of his residence, and entered the parlor, where he met his niece, Florence, to whom he complained of feeling very unwell. He then went up to his bed-room on the second floor. At about 5 o'clock his neice went up to the bedroom to call him for dinner. On entering the room she found her uncle lying on the floor. She then went down stairs and told his son, and the latter went up to the bedroom and found that his father was dead. He was lying stretched at full length on the floor, his head surrounded by a pool of blood. Beside him was lying a four-chambered Colt's pistol. It was evident that the deceased had placed the pistol in his mouth, and the bullet from the weapon had entered his brain, causing instant death. Deputy Coroner Marsh was notified, and has assumed charge of the case, and Coroner Eickhoff will hold an inquest.

THE SAVANNAH CITY BONDS.

The City of Savannah, Ga., defaults on the interest of its bonds, due to-day. Mr. Eugene Kelly, of Eugene Kelly & Co., bankers, Exchange place, who pay—or rather did heretofore pay—the interest on those bonds, explained to a TIMES reporter yesterday that when the yellow fever set in violently, all who could afford to flee the city fled as hastily as possible. Those fugitives were also, of course, the persons who were able to afford to pay the taxes, and the Marshal whose business it is to collect the city revenues, when he proceeded to perform his duties this Fall, found no tax-payers worth mentioning to levy upon. The interest now due on Savannah bonds will therefore not be paid, for the all-sufficient reason that there is no money to pay it with.

THE MANAGEMENT OF THE CANALS.

The interest taken by the Produce Exchange in whatever relates to the welfare of our canals, is shown by the following action taken by the Board of Managers at their meeting yesterday.

Whereas, It has come to our knowledge that efforts are being made to defeat the proposed amendment to the Constitution of this State, relative to the management of the canals, which amendment we believe to be eminently essential to their successful and efficient administration in the future; Therefore,

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the proposed amendment to section 3, article 5, of the Constitution, relative to the appointment of a Superintendent of Public Works, and the abolition of the office of Canal Commissioner, as passed by the last Legislature on May 15, 1876, and earnestly commend its passage to the mercantile community of our City and State.

CONFERENCE OF RAILROAD MANAGERS.

A conference of railroad managers, consisting of Mr. William H. Vanderbilt, of the New-York Central Road; Mr. Thomas A. Scott, of the Pennsylvania Road; Mr. King, of the Baltimore and Ohio Road; and Receiver Jewett, of the Erie Road, was held yesterday at the office of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad Company. The meeting was strictly private, its object being a discussion of the advisability of increasing the rates of East bound freights. A rumor was started during the day that the conference had disagreed and broken up, but it was without foundation. Mr. Jewett stated a TIMES reporter last evening that the managers had taken no definite action in the matter, and that they would continue their conference to-day.

MR. BRISTOW IN KENTUCKY.

ELOQUENT SPEECH TO HIS OLD FRIENDS AT HIS HOME IN KENTUCKY—HOW THE NORTH FEELS TOWARD THAT SECTION—THE DANGER AND THE FOOLISHNESS OF A "SOLID SOUTH."

Ex-Secretary Bristow addressed his neighbors at Hopkinsville, Ky., on Saturday last, in warm advocacy of the election of Hayes and Wheeler, devoting himself mainly to a consideration of the Southern question as affecting the canvass, and showing clearly that "the solid South" is acting against its own interests in looking to the Democratic Party for aid in restoring prosperous days. We quote from the Louisville Commercial's report, as follows:

THE SOUTH AND THE SUFFRAGE.

The present and greatest need of the body of the white people of the South is emancipation from the domination of the reckless and desperate party leaders who plunged them into the abyss of secession and civil war, and who have continued to lead them blindly into false paths ever since. These leaders long ago adopted a theory of government utterly inconsistent with true patriotism and at war with the idea of an indissoluble Union. Except in the State of South Carolina, where the few who constituted the ruling class adhered to the Calhoun theory of politics, the people of every Southern State, in one form or another, expressed their disapproval of the teachings of this class of politicians. Whenever the masses of the people had an opportunity to vote freely on any question affecting the integrity of the Union, they did not fail to express their loyalty to the Government founded by their fathers. In 1850 the people of Mississippi put the seal of their condemnation on the political doctrines of Jefferson Davis. But these leaders were desperate and reckless. By adroit and cunning management they fired the Southern heart, and, having made the Southern people mad, proceeded to precipitate them into civil war. Such as could not be controlled by appeals to their prejudices and sectional antipathies were coerced into secession by the exhibition of military power. When the people of a State—as in Tennessee—at a popular election expressed their determination to stand by the Government of their fathers, and to seek relief for any and all grievances under the old flag, by peaceful means, these desperate and treacherous leaders conspired to enter into a military league with the unlawful combination at Montgomery, called the Government of the Confederate States, and by means of this military alliance coerced the people of that State into submission to their purposes and plans. By such means was the so-called Confederate Government formed, as you who lived here upon the border well know. You witnessed these things. You saw military camps established throughout the South, especially in places and communities where a majority of the people were not in sympathy with the treasonable plot of ambitious and reckless men to overthrow the Government. You saw the young men of the South, under the influence of passion and hot blood, suddenly transformed into partisan soldiers, armed with shotguns, rude knives, and sabres, riding recklessly through the country, overawing the Union men of the South, and exhibiting valor and daring worthy of a better cause. Their hearts had been fired by reckless leaders; they were ready to do and die for what they vainly supposed to be the 'rights of the South.' By such means and appliances the fires of patriotism that burned in the bosoms of Southern Union men were extinguished.

"The people of the North entered upon the work of rehabilitating and reconstructing the disordered Southern States, on the theory that the right of suffrage should rest where it was before the war—with the white men of the South, and political power in the South was handed over to them. But under the guidance and leadership of the same men who had controlled the South before the war, the States proceeded to reduce the negro to a condition little better in any respect, in some respects far worse, than absolute slavery. It was attempted to compel him to do the will and bidding of the white man just as absolutely as when he was a slave, and he was left without that protection against the violent and lawless which was secured to him by the interest which the owner had in protecting him as property. In reconstructed Mississippi the Legislature enacted laws which forbade the negro to become proprietor of real estate, and otherwise closed against him the avenues to elevation, civilization, and business. Statutes similar in purpose and effect were passed in other States. In our own Commonwealth of Kentucky, a people, once led by Clay, Crittenden, and Rowan, were so blinded and misled by men in sympathy with the madness of the South, that they continued in force statutes which had their origin in the supposed necessities of slavery, and which could have no proper place in the laws of a land dedicated to freedom. In the face of such facts it is idle to pretend that the people of the South, in good faith, accepted the inevitable results of the war. Here in Kentucky the negro, although nominally free, was denied by the law the right to testify in any case, civil or criminal, affecting a white person. Any cowardly ruffian, inspired by race hatred or moved by intoxicating drink, could murder in cold blood a colored minister in the presence of his congregation of a thousand colored people, and not even be subjected to the inconvenience of arrest and indictment unless a white person happened to witness the horrible deed. And the statute which thus closed the doors of the courts of justice against a quarter of a million of the people of our State was not repealed until after the negro was made a voter by act of the nation. I submit to you, as sensible and intelligent men, whether a Government which had given freedom to four millions of people could be justified before the nations of the earth in allowing them to be thus practically outlawed. Something must be done to meet this responsibility which was upon the Government, and the loyal people of the North who had broken the bonds of slavery. After patient waiting, and much discussion, they resolved to give the freedmen the ballot for their own protection. The Fifteenth Amendment of our National Constitution was the result of this determination. It was not adopted without reluctance—nor was it claimed that this course was free from objection; but it was necessary, and the very best that could be done. Philosophically considered, it was the logical consequence of the act of emancipation, for no separate and distinct race of people can protect themselves in a popular Government without the actual possession of some share of political power. In this country the ballot is the highest and best security of the citizen. You know full well how the Southern politician has attempted to harrow the feelings and excite the prejudices and hates of the people of the South on this subject—negro suffrage. Instead of accepting the necessary and inevitable results of their own acts of 'madness, folly, and wickedness,' instead of taking the negro by the hand and leading him in a friendly way into the paths of virtue, intelligence, and material prosperity, they have appealed to the passions and prejudices of race against race, until they have excited the ignorant and vicious to deeds of violence and outrages which I do not care to recount, and which cast a dark shadow over the entire South. Capital, the most sensitive of all things, has been kept out of the South. Enterprise in business and skilled labor have found homes elsewhere. The desolation and ravages of war still leave their traces throughout the South. Education languishes, and, in many places, children, white and black, grow up in ignorance, the twin sister of vice. The old Southern politician again secures his election to Congress and to State offices by croaking over the unhappy condition of the South, which he falsely ascribes to the Republican Party and the people of the North. Throughout the South old men walk and talk as if they lived in times that have passed away, and can never return, and young men are being trained up in the same old paths. Meantime, the world moves. North, East, and West of us thrift and prosperity are seen on every hand, but the South 'drags its slow length along,' and neither prospers, as it should, nor advances in civilization, as it must. Its soil of unsurpassed fertility, its boundless forests of heavy and valuable growth, its rich mines of metal and fuel which lie imbedded almost undisturbed in the earth, its equable and genial climate, present tempting fields for capital and labor. But these will not come in such strength or numbers as to have any appreciable effect on the development of wealth and power, until there is 'permanent pacification' throughout the South, and this can only come of cheerful acquiescence in the new and changed order of things—when the 'rights of all are respected by all.' Not only must the negro be made to feel secure in 'life liberty, and the pursuit of happiness,' but the white man, who, having been persuaded or coerced into rebellion against his Government, is inclined to separate from his former party associates, must be given perfect freedom of action.

PROSCRIPTION IN THE SOUTH.

Refusal to acquiesce in the freedom of the negro and his constitutional right of suffrage is not the only, or perhaps the most grievous error, into which the Southern people have been led by their old teachers. Perfect freedom of choice has not been conceded to the white man. Many illustrations of this familiar to you might be given, but one notable instance of proscription will suffice. General Longstreet fought on the side of the South with courage and devotion which challenged the admiration of all, and as a soldier without reproach occupied a place in the affection of the Southern people, second only to Lee, Jackson and Johnston. He laid down his sword at the end of the war, and supposed that it was the duty and purpose of the South to accept the situation in good faith. Without pretending to indorse or approve all that was done by the party in power, he accepted a purely administrative office under the Government. For this course he has been denounced by Southern leaders as a traitor to the cause which they profess before the world to have abandoned. Curses both loud and deep have been heaped upon his head. That terrible but incomprehensible and meaningless epithet, 'traitor to the South,' has been freely applied to him. And all for what? His offense consisted only in exercising the right of political choice which belongs to every man of this country, North or South. The highest allegiance of every citizen of this country is due to the nation, and he who withholds it because of any supposed duty to his State or society, proves himself unworthy of citizenship in a great and powerful nation. But to encounter such censure and opprobrious epithets as have been heaped upon Gen. Longstreet for having recognized his allegiance to the nation and accepted an office under it, is not a pleasant thing and no citizen should have his patriotism or courage subjected to such tests. This treatment of Gen. Longstreet and men who have chosen to follow his example is one of the means adopted by party leaders for making and continuing a 'solid South.' One who sees fit to abandon his former political associations and act with the Republican Party is denounced as a renegade, and young Hotspurs, disciples of the old Southern leaders, talk as flippantly about 'traitors to the South' as if the South constituted and independent nationality to which every Southern man, owed allegiance paramount to that which he owes to the United States. Young men are educated in the belief that somehow or other true chivalry is found only among those who abhor Northern ideas and men and cling to the old ante-bellum notion of Southern superiority. In a word, by inculcating false ideas of this kind and enforcing them in every department of life, it is made easier and more comfortable to be a Democrat than a Republican in the States lately in rebellion. Absolute freedom of choice, such as exists throughout the North, is to be found in very few places in the South. This is one of the influences which go to make a 'solid South.'

BAD MEN IN OFFICE.

But we are told that bad men have got into office in the South and have administered public affairs corruptly, and, therefore, it is not respectable to be a Republican in the South. Now, I do not propose to deny that bad and corrupt men have got into office by taking advantage of the disordered state of affairs in the South, and have abused their power, but I do deny that the Republican Party alone is responsible for such men, or that the remedy for this admitted evil is in restoring to power the old Southern leaders, who, I repeat, made it not only possible, but easy, for such men to get into office. It is not true, however, that corruption in office is to be found only in the States of the South. The great war through which we have passed, attended as it necessarily was by extraordinary and lavish expenditure of money, and followed by an era of irredeemable and inflated currency, stimulating trade and increasing the tendency to speculation, begot official extravagance and corruption, as such things always do. If you point me to the large indebtedness of Southern States, I invite you to consider the $160,000,000 of debt under which the City of New-York now groans, a sum greater than the aggregate indebtedness of any half dozen of the Southern States, and a great part of which is admitted to represent the stealings of Democratic thieves. Similar comparisons might be made with other cities which have been under uninterrupted Democratic rule for many years, where extraordinary indebtedness has been incurred, and heavy taxes imposed, and the tax-payers have got small benefits in return, while Democratic officials and their friends have, somehow or other, grown rich. The exemption of our own State from large indebtedness is the result of the financial sagacity and strict economy of the Union men who controlled the affairs of the State, while men who now hold State offices were, for the most part, engaged in rebellion against the State and national authority. The expenses of your State Government have been largely increased since the war. They are now nearly three times what they were in 1860, and taxation for ordinary purposes has been doubled. If you talk to me of the large indebtedness of Southern States, which, as some say, must result in repudiation, I invite you to consider the number of counties in this State under Democratic rule that are to-day in default of payment of interest on their large indebtedness and in open repudiation. All this is a consequence of the wild spirit of speculation and extravagance which has pervaded the whole country, and has not been peculiar to any section or class. But I deny that the presence of extravagant and corrupt officials in the South furnishes a sufficient, or even the actual, reason for holding together the old elements of the South as organized for purposes of rebellion.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

The existing state of things in South Carolina furnishes clear refutation of all such claims. The chances of war brought to that State a young man from Massachusetts, a graduate of Yale, a man of stainless character and admitted ability. In all the essential qualities of a public man, Gov. Chamberlain is the equal of any man who ever filled the Executive chair of South Carolina. As soon as he was installed in the office of Governor of that State he entered upon an uncompromising warfare with knavery and corruption. He refused to commission Judges elected by the Legislature, because he knew them to be corrupt, and believed they would make barter of justice. By every means in his power he combated oppression and wrong, and strove to give the people of his State good government. He went to the very verge of constitutional limits to accomplish this end. For his earnest and courageous efforts in this respect he was denounced by men of his own party who either sympathized with official corruption or thought more of party success than of honesty and good government. No man ever battled more bravely for reform. He was praised by tax-payers and commercial bodies. The Democratic press of his State applauded him for his honesty and courage. He used all proper means to conciliate the property-holder of his State, and incurred the displeasure of many of his own party by doing so. Party necessity forced his renomination for the office of Governor, in spite of the fierce opposition of active party men. If the people of South Carolina sincerely desired honest and intelligent administration, they had only to support and uphold Gov. Chamberlain to get it, but such was not the only, or even the chief desire of the leaders of the old ruling class in South Carolina. What they desired, even above good government, was to restore to power the men who precipitated the civil war. One of the most conspicuous of their number was nominated for Governor, and personal detraction and calumny are now heaped upon Gov. Chamberlain as fiercely and relentlessly as if he had been the worst of the bad men who have held office in the South. The very men who, but a little while ago, praised him for his fearless honesty and hard battle for the right, now join hands with the corrupt men whom he refused to commission as Judges and their friends in fierce and bitter denunciation. To accomplish his defeat the State is converted into a military camp in violation of law, and lawlessness prevails throughout its borders. This is a part of the plan for making and preserving a 'solid South.' Even Kentucky, famous for courage and independence of thought, whose people declared against the madness of secession by a majority of more than fifty thousand, has been subjected to the process of solidification until the men who were thus rebuked by the popular vote now dominate and control the politics of this State.

THE SOUTH'S TRUE INTERESTS.

My fellow-citizens, these things ought not to exist. Party division by sectional lines and boundaries is hurtful to the whole country, but it is especially injurious to the weaker section. It tends to dwarf the patriotism of the Southern people and retard the growth and prosperity of the section of the country in which they have peculiar interests. It is in your power to change all this; but you cannot do it so long as you submit to the leadership of the ambitious and desperate men who have already well-nigh compassed your ruin. Rise up in your might and throw off the yoke which these men have placed about your necks. Resolve to be free yourselves; emancipate yourselves from the bondage of party discipline in which the people of the South have so long been trained by cunning men, ambitious of power and reckless of the true interests of the people whom they profess to serve. Refuse to listen longer to appeals to the prejudices of race or section. You know the negro is not your enemy, but your friend. He has served you long, patiently, and faithfully. In the midst of war, when your able-bodied white men were in the camp and field, and when the negro saw and knew that his freedom depended upon defeat of the Southern armies, he patiently cultivated the soil, supported your families, and committed no acts of violence against them. Recognition of his newly-acquired rights, protection, fair dealing, and kind treatment will secure his gratitude and friendship, and give to the South the contented labor needful for its improvement. There is no necessary antagonism between the races, and he who attempts to provoke it is not the real friend of either. Educate the negro, and by this means elevate him in the scale of being and qualify him for the duties of citizenship. Educated labor is better for all. It brings higher reward to the laborer, and greater benefit to the employer. The more generally the people of all classes are educated, the more prosperous will be the community. Education is the foe and exterminator of low vices and ordinary crimes.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY THE SOUTH'S WORST ENEMY.

Nor are the people of the North your enemies. While they are committed to the protection of the negro by considerations of duty and humanity, they are none the less the friends of the white people of the South. They are the enemies of oppression and injustice, but not of the people of the South. Gladly would they unite with you now in burying the issues of the dead past. They are ready to meet you more than half way in efforts to build up waste places and to remove all traces of the bloody and fratricidal strife. But they can not understand why it is necessary to preserve a solid South as a political power, under the leadership of the men who precipitated the conflict. The very existence of this state of things makes them distrustful of the good faith of the South in its professed acceptance of the situation, and acquiescence in the results of the war. Be not deluded with the idea that the Democratic Party will be your deliverer from imaginary grievances. It was the Democratic Party that tolerated, if it did not openly encourage, the doctrine of secession, and thus permitted the Southern leaders to carry out their work of mischief and folly. It was the Democratic Party of the North that deluded the Southern people into the belief that the Government had no power to coerce obedience and submission to national law and authority, and that the people of the North would not unite in suppressing rebellion. It was the Democratic Party of the North that inspired the Southern people with false hopes by declaring the war for the Union a failure, and thus induced the South to protract a hopeless struggle, whereby its losses and sufferings were greatly increased. It was the leaders of the Democratic Party of the North who, in many ways, held out delusive hopes of succor and aid to the Southern people and thereby prolonged the strife. It is the Democratic Party North that has assured the people of the South before each Presidential election since the war that they would surely succeed in electing a President who, in some undefined way, would secure to the South substantially all that was lost in battle. It is the same Democratic Party that now asks you to preserve a solid South, and promises you to elect Mr. Tilden, and thereby do for the South something which they dare not insert in a party platform or in their candidate's letter of acceptance. Men of the South, you have had this ignis fatuus of Northern Democracy dance before your eyes repeatedly. It has led you through bog and morass to defeat and disaster. It has excited hopes which have never been realized. Every promise made you whether of succor in war or success at the ballot-box has been broken.

You have been deluded, deceived, and misled by the false promises of this Northern Democracy as often as you have trusted them. Be not deceived by it again. Consult your own best interest, and turn to other combinations for the assistance which you need to lift you out of the poverty and mire of political weakness and place your feet on sure foundations of material wealth and moral progress. The Republican Party presents to you a platform on which the old Henry Clay Whigs and Douglass Democrats of the South can consistently stand. It is one on which those great leaders would surely stand if they were now with us. It gives you candidates without reproach or taint of dishonor. Each of them has clearly expressed his desire to give to the people of the South good government, and the assurances of their purpose to do so are coupled with no conditions, save such as are honorable to the people of the South, because they are immutably right. They ask nothing of the people of the South but obedience to laws which operate alike and equally upon all sections and peoples.

Young men of the South, the responsibilities of the future are upon you. Upon your political action depends the prosperity of your section. If you cultivate the hurtful prejudices of the past, the tide of emigration will pass by the South; thrift and prosperity will dwell in other sections. The fertile fields of your native land will lie waste and uncultivated. The rich mineral deposits—vast sources of wealth and power—will be undisturbed in your Southern hills. The cities of the South will decay, and your people will continue in poverty. Are not all these of greater value than false notions of chivalry, or present success, in a desire to represent your district in Congress? If you espouse the cause of progress, justice, and right, to-day, you may be subjected to the inconvenience and mortification of temporary defeat by the men who will idly call you traitors to the South, and carry the elections by appeals to sectional and race prejudices. But this cannot always be so. Truth is not only mighty, but it is irrepressible, and will finally prevail. The people will tire of living in poverty, and off the highway of intelligence and prosperity merely to serve the purposes of men who strive for present success and power. Awake! arouse! shake off the blighting mildew of false pride and baleful prejudice, cast aside the passions and opinions that belong to the past, and henceforth live, act, and vote for the benefit of yourselves and your posterity. Be no longer alienated or estranged from the Government whose foundation was cemented by the blood of your ancestors, and which invites you to share its present blessings and future glories."

THE CITY'S BUDGET.

EXAMINATION OF THE ESTIMATES COMPLETED BY THE BOARD OF APPORTIONMENT—THE PROVISIONAL ESTIMATES CONSIDERABLY REDUCED.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment completed their examination of the estimates of the various departments for 1877 yesterday, and adopted the budget of the expenses of the City Government for next year, as will appear from the following communication of the Controller:

FINANCE DEPARTMENT, CONTROLLER'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Oct. 30, 1876.

To the Board of Estimate and Apportionment:

The provisional estimate for the year 1877 shows that: The total amount asked for by the departments and officers is......$33,987,530 87
The amount of the provisional estimate agreed on by the board......32,089,970 62
The amount of reduction by the board is......$1,897,560 25

The total amount of estimates and appropriations for 1876 was $34,964,305 64, by which it is seen that there is a reduction in the amount of the estimates and appropriations for 1877 of $,2874,425 02. The amount deducted from the estimate for 1876, on account of Revenues of the General Fund, was $4,000,000. The amount of deduction on this account from the estimate for 1877 cannot exceed $2,500,000, but even with this large decrease in the revenues of the General Fund, there will be a reduction in the amount and rate of taxes for 1877, as appears by the following comparative statement:

Years.	Amount of Approp'ns.	Amount Gen'l. Fund Ded'd.	Amount less Gen'l. Fund.

The amount added to the final estimate for 1876, to supply deficiencies in the product of the taxes was $145,125 96, and the tax levy amounted to $31,109,521 62. The rate of tax was 2 80 per cent. If the same amount be added to the estimates for deficiencies in 1877, the tax levy will amount to $29,735,096 58, and the rate of tax will be a fraction less than 2.68 per cent. upon the valuations of the present year. I present herewith a tabulated statement of appropriations for all purposes in 1876 and 1877, showing also the amounts asked for in the departmental estimates, and the amounts allowed in the provisional estimates for 1877. The State tax for the County of New-York in 1876 was $7,233,189 48, and for 1877 it is $4,162,883 85, making a reduction in this item of $3,070,305 63. Considerable reductions have also been made in the departmental estimate, and the total amount of the provisional estimate would have shown a great reduction upon the estimate for 1876, if it were not necessary to add several large sums for extraordinary appropriations, such as an item of $700,000 for repairing and repairs of street pavements. This amount is an increase of $550,000 over the appropriation for 1876 for these purposes. The importance of making adequate provision for the repairs of pavements is apparent to every one. An item of $276,331 14 is also included for real estate expenses for the payment of assessments on Corporation property, and also an item for judgments of $200,000.

These items make an aggregate of over one million dollars. Respectfully,

ANDREW H. GREEN, Controller.

FOOT-BALL MATCH.

The first foot-ball match of the season was played yesterday afternoon on the grounds at the foot of Ninth street, Hoboken, between the first twenty of the Stevens Institute and what was intended to be the twenty of the University of New-York. The University team was short several men, so Mr. H. Hazard, the Stevens Captain, allowed the opposing team to be made up from among the players on the ground. The ball was started at 3 o'clock, the Stevens Institute playing against the wind. The kick-off was bad, but the ball was quickly followed by the Institute forward, who kept it in play in front of the University goal for a quarter of an hour, until by some quick passing the University players forced it across the ground. It was quickly followed, and a scramble in front of the goal posts ended by the ball being well placed between them, the Institute scoring first goal in twenty-one minutes of quick play. On changing sides the Institute, with the wind in their favor, scored another goal in three minutes. They captured the next in four minutes, after which Mr. Hazard allowed the University to play with the wind for the rest of the game. The fourth goal was very hotly contested, the ball being kept in the Institute quarters the greater part of the time, until a brilliant run by Dillworth, ably backed up by the rushers, caused the University to be again defeated. Time, twenty-two minutes. Four more games were played, but the superior weight and work of the institute twenty was too much for the team against them, and they were all placed to the home team's credit. The play of Mr. Morton, as goal-keeper on the Institute side, was very good, and to equalize matters he was allowed to play on the other side, but it did not alter the record. Mr. Hazard and Mr. Towell were noticeable as being always on the ball, and the rest of the twenty ably filled their parts. Score: Stevens 8 goals; University, of New-York, 0. On receipt of a telegram to-day from Rutgers College, the Stevens boys will journey to New-Brunswick to play against their brother collegians.

CLOSING OF THE EXHIBITION.

PREPARATIONS AND ARRANGEMENTS FOR REMOVING GOODS—GENERAL SALE OF BUILDINGS NOV. 30.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—All the arrangements for the closing of the Exhibition are being rapidly completed, and every necessary detail is receiving careful attention. In order that the work of removal may be facilitated as much as possible, it has been determined that this labor must be commenced on the 11th of November, and finished before the 31st of December, unless otherwise authorized by the Director General. Goods then remaining without authority will be removed by the Director General, and sold for expenses, or otherwise disposed of under the direction of the Centennial Commission. A circular issued to exhibitors by the Bureau of Transportation contains the following concerning free return transportation:

"Most of the railway companies in the United States having officially announced that they would transport, at regular rates, all articles intended for exhibition at the International Exposition of 1876, at Philadelphia, as well as all other articles forwarded by exhibitors for their own use in connection with the Exposition, and would return unsold articles free, and it having been announced that at the close of the Exhibition the Chief of the Bureau of Transportation will issue, when necessary, certificates showing what articles are unsold, and are to be returned to the place of original shipments by the route over which it was transported to the Exhibition, exhibitors who expect to secure free return transportation for their goods must apply for such certificates at the office of the Bureau of Transportation, where proper blanks for the purpose will be furnished."

There will be a general sale of all the buildings belonging to the Centennial Board of Finance on Thursday, Nov. 30, at 11 o'clock A. M. The list comprises the Main building and carriage annex, Agricultural Hall, with wagon and pomological annexes; the Art annex, Photographic Exhibition building, Shoe and Leather building, Judges' hall, Butter and Cheese building, guard station-houses, and various other small buildings. Particulars of the sale will be furnished in pamphlet form, on application, ten days before the appointed time.

A WOMAN SENTENCED TO BE HANGED.

WASHINGTON, Oct 31.—In the Criminal Court to-day Johanna Turbin (colored) who, on Saturday last, was convicted of murder in the first degree, with a recommendation that Executive clemency be extended, was to-day sentenced, by Judge McArthur to be hanged on Friday, Dec. 29. In passing sentence the court said: "I do not know that it has ever fallen to the lot of a judicial officer in this district to pronounce sentence of death on one of your sex. This may be accounted for by the fact that women observe the law better than men. The crime of which you have been convicted is a most atrocious and revolting one, and perhaps there never was one committed by either sex which surpasses it in atrocity. The victim was your husband, and after inflicting the fatal blow you mutilated the body in the most dreadful manner. If there ever was a case where capital punishment is deserved, this is the case." Judge McArthur continued, remarking that the jury had a repulsion to the execution of a woman, and had petitioned for the intervention of Executive clemency, and after passing sentence he would sign a paper which would give her her life. He advised her that her life would be passed in prison, and that she need entertain no hope of ever escaping therefrom; for he was assured that Executive clemency would grant her no further boon than her life. And he urged that she should pray God to be as lenient to her as the law had been.

ANOTHER CANAL MANDAMUS.

ALBANY, Oct. 31.—In Special Term to-day, before Justice Westbrook, application was made for a mandamus compelling the Auditor to draw his warrant on the Treasurer in favor of John M. Barnett, of Fort Ann, Washington County, for $26,988 39. Barnett, it seems, entered into a contract with the State on the 19th of August, 1873, to remove the wall-benches and construct a slope-wall on the Erie Canal, from Ferguson Aqueduct to the east line of Utica, and from Potter's Bridge to Lock No. 46. He performed the work, and, on the approval of the work by Resident Engineer Babcock, Canal Commissioner Barkley issued ten certificates of indebtedness to Barnett, one of which is dated Dec. 18, 1874, is for $4,148, and is numbered 46, and the remainder are numbered from 60 to 68, inclusive, are dated Dec. 23, 1874, and are for the following amounts: Two for $5,000 each, two for $2,500 each, two for $2,000 each, two for $1,000 each, and one for $1,840 39, making an aggregate of $26,988 39. The Auditor was requested to draw his warrant for this amount, but refused, on the ground that no provision had been made for their payment; hence the present application.

Justice Westbrook directed the entry of an order requiring the Auditor to draw his warrant forthwith, or show cause to the contrary on the last Tuesday in November.

MARINE DISASTERS.

QUEBEC, Oct. 31.—A telegram received here reports that the bark Marchioness of Queensbury, from Quebec for Port Glasgow, with a cargo of timber, is ashore at Langlade, Newfoundland, and will be a total loss. The crew are safe.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—J. Hutchinson, Vice Consul at Fauchal, Madeira, reports to the State Department that the United States tug Faustina, of Stockton, Me., with a cargo of coal from Penarth, Wales, for Havana, Cuba, foundered at sea on the 13th of September. The crew took to the boats and were picked up by the British schooner Emma E. Potter, and were landed at Funchal, from whence they were shipped on the British ship Magenta, bound to Hampton Roads, Va.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Oct. 31.—A vessel which arrived here to-day from Bonne Bay, Newfoundland, reports that she passed four abandoned and waterlogged fishing-schooners. From papers found on the bodies picked up from the late wreck at Sable Island there is no doubt that the vessel was the schooner N. B. Reeves, Capt. Bracy, of Calais, Me.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 31.—The schooner Ella Hodgdon, from Philadelphia, coal laden, went ashore on the rocks at Badger's Island, in the Piscataqua River opposite this City, at noon to-day, and now lies in a dangerous position.

THE LICK ESTATE IN LITIGATION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—John H. Lick to-day filed in the Probate Court a petition to be appointed Administrator of the estate of his father, the late James Lick. This is the first definite information of his designs which has been given since his arrival here some weeks ago, but it is understood that in the meantime attempts have been made by the Trustees of the estate to compromise by allowing him a large portion of the residue left to Pioneers and the Academy of Sciences after providing for the definite bequests in the trust deed. It is considered that the filing of this petition is the beginning of a vexatious and expensive litigation.

THE CENTENNIAL POULTRY SHOW.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—The poultry exhibition was to-day placed in perfect order, all the entries having been installed, every coop carefully labeled, and a full catalogue of the exhibits ready for distribution. Fully five hundred birds are now on exhibition, besides over fifteen hundred pigeons of various breeds. The display includes every known breed, from the most diminutive bantam of only fourteen ounces, to the largest brahma of fourteen pounds. The Judges have already commenced their work, and will doubtless be busily engaged until the close of the display.

INSANITY FEIGNED IN COURT.

In the Union Countys Court at Elizabeth, N. J., yesterday, John Murray, a notorious burglar, who had been arrested in New-York for burglaries in Union County, was convicted on six indictments. His counsel set up the plea of insanity, and the prisoner feigned it so well that doubts were raised as to his mental soundness. He fell once in an apparent fit of epilepsy, but two physicians who were in court examined him while he writhed and pronounced the fit a mere affectation. The jury promptly convicted him on the first indictment, and he was tried on the five remaining charges, the last five cases going to the jury without argument, and the jurors convicting him without leaving their seats. Judge Runyon, who presided at the trial, at once sentenced him to three years imprisonment and the payment of costs on each conviction, the terms not to be concurrent, making eighteen years in all.

Counsel for the United States Life Insurance Company has served upon Messrs. Sewell and Pierce, the counsel for the plaintiff in the suit brought against the company by Francis B. O'Connor, a notice of motion to set aside the order for the examination of the President, James Buell, which will be argued on Friday next.

On Monday last, John Carroll, who was employed in the Westminster Hotel, was arrested by Detective Handy, of the Eighteenth Precinct, on a charge of stealing $2,130 from J. B. While James F. Meehan, residing at No. 141 Ninth avenue, was passing through Fulton street yesterday morning, his pocket was picked of $79 by William Farrell, of No. 80 Laight street, who attempted to escape, but Officer Randall, of the Fifth Precinct, arrested him. Justice Duffy held the prisoner in default of $1,000 bail to answer at the General Sessions.

In August last, George Dunham, a driver and collector in the employ of the Commonwealth Ice Company, was discharged, and has since been arrested, and is now confined in the Tombs awaiting trial for collecting money belonging to the company without their authority, and appropriating it to his own use. The amount appropriated is between four and five thousand dollars.

In the action brought by James N. Watson against the Harlem and New-York Navigation Company and the Morrisania Steam-boat Company, Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday granted an injunction restraining the defendants from carrying into effect, or in anywise acting under their recent agreement, and from parting with the leases and franchises of the first-named company.

Peter J. F. Donohue, aged eighteen, residing at No. 58 Leroy street, was arrested by Detective Hagan, of the Fifth Precinct, for stealing fifty pounds of nickel, valued at $175, from the store of Wallace & Sons, Chambers street, on the 12th Oct. In Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, Donohue pleaded guilty, and Judge Sutherland sentenced him to one year in the Penitentiary.

While John C. Maben, a banker of No. 30 Broad street, was standing in front of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, on Tuesday evening, he was approached by a thief who attempted to snatch his gold watch, valued at $200, from his pocket. Mr. Maben, who is a very powerful man, held the would-be thief until Officer Connover, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct arrived and took him in custody. At the station-house he gave his name as John Barnard, of No. 216 East Twentieth street, and his occupation as that of a laborer. In the Washington Place Police Court, yesterday, Justice Kasmire committed the prisoner in default of $5,000 bail to answer at the General Sessions.

The second call of the calendar was resumed at case No. 1,725, (Henry Bauer, San Francisco, Cal., for the loss of personal effects and wages,) and that with the following cases, were tried: Nos. 1,728, 1,730, 1,737, 1,741, 1,756, 1,758, 1,759, 1,760, 1,783, 1,785, 1,786, 1,788, 1,789, 1,790, 1,791, 1,794, and 1,797. No. 1,791 is a claim for $1,281, for loss of personal effects, &c., by Capt. Homer C. Blake, who commanded the United States steam-ship Hatteras when the Alabama sunk her off Galveston, Texas, Jan. 11, 1862. This is the first case connected with the Hatteras, none of which have been adjudicated by the court.

A BOLD HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

While passing the corner of Varick and Canal street, at an early hour yesterday morning, Mr. James Greene, a resident of Brooklyn, who does business at No. 335 Spring street, was set upon by four Italians, who knocked him down and beat him severely, after which one of them rifled his pockets of a gold watch and chain, and a pocket-book containing $170, the others holding him down. They then hastily decamped, and Mr. Greene went to look for an officer. Turning into Canal street, he was met by one of the thieves, who had hastened around the block, and who entered into conversation with him, asking him with the greatest coolness what had happened. Mr. Greene at once recognized the man as one of his assailants, and responded by catching hold of him. He then called for an officer, and the Italian, after vainly protesting his innocence, slipped out of his coat and darted away. Mr. Greene dropped the coat and gave chase, overhauling the thief a short distance away. By this time Officer Rowley, of the Eighth Precinct, had arrived, and conveyed the Italian to the station-house, where he gave his name as Alfonso Brans, and his residence at No. 437 Canal street. He was subsequently taken to the Washington Place Police Court, where he endeavored to prove that Mr. Greene tried to steal his coat. Justice Kasmire held him in default of $3,000 bail to answer at the General Session.

A "STRAW" BONDSMAN SENTENCED.

On the 1st of February last a man named Henry Wilson was brought before Judge Morgan on a charge of grand larceny and held in $2,000 bail for trial at General Sessions. Alexander F. McKenzie, aged sixty-three, of No. 1,073 Third avenue, who appeared as bondsman for Wilson, swore that he was worth $8,000 over his debts, being the owner of a house and lot on Eighty-fourth street, between Madison and Fourth avenues. It was subsequently ascertained that McKenzie had given "straw" bail, whereupon he was arrested and indicted for perjury. On the 14th of June McKenzie pleaded guilty to the indictment, and was remanded until yesterday, when he was brought up for sentence. Judge Gildersleeve sentenced the aged offender to three years and six months in State Prison.

THE BECKWITH CASE GIVEN THE JURY.

The trial of Charles R. Beckwith, late confidential clerk and cashier to Benjamin T. Babbitt, the wealthy soap manufacturer, was concluded in the Court of General Sessions yesterday. The prisoner was attended by his wife and mother and a number of lady friends, and consulted frequently with his counsel, who displayed extraordinary alertness in looking after the interests of the accused. Ex-Judge Fullerton having concluded his address to the jury for the defense on the evening previous, Assistant District Attorney Bell commenced his summing up for the prosecution. He argued with great force that the prisoner's guilt had been established beyond all doubt by the evidence, and said that no loop-hole had been left through which he could escape conviction. He urged the jury to disregard any prejudices or sympathies they may have in the matter, and find their verdict on the evidence alone. Judge Sutherland then charged at length, and disposed of a number of requests to charge submitted by ex-Judge Fullerton. At 2:10 P. M. the jury retired to their room, and at 7, not having agreed upon a verdict, were locked up for the night.

A FORGER SENTENCED.

Charles J. Williamson, alias Perrin, the notorious bank forger, who was an active member of the Roberts-Gleason gang of forgers, who was convicted of forging New-York Central and New-York, Buffalo and Erie Railroad bonds, was brought up for sentence in the Court of General Sessions yesterday. Williamson was convicted before Judge Sutherland May 24, 1876. He was subsequently placed on trial before Judge Gildersleeve on another indictment for forgery, charging a second offense, for which a double penalty is provided, and was a second time found guilty, Assistant District Attorney Rollins prosecuting in both cases. The prisoner was remanded for sentence until yesterday, when he was brought up in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions for judgment. A. Oakey Hall, who defended the prisoner, made a formal motion for a stay of proceedings, for the purpose of getting it on record. Judge Gildersleeve denied the motion, and Mr. Rollins moved for sentence. Judge Sutherland then sentenced Williamson to five years in State Prison on the conviction had before him, to which Judge Gildersleeve added a further penalty of ten years on the second conviction—fifteen years in all. The prisoner received his sentence with the utmost coolness, bowing politely to the court on leaving the bar.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Donohue.

Mauger vs. Goodall.—In this case the settlement was on the terms of paying the Receiver, and the question of his fees alone remain to be disposed of. Rule 25, relied on by plaintiff, is intended to apply where on motion a Receiver was not continued, not in a case where his appointment had protected the parties. The settlement of the parties was on the basis of $40,000 value of property. The bond given by the Receiver was $60,000; on the facts, I think $1,000 a fair amount to be paid him for fees, his disbursements to be added. The order may be entered on notice to Receiver.

Gans vs. McCunn.—The value of the service being disputed, a reference must be had to take proofs.

By Judge Lawrence.

Moffatt vs. Cauldwell.—The examination must proceed, for the reasons stated in memorandum.

By Judge Barrett.

Shea vs. Shea.—The motion for a Receiver must be granted unless the defendant within ten days pay the Referee's fees, $400, and permit the report to be taken up. Upon such fees being paid within such time the motion for a Receiver is denied, but without prejudice to a renewal in case the defendant shall neglect to pay whatever alimony the court upon report may direct.

By Judge Larremore.

In the matter of the application of Schwarz, &c.—Order granted confirming report of Referee.

Dunn, &c., vs. Handibode.—Report confirmed and order granted.

SUPREME COURT CIRCUIT—PART I.

By Judge Donohue.

Thompson vs. Gould, &c.—Allowance, $2,000, granted.

By Judge Lawrence.

Shiff et al. vs. New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company.—Findings settled.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Lawrence.

Barker, &c., vs. Hoff, &c.—Findings and amendments as settled. See amendments.

Same vs. Same.—As both the parties to this action stand in a representative capacity, and as I cannot say that the action has not been prosecuted in good faith by the plaintiff, I am of the opinion that the defendant is not entitled to so large an allowance as would under ordinary circumstances be awarded to him. Assuming the amount involved to have been $21,000 and upward, an allowance of $400 seems to be reasonable, and such amount is accordingly allowed.

Gautier vs. Douglass Manufacturing Company et al.—Motion for a new trial denied, with $10 costs. Opinion.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Chief Justice Curtis.

De Vere vs. Munro et al.—Motion for preliminary injunction granted, with costs to abide event of suit.

Same vs. Same.—Undertaking approved.

Goldfinger vs. Roller.—Order granted and undertaking approved.

Dorman vs. The Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company.—Commission ordered.

Levy vs. Jaeger et al.—Order granted and undertaking approved.

Butler vs. Ballard et al.—Reference ordered.

Wartag vs. Jackson.—Motion to vacate judgment denied.

By Judge Speir.

Meeks, Receiver, &c., vs. Krebler et al.—This is a motion for a new trial upon the grounds of mistake, surprise, fraud, suppression of the truth, and newly-discovered evidence. A trial was had in October, 1871, before Hon. Samuel Jones, who found in favor of the defendants, and he has given his reasons therefor in a written opinion. The grounds stated by the learned Judge, it seems to me, are a sufficient answer to this motion. Courts ordinarily hesitate to grant a new trial after a long delay, and especially after a delay of five years. In this case, in addition to the weakness of the moving papers, the motion should be denied upon the merits. Dismissed, with costs.

Kohler vs. Chapman et al.—Findings settled.

MARINE COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge McAdam.

Lochmeyer vs. Ausbacker.—Judgment for plaintiff on demurrer.

Utter vs. Philip.—Proceedings dismissed.

Costello vs. Underhill.—Execution set aside.

Mahon vs. Coulter.—Complaint dismissed.

Roche vs. Levins.—Motion denied.

Scherer vs. Townsend.—Attachment ordered.

Meyer vs. Stauf.—Complaint dismissed unless certain conditions are complied with.

Stevenson vs. Fraser.—Motion denied, without costs.

Hanigan vs. Neaf.—James McNulty, Esq., appointed Receiver; bond, $100; $20 costs allowed to plaintiffs' attorney, and defendant discharged from arrest.

Motions Granted.—Frazer vs. Nolan; Crotty vs. Conner; Wenzel vs. Murphy.

Orders Granted.—Schuttuck vs. Zimmerman; Thacher vs. Hall; Elshner vs. Froehlich; Heney vs. Heney; Costello vs. Mulvihill; Frost vs. Chapin; Hansen vs. Dudley; Levy vs. Bloom; Satterlee vs. The Lees Box and Lumber Company; Ketchum vs. Cochrane; Botsford vs. Dixon; Hunt vs. Wolff; Railway Advertising Company vs. House; Schmidt vs. Koch.

Mazinio vs. Romagnoni.—Order directing bank to pay over money, &c.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

At the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday the following preamble and resolution were adopted:

Whereas, Unexpected calls have been made upon the Executive Committees of this Department during the current year, which have led to the necessity of providing for the service of orders and inspection of milk, and of minor nuisances, and an expenditure of $2,500 has been thereby incurred, which, if not provided for by a transfer, must be saved by the discharge of a number of inspectors for the remaining months of the year; therefore

Resolved, That the Board of Apportionment be respectfully requested to transfer the sum of $2,500 from the unexpended Small-pox Hospital Fund for supplies for 1876 to the appropriation for salaries.

Sanitary Inspector Post made a report in relation to the bad condition of the public school in Fortieth street, near Eighth avenue. The class-rooms in the basement of the school-house are dark, damp, illy ventilated, and are wholly unfit for the purpose for which they are used. A copy of the report was ordered to be sent to the Board of Education.

The following mortality report was received and ordered on file: "There were 424 deaths reported during the week ending Saturday, Oct. 28, being a decrease of 43 as compared with the previous week, and 58 less than the number reported during the corresponding week of 1875. TUESDAY, Oct. 31—P. M.

Speculation on the Stock Exchange was exceedingly quiet early in the day, and there were no material variations in the prices of the leading shares, the market on the whole exhibiting rather a firm tone. In the afternoon, however, the tranquil aspect of affairs underwent a violent change, consequent upon a report that the conference of the representatives of the four leading trunk lines had resulted in a disagreement, and that accordingly all hopes of an amicable settlement of the railroad war were at an end. This rumor events proved to have been at least premature, if not altogether without foundation, as it appears that the conference had merely adjourned until this evening. The prevailing impression among operators after the close of business, was that an arrangement will probably be reached under the terms of which an advance in eastern-bound freights may be expected. The decline following the unfavorable report in regard to the result of the deliberations of the conference ranged from ⅛ to 2¾ ₩ cent. The entire business for the day reached 152,740 shares, of which 50,640 were in Lake Shore; 32,500 in Western Union; 23,250 in Delaware, Lackawanna, and Western; 13,700 in Michigan Central; 10,900 in Pacific Mail; and 6,700 in St. Paul. Lake Shore fluctuated between 60⅞ and 61⅜ until late in the afternoon, when a decline to 59 took place. Michigan Central advanced at the opening to 50⅜, but subsequently declined to 47⅝. New-York Central fell off to 102½, and closed at 103⅛ against 104⅛ yesterday. The Northwest and St. Paul shares declined ¼ to 1⅛ ₩ cent., the former selling down from 38¼ to 38 for the common and from 60⅝ to 60 for the preferred, and the latter from 25 to 24½ for the common and from 56 to 54⅞ for the preferred. Western Union rose from 72½ to 73⅜, and afterward declined to 72. Pacific Mail declined from 24½ to 23¾, and Erie from 11¼ to 10⅞. C., C., C. and I. advanced from 40 to 41. Pittsburg sold at 91 and Rock Island at 101⅞@102. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western declined from 74½ to 73¼ and closed at 73½. New-Jersey Central advanced from 36½ to 37⅛, and finally sold at 36¼. The remainder of the list was dull and the changes were insignificant.

The money market was easy early in the day at 2½@3 ₩ cent. on call, but during the afternoon, under an increased demand, Stock Exchange borrowers paid as high as 6@7 ₩ cent. At the close there was a reaction to 4@5 ₩ cent., the advance having induced freer offerings of capital. Prime mercantile paper is quoted at 4½ to 6 ₩ cent. The national bank notes received at Washington for redemption to-day amounted to $500,000. The rates of domestic exchange on New-York at the interior cities to-day were as follows: Savannah, buying, ⅜; selling, par to ¼ off; Charleston, scarce; selling, ⅛ to par; Cincinnati, dull; 100 discount; St. Louis, 125 to 150 discount; New-Orleans, commercial, ⅜; bank, ¼, and Chicago, 25 discount.

The foreign advices report an excited state of affairs at the money centres of Europe, owing to the statement published in the Official Gazette, of St. Petersburg, that the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople had been instructed to present an ultimatum to the Turkish Government demanding a suspension of hostilities and an armistice of six weeks. Consols declined to 95⅛, but afterward recovered to 95¼@95⅜. There was also some disturbance on the Berlin Bourse, and Rentes at Paris fell off about ¼ ₩ cent., with a subsequent recovery to 105.45. American securities at London were generally firm and improved a fraction in some of the issues, closing at 103⅜ for 1865s, (old,) 108½@108⅝ for 1867s, 108¼ for 10-40s, and 106⅝@106¾ for new 5s. Erie, after declining to 10¼@10⅜, closed firm at the latter price. Bullion to the amount of £288,000 went into the Bank of England on balance to-day. Silver was quoted at 53⅜d. ₩ ounce. To-morrow is a Bank of England holiday.

The sterling exchange market was firm and the selling rates were advanced a fraction. Prime bankers' sixty-day bills sold at $4 82@$4 82½ and demand at $4 84@$4 84¼.

The gold speculation opened strong, and considerable activity prevailed on the decline in Consols and the more warlike dispatches from London in regard to the Eastern question. The early transactions were at 110@110⅛, but the price afterward declined to 109⅞, at which the market closed. On gold loans the rates were flat to 2 ₩ cent. for borrowing, and 1 to 3 ₩ cent. for carrying.

Government bonds were firm, in sympathy with the improvement at London, and prices generally advanced ⅛ ₩ cent. as compared with yesterday. Currency 6s were an exception, selling at 124½@124¼. The new 4½ ₩ cent. registered bonds sold at 111½. Railroad bonds were strong, and in many instances higher. Toledo and Wabash consolidated convertibles were a marked exception, selling at 51 against 53 yesterday. New-Jersey Central Convertibles advanced ½ ₩ cent., to 89½, and Chesapeake and Ohio Firsts 1 ₩ cent., to 31. Ohio and Mississippi second advanced to 59, and Milwaukee and St. Paul consolidated sinking funds to 86½. Cleveland and Pittsburg Consolidated sinking funds sold at 112, and do. 4ths at 105¼. New-Jersey Consolidated firsts declined to 86½, and Hannibal and St. Joseph Convertible to 83⅛. State bonds were firm on a fairly active business. The principal transactions were in Missouris and Tennessees. The former sold at 107@107¼ for Long 6s, and at 102@102¼ for the issues of 1877-78. Tennessees sold at 47 for old, and at 45 for new.

The exports of domestic produce from the port of New-York to foreign ports for the week ending this date were $6,901,516, against $5,893,917 for the corresponding week in 1875, and $5,236,120 in 1874. The total exports of produce from the port since Jan. 1 this year were $224,573,794, against $211,495,994 for the corresponding period in 1875, and $245,591,598 in 1874.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot, under any circumstances, return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

The Republican nomination of Gen. DIX for Mayor places three candidates in the field. As there is but one way to beat the Tammany Hall nominee, and that is by uniting Republicans and Independent Democrats on one candidate, it is obvious enough that a division of the vote opposed to Tammany Hall between Gen. DIX and Mr. GREEN would simply insure Mr. ELY's election. It is equally certain that a union between the supporters of Gen. DIX and Mr. GREEN would insure Mr. ELY's defeat. We do not know whether there is the slightest probability of bringing about such a result, and we can only infer that before recommending a "straight" ticket, the Republican Committee had exhausted all the means in their power of securing such nominations as would have united all the opponents of Tammany Hall. The success of the Kelly ticket next week would be a disaster of no slight magnitude. It would give a new lease of power to a mischievous and irresponsible political despotism and would fasten upon the City a set of men whose influence over their following is absolutely dependent on their power of bleeding the Treasury. It certainly supplies an additional argument for separating Municipal from State elections, to find that considerations affecting the success of the Presidential and Gubernatorial tickets have prevented the question of local reform from receiving the attention it deserved.

As between the Republican County ticket and that presented by Tammany Hall no respectable citizen need hesitate for an instant. In experience and ability Gen. DIX is as much the superior of Mr. ELY as he is in strength of character and purity of antecedents. If the minutes of the old Board of Supervisors tell the truth about Mr. ELY's votes, he is certainly unfit to be Mayor of New-York. If they are, as Mr. ELY agrees with JOHN FOX, "JIMMY" HAYES, and ISAAC OLIVER in declaring them to be, a tissue of falsehoods, it must occur to any reflective person that the Tammany candidate has waited a very long time before calling in question the accuracy of a highly damaging record. He ought to know that the City has to defend almost every week, actions which take for granted the accuracy of these minutes, and that thousands of dollars have been taken out of the Treasury by means of judgments which never would have been obtained could the official character of the Supervisors' minutes have been successfully assailed. That Mr. ELY has failed to come to the relief of the City by testifying to the false and fraudulent character of these minutes is certainly not an argument in favor of electing him Mayor. We fear that Mr. ELY never had much of a head for figures. He was, if we mistake not, one of a committee of four who declared the Stuyvesant Bank to be in a prosperous and sound condition, six months before its failure. It is to be feared that Mr. ELY is not just the kind of man who could be trusted to keep the Tammany gang from getting easy access to the public Treasury. Gen. DIX certainly is that kind of man.

In regard to the nominations for most of the other offices, the contrast is even stronger. The difference between Mr. CALVIN'S qualifications for Surrogate and those of ex-Judge PEABODY is one which only lawyers can fully appreciate, but which the general public can recognize even without reference to CALVIN'S jobbery and time-serving. In the same way, Mr. HENRY J. SCUDDER is equally superior to ex-Judge FREEDMAN as a man and as a lawyer, while Mr. GOEBEL would certainly be far less likely to prostitute the Bench to political ends than Mr. SINNOTT. The Republican candidate for Sheriff represents a very different order of character and association from that to which Mr. BERNARD REILLY belongs. Whatever may be thought of the nomination of Mr. MURPHY, he certainly does not suffer by comparison with Mr. GUMBLETON, while the Republican nominees for Coroners are at least respectable men, and not mere rowdy politicians, like their Tammany opponents.

Gen. MCCOOK, the Republican candidate in the Eighth Congressional District, is making a very energetic canvass. The district is one which must be recovered this year, and the character and record of Gen. MCCOOK ought to enable him to draw out the full Republican vote. He was a gallant soldier, and is a quiet, unassuming gentleman who would make a very trust-worthy and industrious member of the House of Representatives.

An organized attempt is being made to defeat the proposed amendments to the State Constitution vesting the management of the State Prisons in the hands of a single Superintendent instead of three Inspectors, and transferring the control of canal repairs and other public works to a Superintendent. A body calling themselves the "Committee of True Reform," and having their head-quarters at Congress Hall, Albany, have sent out circulars directing attention to the "pressing necessity" of defeating the Canal and Prison amendments. The friends of these highly desirable installments of constitutional reform must bestir themselves if the amendments are to be saved. Democratic politicians have made a point of opposing all attempts at constitutional reform, especially those which, like the two in question, restrict what is called "the elective privilege of the people." We fear that amid the multiplicity of other claims on their attention, Republican organizations are likely to forget to make proper arrangements for the preparation and distribution of ballots on the constitutional amendments. The "workers" of both parties will bear watching in their treatment of a matter which has excited so little attention as this. The Produce Exchange has done well in calling public attention to these amendments; it would do still better by taking some pains to see that the people should be provided with all possible facilities for securing their adoption. There will be plenty of canceled ballots provided; there ought to be no opportunity given for allowing the amendments to be beaten by default.

A military reverse in Servia is sure to be followed by a peremptory Russian demand in Constantinople. The Turks have taken Djunis, and have received large reinforcements from the army heretofore operating against Montenegro. The Servian situation is highly critical. Notwithstanding the vaporings of M. RISTICS and Gen. TCHERNAYEFF, it is evident that even Russians at the front and rear of the Servian army are unable to hold up the fainting combatants. It is time for Russia to seize the trembling Sultan once more. The Czar has accordingly presented his ultimatum, that unless Turkey consents to an armistice within forty-eight hours, diplomatic relations will be broken off, and the Russian Embassy will shake the dust of Constantinople from its feet. This is a warlike threat, but it must be acknowledged that Turkey has dallied and procrastinated beyond all endurance since the question of a cessation of hostilities has been presented. Meantime, the Servian shell is being crushed, and the Turks carry forward their aggressive operations just as though no armistice had been proposed.

There are already indications that the alarm of the New-York capitalists at the increase of the debt threatened by the Southern claims, should the Government be controlled by asolid South, is shared by the merchants, manufacturers, and the intelligent working classes throughout the country. Besides the movement at Syracuse, noted in our columns yesterday, we hear of similar movements being discussed or in preparation at New-Haven, Hartford, Providence, and Boston—and also in Philadelphia, Cincinnati, and Chicago. Our people understand that the interest of capital and labor, so far as the national credit and debt are concerned, are identical, and that a blow at the one is aimed equally at the other. Mr. TILDEN'S election would, therefore, bring about not "good times," but the reverse.

TO OLD REPUBLICANS.

Mr. TILDEN bases all his hopes of success on receiving the votes of a portion of those who have heretofore been Republicans, and these he asks on the ground that he and his party can change the conduct of the Government for the better. We wish, before the canvass closes, to submit a few considerations to this class of voters, with whom THE TIMES has always had, and now has, a strong sympathy. It cannot be denied that many things have happened during the last eight years, which were calculated to dishearten the most earnest Republicans, who helped to create their party for purposes essentially high, and whose attachment to it has been sustained by the most honorable motives. It is not necessary now to count these over. Let it be granted that there have been too many of them, and that they have been too serious to be ignored. The question which presents itself to every candid mind is: Are we going to remedy these evils by the election of Mr. TILDEN? Shall we not remedy them more surely and completely by the election of Gen. HAYES? No man in his senses expects the millennium from either party. The most that Republicans can expect who have been dissatisfied with the management of their own party leaders is that the Democrats will do somewhat better. The most we ourselves expect from Republican success is that a firm stand will be made for improvement, and that very grave dangers incident to a Democratic administration will be avoided. Which is the more rational expectation?

Many Republicans have felt grieved and humiliated at some features of the policy of the Government toward the South. They believe that powers granted for the protection of the equal rights of all citizens have been abused for the advantage of political adventurers. The belief is not without foundation, and much injustice, discontent, and confusion in the South are due to this cause. But is there not every reason to expect that under Gen. HAYES, the South will have ample measure of fair treatment? There has been a change in many regards already. The appointments in the South have been better for the last two years. The complaints on that score are very few now, and are not all warranted by facts at that. Under Gen. HAYES—an upright man, thoroughly awakened to the necessity of compelling the respect of the Southern whites by the character of Federal appointees, and of cutting away the last vestige of pretext for resentment toward the National Government—we shall certainly see a very marked improvement. But how would it be under Mr. TILDEN? Republicans, at least, when asked to support that gentleman for the purpose of aiding in the prosperity of the South, cannot forget that the whites are not the whole South. There is no reason to suppose that Mr. TILDEN can do more of what ought to be done for the white people of the South than Gen. HAYES could and would do. How will it be with that other portion of the Southern people whom the Republican Party has freed and enfranchised? To any injustice to them Mr. TILDEN would turn a deaf ear. He would be compelled to recognize only those who have been utterly opposed to granting this class their rights under the Constitution. If the whites chose to oppress the negroes, there would be no redress at Washington. If the State Governments chose, for instance, to deny or to connive at the denial of opportunities of education, equal privileges in the courts, and the freedom of industry and commerce which every man has in the North, there would be no help for it. If the oppressed class sought relief at the polls, the "shot-gun" and "peaceful intimidation" policy could easily defeat their efforts, and Mr. TILDEN, whether he wished to or not, could not stir a hand to prevent it. Is this a result which Republicans are prepared to promote? Would this be an improvement on even the administration of the past eight years? And would it be better than what is likely to happen under Gen. HAYES?

Again, Republicans who have sustained their party from the purest of motives have been shocked by some things that have occurred in the civil service. They have been rightly so, and we should have small hope of the future of the country had it been otherwise. But, are these things likely to be repeated under Gen. HAYES? He is the only candidate ever named for President who has been able to announce a clear, practical, defined policy for the reform of the civil service. He has a broader knowledge and a more accurate appreciation of the evils which have beset the service than any public man prominently before the people. He shows a more precise conception of how these evils are to be remedied. He has behind him the support of a considerable body of intelligent and earnest men in his party. His policy, moreover, would be comparatively a feasible one, because it involves only weeding out poor or bad officers, and replacing them with good ones. Has Mr. TILDEN shown any adequate idea of what civil service reform requires? Has he any plan for this reform except a sweeping change of all officers, good and bad, regardless of merit and experience in the present holders, and with no hope of rigid selection for the new appointments? If he tried any such policy as Gen. HAYES has adopted, could he depend for support on his own party? Would not any attempt to keep the best men now in office, and to select only the best men to replace the inferior ones, be a political impossibility for Mr. TILDEN?

We submit these questions in all candor to those Republicans who have been dissatisfied with their own party. For ourselves, we may say that we have worked for the election of Gen. HAYES with the most profound confidence that it would promote the best aims of the old Republican Party. We look upon him as a true representative of the best Republican principles. We believe that he has the sincerity, the courage, the firm will, and the enlightened conscience which enabled the early leaders of our party to do so great a work. We have no sympathy with, and no tolerance for, the abuses that some of the later leaders have imposed upon the party. We see in Gen. HAYES a man who we think can be relied on to conduct the party to "the old rule, the true rule." On the other hand, we can expect from Mr. TILDEN nothing but the most complete opposition to, and reversal of, all that the Republican Party has achieved. We believe that under his administration, while the relations of the General Government to the South would be no purer than of late, and far less pure than under Gen. HAYES, they would result in the gravest injustice to the freedmen and in ultimate disorder and misrule. We cannot but perceive, too, that under him the civil service could not be systematically reformed, and would be immediately still further debauched. In short, we think that while we could lose much, we could gain nothing.

MR. BRISTOW ON THE "SOLID SOUTH."

The Democratic papers have abused Mr. BRISTOW because, as a Southern man, he spoke plainly to Northern audiences with regard to Southern politicians and their determination to array their section in opposition to the policy of the Union. It was alleged that he said at the North what he would be afraid to say in his own State. To this taunt Mr. BRISTOW has given the best possible reply. Before a Kentucky assemblage he has discussed in its most obvious aspects the Southern question, and the long extract which we elsewhere give from his speech shows how fearlessly he performed his task. The canvass has yielded no more courageous indictment of the Southern leaders and their policy, no more sensible appeal to the interests and judgment of the Southern people, than Mr. BRISTOW addressed to a meeting at Hopkinsville last Saturday.

No part of the ex-Secretary's speech is more suggestive than that in which he sketches the tactics employed by the Democratic leaders of the days before the war to coerce the Southern people into secession. The "shot-gun policy," which is undergoing a trial in South Carolina, in consequence of the success which attended it in Georgia and Mississippi, is not a recent invention. It was in full play in 1860, when the prime movers in the rebellion employed intimidation to overcome the attachment of the masses of the people to the old flag. Except in South Carolina, as Mr. BRISTOW shows, the people were on the side of the National Government. Their misfortune then, as now, was the domination of treacherous and desperate party leaders. These men, for their own purposes, set up the Confederacy, and employed force and fraud to consolidate its authority. Military camps were established wherever the Union sentiment was strong. "The young men of the South," remarks Mr. BRISTOW, were "suddenly transformed into partisan soldiers, armed with shot-guns, rude knives, and sabres, riding recklessly through the country, overawing the Union men of the South"—precisely as they are doing at this moment in Mississippi and in South Carolina.

The same malign influence reasserted itself when the rebellion had been crushed. The great body of the people, ruined by a conflict into which they had been forced against their will, were eager to cultivate friendly relations with the North. They were prepared to accept the altered condition of things in good faith, and to address themselves to the restoration of their ruined fortunes with energy and good will. The old rebel leaders once more played upon the prejudices and passions of the South. They assailed the Republican policy as intended to degrade and oppress the white man and to enforce the social equality of the negro; and they sought to reorganize the politics of each Southern State in harmony with the purposes of the Democrtic Party. What followed? Instead of regulating by loyal law the political and civil rights of the freedmen on a basis of justice and kindness, they withheld from him by State action the plainest rights of humanity. "Under the guidance and leadership of the same men who had controlled the South before the war," Mr. BRISTOW truly says, "the States proceeded to reduce the negro to a condition little better in any respect, in some respects far worse, than absolute slavery." The Legislature of reconstructed Mississippi for instance, forbade the negro to become a proprietor of real estate. In every conceivable way, that and other States closed against him the avenues to civilization and business. Even in Kentucky the negro was ineligible as a witness against a white person. The fifteenth amendment, which Democrats, North and South, condemn as wanton interference with State authority, thus became a necessity. Its incorporation into the Constitution has been made a pretext for exciting the prejudices and hates of the Southern whites, and for building up once more the "solid South" as an ally of the Northern Democracy, and as a power to be used for forcing back the negro to a condition but one degree removed from slavery, whenever Democratic supremacy in the Federal Government shall assure to the States the power they covet.

The effect of this persistent cultivation of ante-bellum notions and passions is traced by Mr. BRISTOW in various forms. Injury to the material interests of the South is one of the most palpable consequences. The whole South languishes for the want of capital. Skilled labor and business enterprise find no home there. Education is neglected. The ravages of war are still unrepaired. "The old Southern politician again secures his election to Congress and to State offices by croaking over the unhappy condition of the South, which he falsely ascribes to the Republican Party and the people of the North." The real cause, as Mr. BRISTOW shows, is the blind submission of the Southern white population to party leaders, who extol the Democratic Party as the party from whom the reversal of the results of the war may be expected. Allegiance to the State is still upheld as superior to allegiance to the nation. The North is depicted as an enemy, and the Southerner who is in sympathy with it is ostracized and menaced. The curses heaped upon Gen. LONGSTREET exemplify the fate that awaits the most gallant defender of the Confederacy if he now candidly accept the situation. There can be no return to prosperity or genuine peace so long as this old spirit lasts. And it will last until the South rid itself of the leadership of the men who precipitated the civil war, and who appeal to the prejudices of race and section for the most ignoble purposes.

In so many words Mr. BRISTOW tells the South that its grievances are of its own making. The obstacles that stand between it and prosperity are the handiwork of its own people, misled by the politicians who are responsible for all its calamities, and relying for relief upon the delusive promises of the Democratic Party. The only hope of improvement which the South can reasonably cherish presupposes an abandonment of the idea that a "solid South" can dictate terms to the Union, and an honest alliance with the North in giving effect to the legitimate and inevitable results of the war.

A "SPONTANEOUS DEMONSTRATION."

On the 24th of October, Mr. SAMUEL J. TILDEN, in the calm and cloistered seclusion of his home, otherwise known as "palatial residence," in Gramercy park, was surprised by a letter from Mr. ABRAM S. HEWITT. It has been observed that when there is mischief afoot, Mr. HEWITT writes a letter to Mr. TILDEN, and Mr. TILDEN replies with striking promptness. Exactly what HEWITT wrote on this occasion is not known. Probably he said, "The Republicans are raising old Harry about the Southern claims, and will beat you on that layout, unless you show your hand quick. No time to be lost. Write a good Jesuitical letter, and that'll fix them." So TILDEN wrote a letter, which, for a wonder, he did not sign with SINNOTT'S name, but his own. It was to this effect: "I could not pay the rebel debt, nor for emancipated slaves, because these are forbidden by the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution. As for any other claims, I should veto all bills for damages incurred by disloyal citizens during the war. Let by-gones be by-gones. Let us have peace." This is practically all that the illustrious SAMUEL said, though he did go into the question of amendments to the Constitution at some length and with considerable elaboration. He also said that he accepted the amendments, which is certainly very handsome of him.

It will be observed that TILDEN did not deny that the Democratic Party is largely in favor of the payment of losses "incurred" by Southern claimants. He only promised that he would manage the party and put a muzzle on the jaws of "the wolf gaunt and hungry" which he has been keeping in his menagerie ever since his nomination at St. Louis. A day or two after this, several prominent persons, who are supposed to speak for the population of Kentucky, published a card in the World, in which they said that they had learned with mingled grief and surprise (as Mr. TILDEN had) that it was charged that certain Southern claims had been filed in Congress with an expectation of payment. Following in the footsteps of Mr. TILDEN, these ingenuous gentlemen declared that debts incurred in support of the war and by emaucipation were barred by the Constitution, and that compensation for all other injuries to their property caused by the war is "prohibited by the law of nations." All that they desire is "peace, prosperity, and just government." This was well calculated to soothe the perturbed spirit of those who believe that Messrs. MCCREARY & CO., signers, are the State of Kentucky, and that things are not what they seem. These noble sentiments were echoed, one day later, by sundry persons professing to represent the State of Alabama. Strange to say, the card of the Alabamians, also published in the World, was precisely like that previously purporting to give the spontaneous utterances of Kentucky. Not a noun, adjective, conjunction, or comma was changed. Then Tennessee came to the rescue with her solemn asseveration that she had learned that it was alleged that certain Southern claims had been filed as aforesaid; but that it was understood that debts, as before described, were barred by the Constitution, and that "peace, prosperity, and just government" were all that Tennessee wanted. This document was signed, among others, by H. Y. RIDDLE, who as a member of Congress, has already introduced a bill directing compensation to be allowed for the use and occupation of property by the United States Army during the late war. A prominent feature of that bill is the reference of all such claims to the Secretary of War, who is to pay each bill on the affidavit of one person.

Kentucky, Alabama, and Tennessee having made haste, with happy coincidence of language, to assure the people of the United States that the rebel debt and compensation for emancipated slaves are barred by the Constitution, and that they were pining for "peace, prosperity, and just government," Arkansas next put in an appearance with a precisely similar document. Strange to say, Messrs. GARLAND, BEAVERS, and others protested, in the name of Arkansas, that the often-mentioned debts and payment for emancipated slaves were barred by the Constitution, and that they, too, only asked for the aforesaid peace, prosperity, and just government. By this time the printers in the World office began to swear that the thing was getting monotonous, and Mr. TILDEN, who has a weakness for reading the newspapers, sent for his "head nincompoop." Pointing to the latest edition of the well-worn card, he said: "See here; it isn't possible that you have been sending out a blank form of demurrer for those people to sign?" The head nincompoop bowed lowly and replied, "Even so, my lord." The indignant candidate cried: "I said I wanted something spontaneous and telling, and you have sent out printed headings like a poor widow's subscription paper or a scheme for a raffle! Every individual idiot has been made to say the same thing, in the same words, that every other idiot has said." Then the head nincompoop made reply, "But we could not trust them to say just what they thought." And he went away dejected.

He was right. It was necessary to evade the main point. The danger is not that the debts barred by the Constitution will be paid, or that damages "incurred by disloyal persons," as crafty TILDEN puts it, will be paid. The people who are asking for damages to property amounting to two thousand millions of dollars claim to be made loyal by act of Congress. They are ready to swear that they were and are loyal, and a Democratic House is ready to pass a bill which shall give the ex-rebel claimants just the same status in the courts at law and with the Government as that maintained by men who fought for the Union. Under the ruling of the Democratic House Committee on War Claims, the use of the words "loyal" or "disloyal," as applied to these claims, is obsolete. If a Democratic President and Congress come into power, these claims will all be paid—not as to "disloyal persons;" that term will be blotted out, but as to claimants who will not be required to furnish any definition of their status. Therefore, Mr. TILDEN is quite safe when he prattles about the amendments to the Constitution. Therefore Kentucky, Alabama, Tennessee, and Arkansas have led off with a stereotyped evasion, and other States will follow to-day, to-morrow, and next day.

A DISMAL PROSPECT.

Mr. MALTHUS achieved what has hitherto been an unenviable fame by announcing the theory that the population of the world increases so rapidly, that were it not judiciously thinned out by war, pestilence, Spitz dogs, and Quimbo Appo, it would become so enormous that the globe could not afford sufficient food for its support. Had Mr. MALTHUS contented himself with merely announcing this theory, he would not have aroused any ill feeling; but unfortunately for himself, he suggested that with a view to retarding this rapid increase, it would be well if the majority of persons were to abstain from marriage. This suggestion at once aroused the bitter rage of his countrywomen, who proved so firm and persistent in their hatred of the enemy of marriage, that even men who recently believed in the Malthusian theory, have been compelled to sacrifice that philosopher on the altar of domestic peace, and to unite with their wives in abusing him as a cold-blooded and inaccurate monster.

Time, which occasionally condescends to get something right, has at last shown a disposition to do justice to MALTHUS. Mr. HAWKSLEY, an English statistical person, has lately had the courage to assert that the rate of increase of population of the globe is really greater than MALTHUS asserted that it was. He shows that whereas, in 1801, the population of England was only 8,892,356, it had reached in 1871 the comparatively enormous figure of 22,712,266. Assuming that it will increase in the same ratio in the future, Mr. HAWKSLEY confidently claims that at the end of five generations England will contain 400,000,000 of people, and that in fifteen generations more the world will not be able to contain the Englishmen who will be striving to gain a foothold in it. Of course, other nations, such as the Germans and the Americans, will grow in numbers at nearly the same rate as the Englishmen, and hence, at a much less distant period than the twentieth generation, our miserable little planet will have to announce that it contains standing-room only.

That Mr. HAWKSLEY'S figures are accurate, provided his data are correct, no one can doubt who has the slightest knowledge of the use of the slate. The only question is whether he is not mistaken in supposing that there will not be a sufficiently great increase in the death-rate to counterbalance the increase in population. The affirmative of this question is maintained by an English journal which endeavors to belittle Mr. HAWKSLEY'S calculation, and which calmly refers to an alleged fundamental law, "that nature corrects her own excesses." If this alleged law means anything, it means that sickness, intemperance, and war can be trusted to keep down the surplus population. But in England, during the last twenty years, these causes, combined with emigration, have only produced a loss of fifteen persons in every 10,000, while the mean annual increase has been nearly 1.35 per cent. Nature will have to show a great deal more energy and intelligence in the use of war, gin, and cholera if she intends to correct her future excesses in point of population, and there is not the slightest reason to suppose that she will do anything of the kind. On the contrary, it is the boast of thoughtless and short-sighted philanthropists that the death-rate in civilized countries is constantly diminishing. The growth of knowledge concerning sanitary laws has already rendered it improbable that any great epidemic, such as the plague or the cholera, will ever again visit England, while the efforts that are constantly made in opposition to intemperance, and the growing reluctance of intelligent men to permit political quarrels to lead to war, must have a very decided effect in decreasing the death-rate. It is safe to say that there is no evidence whatever of the existence of the pretended law that "nature corrects her own excesses," and it is not honest in any journal to try to answer Mr. HAWKSLEY by so shallow a pretext.

Unless figures lie, and slates are unworthy of any confidence, we may make up our mind that at the end of, say eight hundred years, the world will be as full as are the Centennial Exhibition Buildings on a "cheap Saturday." But long before this intolerable crowd shall have covered the surface of the earth, the population will have become so dense as to render it impossible for any man to find a quiet spot where he can sit down to read his morning paper without constantly tripping up his fellow-citizens with his extended legs. In less than two hundred years the population of Rhode Island will have grown to the alarming number of seventeen hundred Spragues, with whom the State will be packed as tightly as a sardine box is packed with fish. About the same date the swarming ADAMS family will burst the boundaries of Massachusetts, and spread like an avalanch over the surrounding States, while Long Island will be inhabited by a population of countless POPPENHUSENS, who will constantly charge themselves increased rates of fare for riding on their own railroads. New-York City will have extended its suburbs to Lake Erie and Lake Champlain, and hundreds of new courts will have been constituted expressly in order to issue injunctions against rapid-transit railroads. The growth of Chicago and crime will have reached the most appalling dimensions, and the Democratic Party will have so clearly perceived the impossibility of making and keeping the volume of offices commensurate with the necessities of office-seekers that it will cease to strive for political supremacy, and will devote its undivided energies to reforming the hen-roosts and corn-fields of the farmer.

Fortunately few of us, with the exception of the perennial Mr. BLUNT, will live to see the year 2676, in which the crowded world will be unable to admit the thinnest newcomer. We can therefore bear to contemplate the terrible picture of the future which Mr. HAWKSLEY has unveiled. To Mr. MALTHUS this long-delayed vindication of his theory would bring exceeding joy, were he only here to read and study Mr. HAWKSLEY'S figures; and if there is any truth in spiritualism, we shall soon have the ghost of MALTHUS chuckling in the EDDYS' Cabinet, and writing "I told you so" on Mr. SLADE'S slate.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN.

The tax receipt frauds are so stupendous as to be startling even in this campaign of fraud and Democratic rascality. To rob a State of its vote by means of 50,000 fraudulent votes, is a crime of unheard of magnitude and unparalleled infamy. It could be attempted under the management of no Presidential candidate except the man whom the last Democratic candidate for the Presidency held responsible for the gigantic New-York election frauds of 1868.

The distrust of Tilden by the merchants, capitalists, and bankers of New-York, will have a most powerful influence on the pending election throughout the United States. Most of the names of the men who have been impelled to come forward in support of the nation's credit and the party which upholds it, are known and honored the country over. A corrupt candidate, who is thus condemned at home by his neighbors and those who knew him best, intelligent voters will say, is not fit to rule over them.

Will any of Mr. Tilden's friends point out a single work of reform, which "the life-long reformer" engaged in before 1871, when he was nearly sixty years old? He said in his letter of acceptance that he had been engaged for forty years in concerns of Government. This must mean helping to run the party machine in New-York, for until he became Governor, Mr. Tilden never served his country or the State in any official capacity whatever, except for one term in the State Assembly, where he was conspicuous by his absence.

Intelligent men who still believe that Gov. Tilden is really sincere in professions of reform, should look up the Message he sent to the Legislature last session, vetoing the Convict Labor bill. This measure, it will be remembered, was one authorizing the County authorities of New York (the Commissioners of Charities and Corrections) to employ the convicts and paupers in their charge in some useful labor, exactly as Albany County has done for twenty years and more. The bill was carefully drawn up, and its passage was urged by the Prison Association, by both the Senate and Assembly investigating committees, and by numbers of gentlemen who had acquainted themselves with our prison system. On the other hand, there was some clamoring against the bill by certain trades-union leaders and others, who, through Senator Morrissey, urged the Governor to veto it. The great Reform Governor did veto it, and the Message he sent in on the subject is perhaps the best commentary on his claims as a "Reformer" which has ever been made.

In the extended pro-slavery argument addressed in an open letter to Judge Kent by S. J. Tilden, he argued that the Republican Party "has no moral right * * * to elect a President in a constitutional manner by its votes," because this "new and startling phenomenon", was chiefly a Northern party. When the great lawyer thus expounded the Constitution in 1860, he little anticipated that the nearly unanimous vote of a "solid South" would be all that would save from utter enemy his defeat in the Presidential campaign of 1876.

The Tilden party organs are confounded by the bomb-shell of the business men. The whole Confederate Democracy are so stunned that they know not what tack to take. Question the standing of the citizens who signed the Evarts call, they cannot. Impugn their motives, they dare not. Assail their characters, their interests permit them not. It was just such a proclamation, only far less weighty, from the business men of this City, that started the stampede from Greeley. It is such a stampede that Southern shot-guns will not arrest. Wade Hampton's legions may silence the voice, at the ballot-box, of poor negroes, but not the voice of the business men of New-York.

Gov. Tilden claims to have saved the State large sums of money and reduced taxation. During his entire term the Senate has been Republican; during the past year both Assembly and Senate have been Republican. The only way in which he, as Governor, could have saved the State anything under these circumstances was by the use of the veto power. Let him, or any adherent of his, point out a solitary veto by which the State has been saved a dollar. There is not one; but he did veto the Convict Labor bill, which was intended to make our penal institutions self-supporting, and he gave as a reason for this that a self-supporting prison was a "red spectre" to honest workmen.

It is all right now, and the country is safe. Mr. Tilden has promised, when he is elected President, to veto any Southern claims, when not satisfied of the loyalty of the claimant. But then Mr. Tilden is the gentleman who declared in his "Kent letter" that the nation had no right to coerce a seceding State; that the principles upon which the Republican Party were founded were "philanthropy run mad;" that the Republican Party "had no moral right to elect" a President; and, finally, referring to Mr. Lincoln, that "our only hope must be that, as President, he will abandon the creed, the principles, and the pledges on which he will have been elected." This record is not encouraging, except to Southern claimants.

The latest sponsor of the Democratic Party is an eminently respectable foreign gentleman whose career in the United States has been equally successful in "society," politics, and finance. It will be remembered that before he took the National Treasury under his special care, he held a private contract with the Ring in this City, by which he was to place the new bonds intended to consolidate the Municipal debt. The bonds were worth 115 in open market, but by great exertion he managed to "place" several millions where they would do most good at the rate of par in currency, thus causing, according to the Evening Post, "a sacrifice of at least three-quarters of a million of public money." Who can doubt that on a wider field this success would be still more distinguished.

One habit of Gov. Hayes' whole official life has been never to postpone until to-morrow any business that can be disposed of to-day. If asked to grant an interview, to write a letter of introduction for a friend, to examine official papers, or to do any other thing at a convenient time, his invariable answer is, "I will do it now." His theory is, that the way to transact official business is to transact it and get it off your hands. Then time is not consumed in thinking about it, and you are ready for what comes next. This most marked characteristic of the man shows his great executive abilities, and his remarkable decision of character. As the chief executive officer of a State, the Governor of Ohio has no superior in the United States.

Here are some specific "reforms" in the Civil Service, made by the Confederate brigadiers of the House of Representatives. Over thirty Union soldiers, most of them maimed, are removed, and Confederate soldiers fill their places. John Barclay, the accomplished author of "Barclay's Digest," is removed to give place to an inexperienced Southern sympathiser. John James Platt, the poet, the competent Librarian of the House, a purely literary man, is superseded. Fitzhugh, Door-keeper of the Rebel Congress, an illiterate blatherskite and a notorious rascal, is made door-keeper of the Democratic House. Hambleton, guilty of the barbarism of naming a son after Mr. Lincoln's assassin, is made Clerk of the Committee of Ways and Means. L. Q. C. Lamar, late of the Rebel Army, is made Permanent Chairman of the Democratic Caucus. Messrs. Corcoran, Harvey and Mason, three widely-known Secession sympathizers during the war, are elevated to the dignity of resident members of the Congressional Democratic National Committee. The Private Secretary of Speaker Kerr had served in the Rebel Army. Even Thurman, on the Senate side, has for the Clerk of his committee a former secessionist; and Senator Ransom, being entended the courtesy of naming an Assistant Door-keeper for the Senate, selects a Mr. Howard of the Rebel Army. There is not a square Unionist in office at Washington by Democratic appointment.

POLITICAL NOTES.

How long will it take Tilden to realize that the men he has set to shovelling dirt uselessly on the banks of the canals at the tax-payers' expense are digging his political grave?

Tilden's papers in New Orleans are accusing the Republicans of "infamous and diabolical schemes," because means have been taken to ascertain whether certain persons, claiming to be resident at particular places, actually reside there.

The Tildenites begin to realize that they have claimed too much. Already the Albany Argus is crying out in alarm. "Stand by the regular nominees," it shrieks. "Congress is to be close in any event," it admits; "the Assembly is also to be close in any event." And it belabors the men "deriving patronage from the Democratic Party," (!) who are "false to duty and recreant to party obligation." In this contest recreancy to the Democracy will be fidelity to country.

The Republican State Committee of Florida has issued an address saying it has received trustworthy information that evil-designing men in the southern counties of Georgia are preparing to invade Florida in armed bands on the day of the election to intimidate Republican voters and to stir up riots. The committee calls for immediate action to thwart their nefarious designs, and gives ample warning to the Tilden desperadoes and bullies of Georgia that if they cross the line for any such purpose they will come at their peril.

Dr. Horace M. Paine, of Albany, has withdrawn his acceptance as a Presidential Elector on the Prohibition ticket, as he has found that that "party's" canvass is not confined to a discussion of temperance matters, but is directed chiefly to assailing Republican candidates, and conducted in the interest of the foes of the professed issue. He says: "I earnestly hope that no Republican will throw away his ballot by voting the Prohibition ticket, or place the triumph of the Republican ticket in jeopardy at a time when its success is essential to the prosperity of our country."

Speaking of the canvass in Louisiana, the New Orleans Republican says: "The press and speakers of the Republican Party have been decorous and respectful to their opponents. The Democracy has refused to recognize Republicans in debate. The Republican orators have been everywhere orderly and patient under invective and violence. The Democratic orators and followers have, in many parts of the State, inflicted shame, wounds, and even death upon the humble and helpless, while they have ostracized every white man who has manifested even sympathy for the Republican cause. The Republicans have made every effort to introduce Northern capital and numbers into the State and city. The Democracy has rebelled both by intolerance and intimidation.

BOLSTERING A BAD CAUSE.

THE LAST TILDEN SLANDER NAILED.

THE DETECTED KNAVES IN PHILADELPHIA ENDEAVORING TO OFFSET THE TAX-BLANK DISCOVERY BY A DESPERATE SLANDER—ALLEGING A $300,000 DEFALCATION IN THE PHILADELPHIA CITY TREASURY WHERE EVERY DOLLAR IS ACCOUNTED FOR.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—The Democracy of Pennsylvania are becoming desperate, and in their desperation are resorting to schemes of fraud and the circulation of slanders which recoil upon themselves with crushing force. To offset their being caught in the great tax-blank conspiracy, an elaborate story has been set afloat and telegraphed far and wide that Mr. Peter A. B. Widerer, the City Treasurer of Philadelphia, is a defaulter to the extent of some $300,000. This is a most malicious slander, as the facts stated below show. On Oct. 6 dispatches were sent from Harrisburg to the New-York Sun, Pittsburgh Post, and Philadelphia Times, to send correspondents to the Pennsylvania State Capital, and there receive full particulars of a great fraud practiced by Treasurer Widerer, of this city, so that the scandal might be published simultaneously throughout the country. The newspaper men went, examined the affair, and one and all refused to touch it. In addition to its being published in the papers, it was to be gotten up in circular form and sent into Ohio and Indiana, for the purpose of showing what great rascals the Republican office-holders were. But this, for some unexplained reason, was not done, and hence the story was held back to act as an offset to the first trick in which the Tildenites got caught. On Oct. 9 Mr. Widerer received from Auditor General Temple a statement alleging that he was a defaulter, and had not turned into the State Treasury over a quarter of a million dollars which had been collected by him from the mercantile tax appraisement. Immediately the following dispatch was sent to Harrisburg:

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9, 1876.

Hon. J. F. Temple, Auditor General, Harrisburg:

Statement received. Please send deputies immediately with minute instructions as to what vouchers you require.

P. A. B. WIDERER, City Treasurer.

On the 11th of October Messrs. Benjamin M. Read and John McMurray, clerks in the Auditor General's Office, came here, and the Treasurer opened his books, showed them every account, and offered to furnish any voucher they might require. They spent one day, and on the 12th came into the office, and stated that they were satisfied no such indebtedness ever existed, and told Mr. Widerer to make up a statement and bring it up to Harrisburg, saying that he and State Treasurer Rawle could settle the whole matter in five minutes. Then they returned to Harrisburg, saw Mr. Rawle, and stated to him that there was nothing in the charges. The matter was then dropped, and the false charges would never have been published but for the exposé of their fraudulent schemes.

The facts of the case are these; By a law of the State every retail dealer in the County of Philadelphia is required to pay a tax on the amount of his sales. If he does a large business he is classed A1, if a small dealer, he gets in the fifth class and pays a lower sum. The Assessors who collect the names of the storekeepers are paid sixty-two and a half cents per name; consequently it is to their interest to make their lists as large as possible, and they are not always careful to get the dealers properly classified. The original lists, with all the imperfections, are sent to Harrisburg, where an estimate is made on the amount of money to be secured for the State from this source. Very often, as has been the case in this instance, small corner groceries and stores, the sales of which are below the limit fixed by law, have been placed on the list, and they have been marked to pay the regular fee. After the assessments are made the Assessors sit as a Board of Appeals to hear cases of wrong appraisements and make reductions and re-examinations. At these hearings thousands of names are stricken off, because the parties are not liable to tax. During the period of this alleged deficit there were not more than three or four persons out of the thousand who paid a tax over the lowest class. The Democratic Auditor General took the original list, and charged the entire face to City Treasurer Widerer, without making any allowance for exemptions or reductions or non-collections, which are sufficient to cover every dollar of the alleged deficit. The difference in the item of tavern licenses alone, between the amount appearing on the assessment list and the money actually collected, amounts to over $200,000.

The following will show more fully the scheme of the Democracy, taken from the report of Messrs. Read and McMurray, relating to Mr. Widerer's accounts for 1875:

Dr.

In the left hand column will be found the amount of money actually received and due the State, after all exemptions and reductions had been allowed by the Appraisers, and which is correct, while on the right hand is the estimate made up from the original list, before any names had been stricken off. It will be at once seen that this scheme is very shallow, and with the same propriety the City Treasurer of New-York should be charged with filching a million dollars from the treasury-box because the tax board in making out their lists for estimates, say that $10,000,000 will be returned in taxes according to our lists this year, and after appeals for excessive appraisement are heard and corrections made, they find in the corrected list that but $9,000,000 will be secured. The case is the same exactly, and this weak invention of the enemy fails. It was held back and not given to the newspapers here until nearly 1 o'clock this morning, so that there could not be any chance of having it refuted until the fabulous tale had received at least one day's circulation throughout the State. The Associated Press was used at that hour to disseminate the falsehood in a small dispatch which the Democratic State Committee sent, and did not contain particulars enough to make a reply to the scandal. What the next contemptible move of the Tildenites will be remains a mystery, but this shows that they will use all means, fair or foul, in the endeavor to give the Keystone State to the great tax-evader.

POT CALLING KETTLE BLACK.

THE TAX RECEIPTS FRAUDS IN PHILADELPHIA—THE "SHORT-HAIRS" DENOUNCED BY THE "SILK-STOCKINGS"—A RIDICULOUS PRETENSE OF INDIGNATION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—The "silk stocking" element of the Democracy in this city, known as the "Association of Pennsylvania Democrats," held a meeting to-night at No. 1,014 Walnut street, where the paper for the bogus tax receipts was taken to and from, and passed resolutions denouncing the attempt at fraud. One of the resolutions smatters much of Tildenism, and, in view of the recent developments is considerable of a farce. It is as follows:

Resolved, That this association, which was organized and exists with the object of elevating political action, distinctively and positively asserts its abhorrence of all crimes against the purity and fairness of elections, of which the one now alleged to have been attempted is an example.

The remainder of the resolutions denounce the men who were caught in the job, and thus the "Silk-stocking Party" tabooed the "Short-hairs," who conduct the elections, and without whom there would not be such a party in this city. Josephs, Marcus, and McGewan, while not members of the club, are allowed the use of the rooms, hence this shriek of virtue and of having clean hands is but hollow mockery.

THE INDIAN CAMPAIGN.

A MILITARY CONSULTATION IN WASHINGTON—GEN. SHERIDAN EN ROUTE FOR THE WEST.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Lieut. Gen. Sheridan arrived here last night, and to-day had a long interview with the President in company with the Secretary of War and Gen. Sherman. The purpose of Gen. Sheridan's visit was to consult the military authorities in reference to the details of the campaign against the hostile Sioux, upon which Gen. Terry is preparing to start. Gen. Sheridan's presence here has given rise to reports that he is to be sent to command the troops in the Southern States. There is no foundation whatever for such reports, nothing in the situation of affairs requiring his services in that section. He left to-night for the West.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

FIGHT WITH SITTING BULL'S COMMAND.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 31.—The Pioneer Press has a special dispatch from Bismarck which says that Gen. Miles had a successful fight, after an unsuccessful council with Sitting Bull on the 21st and 22d of October, on Cedar Creek, killing a number of Indians and wounding many. Gen. Miles' own loss was two men wounded. He chased the Indians about 60 miles, when they divided, one portion going toward the agency, and the other with Sitting Bull toward Fort Peck, Gen. Miles following the latter. Gen. Hazen has gone to Fort Peck with four companies of infantry and rations for Gen. Miles. Sitting Bull crossed the river below Fort Peck on the 24th inst. He sent word to the agent that he was coming in and would be friendly, but wanted ammunition.

OMAHA, Oct. 31.—One hundred Sioux Indians left Sidney, Neb., to-day, en route to the Indian Territory, on a tour of inspection. They will pass through here to-morrow.

TERRIFIC RAIN STORM IN INDIANA.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 31.—The New Albany Ledger-Standard's correspondent at Oleans, Orange County, on the line of the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Railway, sends the following particulars of a fearful rain storm which took place in that region: "It commenced on Saturday morning and continued until nearly daylight Monday morning. The rain was a perfect flood of water, not pouring down, as usual, in drops, but in perfect sheets. The volume of water on the ground was so great, that it resembled a lake. In the town it rose as high as the window-tops, and as yet has fallen but little. In addition to the destruction of household goods, barns, stables, &c., large lots of cattle, horses, and hogs were drowned. At the present time it is impossible to compute the damage which the flood has occasioned, but it will probably amount to $100,000."

LATEST NEWS BY CABLE.

OPERATIONS ON THE MORAVA.

TURKISH REPORT OF THE CAPTURE OF ALEXINATZ—PRINCE MILAN'S DEPARTURE FOR THE ARMY—REPORTS BY WAY OF ST. PETERSBURG—WARLIKE SPIRIT AROUSED AMONG THE SERVIANS.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Constantinople says it is officially stated there that the Turkish troops have entered Alexinatz after several days' fighting.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 31.—Intelligence received here from Belgrade states that Prince Milan's departure thence for the Army has given rise to a conflict between the Servian civil and military authorities. The Turks are marching upon Kruschevatz, and Gen. Tchernayeff is operating with the object of covering that place.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 31.—Reuter's telegram from Belgrade says: "The consternation caused by the news of the fall of Djunis has been replaced by great activity and a strong reaction in favor of continuing the struggle. Minister Ristics in conversation to-day, declared that Djunis was not Servia, and that the Government were determined to resist to the last, even though abandoned by all Europe. He attributed the fall of Djunis to the reinforcement of twenty battalions and eighteen heavy siege guns received by the Turks from Nisch. He said the Turks had been further reinforced by Dervish Pasha's army, which arrived before Javor from the Montenegrin frontier. Prince Milan has arrived at Paratchin, Tchernayeff's army is at Deligrad, and Horvatovitch's command is half-way between Djunis and Krujevatz.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The Standard's dispatch from Belgrade says an order has been read in the streets throughout the day, calling on all able-bodied men to report themselves for immediate service. The Turks lack transportation, and can, therefore, advance but slowly. It is rumored that Italy and Austria have offered mediation.

The Times' Belgrade dispatch reports that Russian officers shot several Servian soldiers on Sunday in their endeavors to check the stampede at Djunis. The dread and hatred of the Servians for their Russian allies have become intense. The levy en masse and M. Ristics' declaration concerning a prolonged resistance are idle vaporings. The Government has neither arms nor money, for newly raised levies.

THE ARMISTICE NEGOTIATIONS.

AN ULTAMATUM FROM RUSSIA DEMANDING A TRUCE WITHIN FORTY-EIGHT HOURS—RUSSIA LOOKING FOR EUROPEAN SUPPORT IN HER DEMAND.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 31.—Today's Official Gazette states that Gen. Ignatieff, the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople, has been instructed to demand the Porte's acceptance, within forty-eight hours, of an armistice and suspension of hostilities. Otherwise diplomatic relations between Russia and Turkey will be broken off, and Gen. Ignatieff, with the whole personnel of the Embassy, will leave Constantinople. This ultimatum of Russia to Turkey was dispatched from Livodia, where the Russian Court is sojourning, to Constantinople yesterday.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—Advices from Constantinople, dated last night, say that the armistice was not then signed, but its signature was regarded as probable.

VIENNA, Oct. 31.—The Political Correspondence, (newspaper,) of this city, publishes a telegram from St. Petersburg stating that the order to Gen. Ignatieff to present Russia's ultimatum to the Porte was dispatched by the Czar direct to Constantinople last evening, and that the Czar was induced to take this step by recent events in Servia, and Turkey's continuing the war notwithstanding the negotiations pending for an armistice.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 31.—Le Nord hopes the European Powers will support Russia's demand, and that the armistice will be signed, but adds that the Porte's dilatory tactics do not facilitate a definative pacification, and will force the powers to redouble their firmness and energy on the question of guarantees.

Reuter's dispatch, dated Constantinople, to-night, states that a Cabinet council was held to-day, and the Ambassadors met at Gen. Ignatieff's residence. According to reports current this evening, there is still some disagreement relative to the details of the armistice.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—A Vienna telegram to the same journal says it is an established fact that before the Russian ultimatum upset all calculations the Ambassadors at Constantinople telegraphed on Monday to their Governments that the armistice was secured. It is believed in official quarters that Russia, in consequence of the sudden advance of the Turks, no longer wishes to have the line of demarkation between the contending parties during the armistice fixed by the positions they might hold at the beginning of the armistice, and that she therefore has taken this sudden step.

The Paris correspondent of the Standard telegraphs that it is stated that the powers have sent a note to Greece, strongly urging her not to complicate the situation by assuming a warlike attitude.

The London Post says it has reason to believe that only yesterday, subsequent to the issue of the new Russian instructions, important peaceful telegrams were received from the principals concerned in the negotiations. It hopes, notwithstanding appearances, that Gen. Ignatieff has not reverted to the original demand for a bare six weeks' armistice, which would only snatch the fruits of victory from Turkey and enable the Russians and Servians to enter upon a Winter campaign. If conditions possible of acceptance are offered, we may feel certain the Porte will accept them. A few hours will show whether Russia means war. The above is prominently printed in the Post.

A Berlin dispatch to that paper says: A gloomy feeling prevails here, although it is asserted in diplomatic circles, that the Porte has already submitted unconditionally to Ignatieff's demands.

A dispatch from Constantinople to the Standard says it is stated on excellent authority that the Sultan, in order to give proof of his liberal sentiments, has finally determined to make Midhat Pasha Grand Vizier shortly.

The Times' correspondent at Vienna says there is no reason to suppose that the Porte will resist the Russian ultimatum and refuse the armistice. Its consent to the latter was expected every moment before the ultimatum arrived. It remains to be seen how far Russia's conciliatory attitude in regard to a conference will be affected by the incident of the ultimatum.

The Times has the following dispatch, dated Paris, Oct. 31, midnight: "It is announced this evening that before the expiration of forty-eight hours, the conclusion of an armistice will be officially notified. A dispatch to the Russian Telegraphic Agency, dated St. Petersburg, Oct. 31, 8:20 P. M., stigmatizes as bad faith the pushing of military operations by the Turkish Government while negotiations are pending and says it is this conduct that has compelled Russia to have recourse to compulsion."

LONDON, Nov. 1.—A dispatch to the Daily Telegraph, dated Constantinople, Tuesday evening, asserts that an armistice for two months has been signed.

A special from Pesth to the same paper says it is stated that a conference has been resolved upon. The members will be the Ambassadors of the six powers. The sole object will be the pacification of the three insurgent provinces, Russia renouncing the idea of their political autonomy and being satisfied with the self-administration defined by England.

ATTITUDE OF THE GERMAN EMPIRE.

OPINION IN ENGLAND AND FRANCE UPON THE EMPEROR'S SPEECH—A MENACE TO FRANCE—ADHESION TO TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The French and English papers are dissatisfied with the Emperor of Germany's statement about European affairs in his speech at the opening of the session of the Imperial Parliament of Germany at Berlin yesterday. The French papers accept it as a direct menace to France. The London Times says, editorially: "It is important to observe that we have notice that Germany abides, and will abide, by its alliance with Russia, and though it will struggle to keep on good terms with the other powers, the Government of the Emperor's nephew and friend will remain most closely knit with the Government at Berlin."

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The Standard's Vienna special represents that the Emperor William's speech at the opening of the Reichstag has produced an uncomfortable feeling in Vienna, and is thought to indicate that the triple alliance is not firm.

MR. GLADSTONE ON RUSSIA.

APPREHENSION OF RUSSIAN AGGRESSIVENESS DEPRECATED.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Contemporary Review contains a paper by Mr. Gladstone reviewing Mr. Schuyler's book on Turkestan. Extracts from this book have been much quoted here by the pro-Turkish portion of the press to show that the Russians have been guilty of barbarities equal to those charged against the Turks, and the subject has excited great interest. The tendency of Mr. Gladstone's article is to demonstrate that Schuyler's work is fair and impartial. A particular extract has been seized upon in order to stir up strife. Mr. Gladstone incidentally deprecates apprehensions of Russia's aggressiveness.

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NOTES.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Times to-day in its financial article says: "Of the bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England yesterday, the sum of £158,000 was for shipment to the United States to pay for cotton."

The next annual conference of the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Laws of Nations is announced to be held at Antwerp on the 21st of August next. The Burgomaster and authorities of Antwerp will receive the Association, assisted by a reception committee from Brussels.

In the Bow Street Police Court to-day Mr Flowers, the presiding Magistrate, after a careful summing up in the case of Slade, the American medium, prosecuted under the Vagrant act, sentenced the prisoner to the extreme penalty of the law for offenses under that act, viz., three months' confinement at hard labor in the House of Correction. Counsel for the defense gave notice of appeal, pending which Slade's previous bail was accepted. The sentence of the court was received with mingled applause and hisses by the spectators.

HALLET, DAVIS & CO. VICTORIOUS.

THE ONLY UPRIGHT PIANO RECEIVING SPECIAL MENTION.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—The fiat of the Centennial Judges in the special instance where they meant to confer the supreme honors for superiority in piano manufacture, is now officially heralded.

The firm upon whom this distinguished eminence has been bestowed, has been contented to await the formal action of these authorities. Messrs. Hallet, Davis & Co., of Boston, had too thorough a knowledge of the worth of their instruments to worry about the result. They placed samples of their Grand, Square, and Upright Pianos in the Exposition last Spring, and then went home. No member of the firm remained behind, nor came on again, to lobby with jurors, or pester Commissioners. There stood the pianos, their own eloquent evidences of supremacy. They needed no hired professional players to concertize them into daily attention. They needed no paid supporters on the jury; no banquets to Commissioners; no intrigue; no "influence." They were kings among their fellows, and they showed it.

As the makers of these peerless instruments were not in the least anxious to toil clandestinely for the honors they knew were sure to come, so have they been in no flurry whatever to make premature and absurd announcements of the result. They could afford to bide the calm decisive conclusions of the Centennial authorities, and to wait undisturbed the official promulgation of the same. How well it pays perfect merit not to fret, is best shown by the following literal transcript of the judges' report, just issued. The Medal of Honor and Certificate of Distinction are awarded the "Hallet, Davis & Co.'s Grand Upright and Square Pianos, for volume of tone, good construction and excellence of workmanship, and because of originality of design and artistic skill in their Upright instruments, with ingenious combination of mechanical devices for securing permanence in tune."

Let the reader note how precise and unmistakeable is the language of the report. It is a distinct and pronounced assertion that their pianos embody all of the most valuable of qualities. Vague and glittering generalities are eschewed, and direct and conclusive phrases set forth plainly the superiority of these instruments, reaffirming the judgment of masters like Liszt, Strauss, Joachim, and others. What could be more desirable than "volume of tone," "good construction," and "excellence of workmanship." The last phrase is the acme of praise, for "excellence" is a natural superlative than which nothing can be stronger or more definite, and the judges knew it. Particularly emphatic is the encomium bestowed upon the Upright piano of this firm's make. So eminently superior were these Uprights found to be by the judges, that they were singled out for specific eulogy. No other Uprights exhibited by the forty or more manufacturers of this country and Europe were found worthy of individual mention. Those of the Hallet, Davis & Co's make had already jumped into phenomenal favor in every American State and Territory by dint of their magnificent and hitherto unknown to Uprights, splendor of tone and durability in tune. This was their first appearance in the arena of an international exposition, and signal has been their victory. Commending specially no other Uprights, the judges award these individual honor for those most worthy and desirable of qualities, "originality of design" and "artistic skill," with pointed praise for their "ingenious combination of mechanical devices for securing permanence in tune." The trouble of keeping Uprights in tune has always been the barrier to the progress and popularity of this beautiful and convenient style of pianos the world over. But, though essayed here and in Europe for years, this essential virtue has been attained by no manufacturers of Uprights, except Hallet, Davis & Co., and the Centennial judges have admiringly recognized the fact. They slight the Uprights made by the leading manufacturers of the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, Italy, Russia, &c., only to fervently indorse those of the Hallet, Davis & Co.'s production. It is unquestionably true that the patented improvements in Uprights owned exclusively by this firm, joined to the experience of the makers and the sedulous care bestowed upon their manufacture, have given them a just predominance which other piano producers can neither equal nor imitate. These Uprights are the sensation of the musical world. They are destined to maintain a deserved and permanent sovereignty as the noblest musical creations of the age.—Exchange.

TO-NIGHT'S GREAT MEETING

HON. WM. M. EVARTS ON THE ISSUES OF THE CAMPAIGN.

THE INVITATION ADDRESSED TO MR. EVARTS BY PROMINENT BUSINESS MEN—A REMARKABLE LIST OF NAMES ATTACHED TO THE CALL—THE MEETING IN COOPER UNION THIS EVENING.

In response to the invitation of prominent business men of this City, Hon. William M. Evarts will this evening address the citizens of New-York on the issues of the campaign, in the great hall of the Cooper Union at 8 o'clock. Hon. William E. Dodge will preside, and on the platform will be some of the most influential of our citizens. Appended is the call for the meeting in full:

To Hon. William M. Evarts, &c., &c.:

DEAR SIR: The undersigned respectfully ask the expression of your views, at a public meeting, at the earliest time that may suit your convenience, upon the bearing of the pending election on the debt, the credit, the national faith, the reform of the public service, and the repose of the country, which we fear are being gravely endangered, while the people are beguiled into a sense of security by unfounded representations and promises.

It has been said that "the safety and wisdom of investment in the funded debt of the Government do not depend upon Presidential elections, in the opinion of European capitalists and bankers, any more than the soundness of English consols depends on whether the Ministry is Tory or Liberal." We do not believe that European capitalists are as indifferent to the lessons taught by our recent history as these words imply; nor that they ignore the fact that the time has passed when the great parties of the Republic were alike devoted to the supremacy of the Constitution and the perpetuity of the Union.

Europe cannot have forgotten that our civil war arose from antagonistic views of the character and powers of the National Government in its relation to the States.

Of that war the world is reminded to-day by the Southern claims already filed in the House of Representatives, amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars, that threaten seriously to increase the national debt, which, despite its large reduction, weighs heavily on the industry of our land.

These claims are urged partly on the ground which was taken by prominent Democratic leaders, North and South, including their Presidential candidate, that the National Government had no right to protect the integrity of the nation by the coercion of seceding States.

It is also to be feared that the election of Mr. Tilden might be regarded as a reversal of the verdict of the war, under which the Southern people would be incited to claim indemnity for their past losses and immunity in any further acts of secession.

Such a radical change in the policy of the Government would, in our opinion, not only impair its credit at home and abroad, and postpone indefinitely the resumption of specie payments, but endanger in the future our peace and prosperity.

Questions of such moment to the American people deserve the greatest consideration on national grounds by the light of history and the National Constitution.

The independency of your political position, your professional and public career, and your wide experience and acquaintanceship both in Europe and America, will give high authority to your views, and make them of the gravest consequence to the country in this hour of peril.

Praying an early and favorable response, we have the honor to be, Sir, with the highest regard, your faithful friends and fellow-citizens,

NEW-YORK, Oct. 28, 1876.

GENTLEMEN: I have had the honor to receive your request for the expression, at a public meeting in this City, of my views on some of the principal questions which enter into the pending canvass for the election of a President and Vice President of the United States.

Although I cannot assent to your kind estimate of the interest or value to the public which the terms of your invitation attribute to my opinions or their expression, yet I fully recognize the obligation of every man to take such part in the public discussions of the election as his fellow-citizens may call upon him to do.

The earliest day which my necessary occupations leave at my command is Wednesday next, and it will then give me great pleasure to offer to the public judgment such considerations as seem to me important and controlling on the topics to which you have invited my attention. I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

WM. M. EVARTS.

To John J. Astor, John Q. Jones, Robert L. Stuart, John A. Dix, William E. Dodge, and others.

MR. LEVI P. MORTON ACCEPTS.

Mr. Levi P. Morton, who has received the Eleventh District Republican nomination for Congress, has addressed the following letter of acceptance to the Chairman of the convention which nominated him:

No. 503 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW-YORK, Oct. 31, 1876.

GENTLEMEN: I am in receipt of your communication advising me that I have been honored by the Republicans of this district with their unanimous nomination for Congress. It is a distinction which I have not solicited, and I am not sure of my fitness for the place. I have never been a politician, have never sought or contemplated holding office, and am, by training and tastes, simply a man of business. If, however, in your judgment, I can serve the district and protect its interests in Congress I shall feel constrained to regard your nomination as the call to a plain public duty which I have no right to shirk.

It is true that I can hardly undertake it without some sacrifice to business interests, but at a moment like the present, when the political situation is so critical, the danger to the public credit and to the welfare of the business community so serious, I believe the Republic has a right to command the services of its humblest citizen, and in obedience to that conviction I accept the nomination you have tendered me. I am, very respectfully, yours,

LEVI P. MORTON.

Alexander M. Eagleson, Esq., Chairman; Gen. Henry E. Davies, Jr., Secretary, Eleventh Congressional District Republican Convention, New-York.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

Gen. Newton has caused two buoys to be anchored in sixteen feet of water off Hallett's Point; one between the Point and Ward's Island, to mark the outer point of the reef, and the other on the western side of the reef. Vessels bound east will leave them on the starboard hand, those bound west, on the port hand.

HOME WORK.

A "Ninth Warder" cannot vote.

To-morrow will be the last registration day in all the cities of New-Jersey.

Major Z. K. Pangborn, of New-Jersey, will speak at a Republican meeting at Sing Sing to-morrow evening.

The Republicans of the First District of Middlesex County, N. J., yesterday renominated Isaiah Rolfe for Assembly.

The Republicans of Elizabeth, N. J., yesterday nominated L. T. Hand for Assembly in the First District, and Moses F. Corey in the Second.

The Sixteenth Assembly District Independent Republican Association met last night at the New-York Assembly Rooms, Twenty-second street and First avenue, and indorsed the Republican State and national tickets.

It is alleged in the Westchester County newspapers, that the Democratic candidate for Sheriff, Robert F. Brundage, is now being prosecuted for selling liquor without a license by the United States officials of the City of New-York.

In Newark, N. J., all the Bank Presidents but one, and all the Bank Cashiers, save two, are Republicans. Of the Directors, 113 are Republicans and 26 Democrats. Among the Savings Bank Managers 90 are Republicans and 45 Democrats.

By an order of Gen. Garfield, Gen. James B. Swain, of Scarborough, has been appointed an "Aide de Camp of the Army of the Boys in Blue, with the rank of Brigadier General," and assigned to duty on the staff of the Commander in Chief.

Prominent bankers and merchants, men of any reputable business or profession, who are willing to act as an escort to the Boys in Blue in the Republican procession on Friday evening next, are requested to meet at the Fifth Avenue Hotel this evening at 8 o'clock.

The Essex County, N. J., Republicans have made the following Assembly nominations: Second District, E. D. Pierson, of Orange; Fifth District, Alderman Wightman; Sixth District, Charles H. Harrison; Seventh District, Elkanah Drake; Eighth District, S. Richards.

The Boys in Blue of New-Rochelle will have a torch-light procession this evening, and to-morrow evening a campaign address will be delivered by Hon. G. A. Brandreth. A meeting will also be held on the night before the election, which will be addressed by Mr. W. P. Fiero.

The Republicans of Westfield, N. J., will hold a grand mass-meeting this evening, at which speeches will be delivered by John Y. Foster, of Newark, B. W. Throckmorton, of Jersey City, and B. A. Vail and J. Henry Stone, of Rahway. A torch-light parade will be a feature of the evening.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of Republicans, at Croton, Westchester County, last evening was addressed by Hon. C. D. Murray, who delivered an able and eloquent speech on the issues of the political canvass. There were present several hundred members of the Boys in Blue organization from Sing Sing and adjoining towns.

Yesterday, on the 1:30 P. M. express from Philadelphia, two gentlemen, who had been classmates, met on the train. One was a Democrat from Tennessee, the other a Republican from Massachusetts. After a few moments conversation it was agreed to take a vote of the train, which was done with the following result: Hayes, 130; Tilden, 41.

William Reilly, who was nominated for Surrogate of Westchester County by the Cooper and Cary organization, has written a letter declining the honor of becoming a candidate for the office. A large Republican Campaign Club has been formed at Newcastle, Westchester County, under the name of the West End Republican Association, and the following officers have been elected: Joseph Archbold, President; Charles Bailey, Charles E. Lewis, William H. Lewis, and Harrison Adams, Vice Presidents; George H. Tilotsen, Secretary; and Josiah Lewis, Jr., Treasurer.

BROOKLYN CAMPAIGN NOTES.

Capt. W. L. D. O'Grady, who has been doing yeoman's work for the Republican cause during the present campaign, made a stirring address last evening to the Boys in Blue of the Twentieth Ward.

Corporal James Tanner is making a splendid canvass. Every day he gains new accessions of friends. The chances of the Boss' man Barre, Mr. Tanner's opponent, are growing beautifully less as election approaches.

An enthusiastic mass-meeting of colored citizens was held last evening at Republican Head-quarters, on Court street. A large torch-light procession, the processionists being colored men, took place before the meeting.

The Mayor has been authorized by the Common Council to pay $500 reward for the detection of any person voting illegally. Over six hundred men are constantly employed in hunting up those who have registered fraudulently.

Abram H. Daily, the Ring candidate for Surrogate will run a long way behind his ticket. Thousands of Democrats who will vote the regular ticket will scratch his name. Mr. Livingstone's candidacy has evoked unlooked for enthusiasm.

The Democrats are willing to trade the national and State tickets for votes in the odd wards. Control of the City of Brooklyn is what the Ring men desire. Republicans should refuse to make any dicker; the Ring should be crushed next Tuesday.

The mass meeting in the Rink, at which Mr. Blaine is to speak, on Friday evening, promises to be the largest ever held in Brooklyn by any political party. The torchlight parade of the Boys in Blue, under command of Gen. E. B. Fowler, will take place the same evening.

Republicans who fail to support Alderman Ray in the Thirteenth Ward, on election day, will give aid and comfort to the Democratic Ring which has fleeced the tax-payers of Brooklyn to the tune of millions of dollars. A vote against Ray is a vote for the Kingsley-McLaughlin Ring.

George C. Sexton, the Ring nominee for Supervisor in the Fourth Ward, will be strongly supported by the McLaughlin influence. Dr. George W. Brush, the Republican and Independent Democratic candidate, should receive the vote of every enemy of Ring rule in the ward.

A large wagon bearing a canvas on which the name of John Delmar is advertised as the regular Democratic nominee for County Clerk is driven about the streets daily. The wagon also contains a bell which tolls in a melancholy way, as if it were sounding Delmar's political-death knell.

A magnificent parade of the Seventh Ward Minute Men took place last evening within the limits of the ward. The Minute Men were joined by several visiting organizations, and a number of beautiful transparencies were displayed. The Seventh Ward will give a rousing majority for Hayes and Wheeler on Tuesday.

William Burrill, the Ring nominee for Controller, like the Boss' man Barre, depends absolutely on McLaughlin for his votes. He has no following. McLaughlin nominated Evan M. Johnson for the same position in the same way, and now Johnson is being sued by the city to recover the funds which he misappropriated.

It is only a question of how great will be S. B. Chittenden's majority in the Third Congressional District. Gen. Dakin was nominated by the Democrats in the hope that his record as a marksman would carry him through. It is said that Gen. Dakin understands the situation and will not spend any money in trying to be elected.

Every business man in Brooklyn should vote for Eugene D. Berri, the Republican candidate for the office of County Clerk. Mr. Berri would conduct the office on business principles, and his election would be a severe blow to the corrupt Ring. He represents the best element in politics, and ought to receive the vote of decent men of all parties.

Every man in Brooklyn who desires reform in the management of the Charity Commission should vote for John Cunningham. Dwight Johnson, whose disinterested services to the people entitle him to belief, says that when Cunningham was formerly a Commissioner of Charity he aided largely in unearthing the frauds practiced by his associates in the Board. The Ring men will have reason for fear if he is elected.

FRAUDULENT REGISTRATION ARRESTS.

On the 13th of October William Stone, of No. 214 East Thirty-eighth street, applied at the Court of Common Pleas for naturalization papers, with one Thomas P. Pino as witness. This witness was rejected by Judge Robinson, and application was then made in the United States Circuit Court and again refused. A day or two ago Deputy Marshal Crowley, who has been especially detailed in these matters, ascertained that Stone had obtained his papers from the Superior Court, one Thomas Keefe acting as his assistant. Yesterday both persons were arrested, and, waiving examination, were held in $5,000 bail by United States Commissioner Davenport to await the action of the Grand Jury. John Bussing, a recognized tramp and quasi resident of the temporary lodging-house No. 508 Pearl street, was arrested yesterday by Deputy Marshal Deubert upon a charge of fraudulent registration, and was committed in default of $2,500 bail by United States Commissioner Davenport.

PREPARING FOR THE GREAT PARADE.

A meeting of well-known citizens was held last night in the head-quarters of the Boys in Blue, in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, to consider a proposition to have the merchants, bankers, and brokers of the Metropolis take a distinctive part in the great procession of Republicans that is to occur on Friday night. It was announced that Gen. Joshua T. Owen had reserved for the merchants a place in the procession between the Boys in Blue and the district clubs. Ex-Senator Laimbeer presided over the meeting, and the following gentlemen were appointed a committee to make arrangements for the proposed parade: Gen. C. K. Graham, Thomas L. James, William H. Laimbeer, Daniel D. Conover, James W. Boyle, George W. Betts, G. Arrowsmith, Sheridan Shook, C. E. Parker, George M. Van Nort, J. Henry Harper, J. M. Wilson, Hugh Hastings, B. F. Sherman, Jonas M. Bundy, D. M. Boyd, S. H. Wales, Thomas Nast, Weeks W. Culver, Sinclair Tousey, William Otis Monroe, Thomas E. Stewart, Horace Waters, Sr., Robert Dickey, J. Herrick Henry, Benjamin F. Manierre, Thomas McMahon, George Jones, M. Wise, Thomas L. Thornell, Augustus L. Brown, Benjamin Franklin, Jacob Hess, M. S. Wise, George N. Hale.

This committee will meet this evening.

THE ANTI-TAMMANY PARTY.

VIEWS OF LEADING MEMBERS OF THE ORGANIZATION—THE VARIOUS CONFERENCE COMMITTEES TO MEET THIS MORNING.

Informal meetings of members of the Anti-Tammany Conference Committees were held yesterday at the office of ex-Senator O'Brien, in the Staats Zeitung building, and at No. 82 Nassau street and No. 23 Park row, and the conviction was generally expressed that there would be but two local tickets in the field on election day, the Tammany and the Republican, and that, with the exception of two or three outsiders, the Tammany ticket would receive the support of the Anti-Tammanyites. Mr. Ira Shafer, Chairman of the Anti-Tammany Conference Committee, issued a call yesterday for a meeting of the committee, to be held at noon to-day, at the office of Mr. George H. Purser, No. 82 Nassau street, for the purpose of taking definite action on the ticket referred to the committee by the County Convention on Monday evening. Controller Green said last evening that he was in the hands of the Independent Citizens' Conference Committee, and should abide by the decision which they might arrive at at the meeting of the sub-conference committees to be held at the Astor House at 11 o'clock this morning. He had been so engrossed with the pressing business of his office that he had had no time to give to the details relative to the attempted combination against Tammany Hall, and had left the matter entirely in the hands of the committee.

Ex-Senator O'Brien was busy all day yesterday conferring with members of the Anti-Tammany organization. He said that the failure to form a coalition was not the fault of Anti-Tammany, but that the organization accepted the situation, and would now work for a ticket which would be formed to best secure the success of the Democratic National and State candidates. Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer said yesterday that the attempts to form a good County ticket would not be barren of good results. These movements had quickened efforts to nominate respectable candidates, and if the work of forming a combination ticket had not succeeded as well as it deserved to, it was not the fault of those who had honestly striven for a successful issue. The German-American subcommittee would be present at the meeting at the Astor House this morning, and would do all that could be done in view of the situation.

Mr. Lewis M. Dorscher, Secretary of the subcommittees' meetings, which have been held at the Astor House, said yesterday afternoon that he did not yet despair of a combination being formed against Tammany Hall. The main trouble had been that the Anti-Tammanyites had shown a disposition to monopolize all the offices. It was not yet too late for an honest, energetic effort to be made by the organizations represented at the Astor House to place a ticket in the field which could beat that of Tammany Hall. Some of the Anti-Tammany leaders said yesterday that it was still possible that the Anti-Tammany, Independent Citizens', and the German-Americans' subcommittees might be able this morning to combine on a good ticket. There had been hasty, inconsiderate, and ill-advised action thus far in many respects, but if the will existed to form a good ticket, it could be done. The subcommittees had had a sharp experience, and if they profited by its teachings, success might yet be achieved.

The Anti-Tammany Aldermanic Convention for the Fourth District met last night and nominated Bryan Reilly and Thomas Wilds for Aldermen.

The Anti-Tammanyites of the Seventeenth Assembly District nominated last night Michael J. Mead for member of Assembly.

The Anti-Tammanyites of the Ninth Assembly District have nominated Charles E. Simons for Assembly.

III. Colonels will assign all uniformed organizations reporting to them a place in line at the rear of their commands.

IV. Citizens residing on the line of march are hereby invited to illuminate their houses.

V. As this is the last parade before election, the General commanding hopes that every member of the division will appreciate the importance of the demonstration, and set aside all other business and parade. Let every man be out.

VI. The following-named comrades have been appointed Aides de Camp: Mr. Bowley, Charles W. Bishop, Walter Thorne, Isaac Van Keuren, J. B. Collins, Henry Montanus, and William E. Richardson.

They will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

By command of Gen. Fowler.

JAMES L. FARLEY, Adjutant General.

MANSLAUGHTER IN THE THIRD DEGREE.

The trial of John Hurley for the killing of Officer Edward Scott, was concluded yesterday in the Kings County Court of Sessions. The court convened at 10 A.M., and Mr. Wernberg, counsel for the prisoner, began his summing up. He spoke until 1 o'clock, when the court took a recess of half an hour. After recess, Assistant District Attorney Moore summed up on the part of the people, and at 3:30 o'clock the jury retired. After remaining out about an hour, they came into court for instructions, and asked Judge Moore if they were to take into consideration the confession made by Hurley to Justice Riley. The Judge answered in the affirmative, and the jury again retired. At 5:40 o'clock the jury returned a second time with the announcement that they had agreed upon a verdict, which was that of manslaughter in the third degree. Prisoner's counsel urged the Court to defer sentence until the first of next week, on the ground that the action of deceased, subsequent to his injury, no doubt hastened his death, and ought to be taken into consideration in passing sentence. This request was refused by Judge Moore, who proceeded to pass sentence upon the prisoner, and in doing so he took occasion to administer to him a scathing rebuke, and to issue a solemn warning to the murderous gang to which he belongs, after which the prisoner was sentenced to imprisonment in the Penitentiary for four years at hard labor.

Albert Cheesman, a copyist, employed in the office of Peter B. Olney, at No. 206 Broadway, was found last evening at the corner of Grand street and the Bowery in an unconscious condition from the effects of a dose of laudanum, which it is supposed he had taken with suicidal intent. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

At a meeting of the Pilot Commissioners yesterday, Gen. Newton exhibited charts showing the effects of the explosion at Hell Gate. The work done was very satisfactory, the depth of the water being greater in some places than the General had anticipated. Dredging the bed of the river will be commenced on Nov. 15.

A large black bear lying dead in a cart at the New street entrance to the Stock Exchange, and bearing a label inscribed, "Coal black bear from the wilds of Seventy-third street—killed by S. M. Mills," created some fun yesterday among the brokers and operators of Wall street. The bear was finally dumped in front of Mr. Mills' office in Exchange court.

The case of Capt. J. L. Grindle, of the ship St. Mark, charged with cruel and inhuman treatment, was called for a second trial yesterday in the United States Circuit Court, before Judge Benedict. By a typographical mistake in the printing of the registry lists, E. Martin Black was represented as residing at No. 190 Bowery, in which no one really resides, and in the verification of the registry his name was returned by the United States Deputy Marshals as that of one who had given an incorrect residence. The mistake thus made has since been satisfactorily corrected, after a re-examination of the registry lists.

Yesterday the Superintendent of the Insurance Department of the State of New-York, Mr. Smythe, called upon Mr. John J. Anderson, the Receiver of the Continental Life Insurance Company, and expressed a desire to examine the books of that corporation. M. the State prosecutor moved the indictment against James Weeden, John Clark, Samuel Collver, Martin Neary, and Richard Goodwin for the murder of the youth Walker in a prize fight. They are all to be tried together. There is much excitement, and there is a rumor that indictments will also be found against several prominent Philadelphians for having been present at the affair.

A woman was yesterday admitted to the Essex County Jail, to visit Timothy Finnan, a burglar, confined there. When she went in she was searched, but nothing contraband was found on her. When she passed out a loaded revolver was taken from her. The attempt of the burglar, Burns, to kill an officer having been frustrated, it is supposed that Finnan had been harboring like designs, and to evade discovery gave the pistol to the woman that she might take it away.

THE DECADENCE OF HALLOWEEN.

The glory of this once popular festival has departed. Its triumphs and rough jollities, festivals, and strange rites are matter of history, and live only in the immortal verse of Burns and traditional lore. The timid Amaryllis of these more prosaic times does not trust her matrimonial fate to the doubtful chance of picking out, blindfolded, the basin of dirty or clean water, or of depending for a "weel faur'd" man on the likelihood of "pooing" at the stroke of midnight a straight-rooted "kail runt." There are still kept up in the western and rural parts of southern Scotland and Ireland some of the rough old games so peculiar to this festival, but all over the world, wherever Scotchmen, Englishmen, or Irishmen are domiciled, the trail of civilization is over them all. Evening parties, with a ring hid mysteriously away in some elegant work of the pastry cook's genius, have taken the place of the great "black pot" full of mashed potatoes and milk, around which the guests gathered and supped, "spoon and spoon alike," until they all become puffed out like plethoric bailies. The rough reel and jig have been replaced by the seductive waltz or pleasant quadrille, and the hilarious "hoohs" and clatter of hob nailed boots, which in olden times made roof and rafters dirle, mingling in inharmonious numbers with the squeaking of a villainous old fiddle have been succeeded by the rustling of silks, the soft breathings of whispered love, or unmeaning prattle, and the strains of the high-toned centennial prize piano forte. Like the curious marriage and funeral customs of old, strange mixture of pagan and Christian, and peculiarly social customs, the old halloween revelries are gone. Even in New-York, among the Scotch inhabitants, they live in the memory only as traditions—pleasant traditions it is true, but never to be revived or re-enacted on this earthly stage. That last night passed over the heads of many who did not even recollect that it was Halloween we doubt not, and in a few years, when the older generation gives place to the new, when modern social customs shall have effectively crowded out of existence the antique pleasantries of older conditions of societies, the "heirs of civilization" will laugh at the absurdities of "the old folks"—and be laughed at in their turn hereafter.

EXAMINING NATURALIZATION PAPERS.

United States District Attorney Bliss sent letters yesterday to the Clerks of the Superior Court and Court of Common Pleas, asking that facilities should be given to the Government officials in the work of detecting frauds in naturalization. Col. Bliss desired that the records of naturalization for the year should be shown to men whom he would send over, in order that they might be able to make a list of the names and residences of applicants and their witnesses. This work was to be done under the supervision of some of the clerks in the Superior Court and Court of Common Pleas, detailed for the purpose. Thomas Boese, the Clerk of the Superior Court, immediately responded in the affirmative as far as the records of this Court are concerned. Supervisor Davenport then sent a number of clerks to make the requisite transcripts. Nathaniel Jarvis, Jr., the Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, responded courteously to Col. Bliss' letter, but said he could not allow the papers to be withdrawn from his custody, since he is responsible for their safe keeping. The papers themselves have not been arranged or indexed, and if disturbed will be thrown into great confusion. Mr. Jarvis said he would furnish Col. Bliss with any information he desired in regard to all cases in which there is the slightest suspicion of guilt. Mr. Jarvis also sent a note to Supervisor Davenport asking the latter to send proper blanks, and he (Jarvis) would immediately set his own clerks at work making out the lists of those naturalized and their witnesses. Judge Robinson sustained Mr. Jarvis in refusing to allow the papers, which have not been arranged, to be turned over to others, over whom he has no control.

POLICE DEPARTMENT AFFAIRS.

The Police Board held a regular session yesterday, at which Superintendent Walling was granted a three days' leave of absence, and Inspector Dilks was assigned to take temporary command of the force. The following resolution relating to the subject of Station-house lodging for tramps and vagrants, was adopted:

Resolved, That indolent, indigent, and vicious persons who habitually and frequently lodge in station-houses, on applying at any station-house on and after Nov. 5, shall be arrested and arraigned before a Police Magistrate and charged with the crime of vagrancy. When a proper charitable lodging institution shall have been provided by proper authority for the accommodation of worthy unfortunate persons who require a night's lodging, such persons, on applying at the station-houses, shall be supplied with a ticket and sent to the care of the managers of such charitable institution.

A copy of this resolution, which was unanimously adopted, was sent to the Commissioners of Charities and Correction for their consideration. A communication from the Naturalization Committee of Tammany Hall, commending Patrolmen John W. Garside and Reuben R. Rogers for efficient service while on duty at the office of the committee, was placed on file. Patrolmen Hugh Martin, of the Fourth Precinct, and W. W. McLoughlin, of the Ninth, were promoted to the rank of roundsmen, and assigned to the Twenty-first and Ninth Precincts respectively.

MR. EVARTS' GREAT SPEECH.

HE DEFINES THE CAMPAIGN ISSUES.

THE ORATOR GIVES HIS VIEWS ON THE LEADING TOPICS OF THE DAY—TILDEN AND HAYES CONTRASTED—RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENT AND CIVIL SERVICE REFORM ADVOCATED—THE SOUTHERN QUESTION TREATED IN AN ABLE AND EXHAUSTIVE MANNER.

The great meeting at the Cooper Institute last evening was a fitting response to the call of the merchants and bankers at which it assembled. Within a quarter of an hour after the opening of the doors not an inch of standing room was to be found in any part of the vast auditorium, while the repeated and prolonged cheering with which every point in the orator's address was greeted showed the deep feeling and thorough appreciation which pervaded the entire assemblage. The meeting was called to order by Hon. John Jay, who announced William E. Dodge as Chairman. Among the prominent gentlemen on the platform were Eliot C. Cowdin, Samuel B. Ruggles, David Dows, Jackson S. Schultz, James Stokes, Samuel A. Duncan, Major J. M. Bundy, William H. Lee, S. B. Chittenden, F. D. Tappan, Judge Noah Davis, Levi P. Morton, Joseph Seligman, Russell Sage, William Borden, William G. Lambert, Charles S. Smith, Charles Abernathy, and many others. After a short address, the Chairman introduced Hon. William M. Evarts as the speaker of the evening. Mr. Evarts was received with prolonged and enthusiastic cheering, and spoke for upward of two hours, dissecting the issues of the campaign in a most masterly and convincing manner. In turn, he contrasted the respective records of Tilden and Hayes, demonstrated the certainty of specie payments under Hayes, and the impossibility of such an event under Tilden, and showed that civil service reform under a Democratic Administration was at once a glaring and a ludicrous impossibility. The necessity and justice of protection to the freedmen was next dwelt upon, after which Mr. Evarts quoted the views of Andrew Jackson upon the questions of nullification and secession, and pointed out that they were in every respect the opposite of the views held by Tilden. The folly and pusillanimity of the loyal North in bringing back their defeated enemies to rule over them was set forth in unmistakable colors. Every point in the speech was cheered in the most enthusiastic manner, and when Mr. Evarts had concluded, crowds of his personal friends pressed forward in such numbers to congratulate him that he was compelled to hold a temporary levee upon the platform.

An incident of the meeting which caused much amusement was the appearance on the platform of the venerable Peter Cooper in the midst of one of Mr. Evarts' most vigorous denunciations of the folly of the unlimited Greenback scheme. Mr. Evarts paused long enough to welcome the distinguished exponent of soft money, and then proceeded with his speech amid the tumultuous cheers and laughter of his audience. The proceedings are given below in full.

THE PROCEEDINGS.

Hon. John Jay called the meeting to order. He said that on behalf of the committee charged with its arrangement he had the honor to announce that the chair would be taken by Hon. William E. Dodge. Mr. George H. B. Hill then read the following list of Vice Presidents and Secretaries, which was accepted by the meeting with acclamation:

The Chairman introduced the orator of the evening, Hon. William M. Evarts. He said that looking around on that vast assemblage, and on the gentlemen who occupied the platform, he saw much reason for congratulation. It was not because it was a political meeting on the eve of a great Presidential election that these gentlemen were present; it was because they occupied the position of financiers and business men, and it was because they were apprehensive of the designs of the "solid South" that they presented themselves in a solid and united delegation. Again, they felt that the maintenance of the Democracy would result in the further issue of a debased currency as against the resumption of specie payment. These gentlemen were present to prevent so great a catastrophe. In view of the great issues at stake, a large number of their fellow-citizens had united in an invitation to their esteemed and honored friend, Hon. William M. Evarts, requesting him to speak on the issues of the campaign. He felt great pleasure in presenting Mr. Evarts to the meeting. Mr. Evarts, on coming forward, was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

ADDRESS OF HON. WILLIAM M. EVARTS.

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN: A wise man has said that "There is a time to every purpose under heaven," and in enumerating the vicissitudes of human affairs, and the varieties of human conduct, to which there was an appropriate time, he has recounted a time to keep silence and a time to speak. [Applause.] The American people have long ago made up their minds that the heat of a Presidential canvass is not a time to keep silent, and is a time to speak. [Applause.] Whether or no, I should have found in special considerations some reason to doubt whether I might not keep silent, and might not speak—yet when the call of these merchants, that make up so much of the prosperity and pride and hope and energy of New-York, assigned to me this duty, I could not but accept it. [Applause.] Nay, more, the development of the canvass and its issues, and the immense stake that turns upon the vote of next Tuesday, have satisfied me that no man who could expect the ear of the country in the least was justified in being silent. [Applause.] Whichever side he should speak, he could not belittle or undervalue the occasion or issue; and if his voice could serve, it should be heard while there was yet time. By the methods of our politics, gentlemen, we are unable to separate the question in the public mind or in the popular vote as to which party it would willingly intrust the conduct of public affairs to, from the other question as to what man or which man of the party that they prefer they would select. Necessarily, therefore, there comes to be a confusion of ideas in drawing distinctions between personal preferences and measures, of the force and faculty and strength of will and character of opposing candidates, when, after all, the real question is and must be which party will you have to take your Government?—to which will you intrust your interests?—where is the safety for the Republic to be found in the period of the next Presidential term? [Applause.] Now, in these contests of ours, so frequent and so familiar, there are always three interests that enlist more or less public feeling and public passion. The first we may dismiss lightly. It is the interest of the officeholders and the interest of the office-seekers—intense and important to them and to their friends, and in the great mass of our offices an element of power and force in the community. But the commotion which these interests in their competition excite is neither very wide nor very deep. They do not touch the public peace nor affect the public pulse. But beyond this, in all these Presidential elections there is an enlistment of the enthusiasm and the admiration of the great masses of the people presumptively for one or the other of the statesmen of the country that are to lead the canvass. These sometimes lead to a great light, and they sometimes stimulate, in solicitude and earnestness the real anxiety that touches the public welfare and are influenced by the public safety. But these gentlemen, we are always sure to find, never carry agitations of the public mind beyond a limit that is quite safe to the public peace and quiet, consistent with the value of the public securities, and after election, when even Henry Clay is defeated, and when Polk is elected in lieu of him, the agitations of the community subside, and parties are lost within the range of equal duty, and the peace of the country is undisturbed, and its public credit is unimpaired. And generally speaking, and in the happy condition in which our country has generally been placed at Presidential elections, what I have now assigned is the whole limit and range of the interests and the excitements that attend an election. And in that sense, and under those circumstances, it is true that a decision by the ballot who shall be President of the United States, carries no more peril to the public credit and the public peace than in England a change from the Tories to the Liberals or the reverse. [Applause.]

THE VITAL ISSUES.

But when there does enter into a canvass—when in the public appreciation there does enter into a canvass—questions that touch at the vital points of the integrity of the Government, the permanence and welfare of the State, then the agitations that attend that question supplant and overwhelm all the lesser questions that make up the staple of political discussions and differences, and the people of these United States determine for themselves and know for themselves whether or not in a pending election these vital interests are included or not. If they are, the people will act up to them; if they are, they will not down at the bidding of any master or teacher, foreign or native. [Loud applause.] I take it that the people of the United States know as much about Liberal and Tory politics as the financial agents of European houses in Wall street. [Renewed applause.] I take it to be possible that in the issues of American politics they know and feel a great deal more. [Applause.] As I have said, when those issues come in, they give the law to the contest, and will redivide lines between the parties—they rally those who think a Northern people are better custodians of the interests that a Northern people maintain [applause] than anybody else can be, even their own countrymen residing in other parts of the land. [Applause.] Sometimes these issues come up late in the canvass. The good temper, the good faith, the honest purpose of the great mass of the American people make them slow to believe evil of any of their countrymen, [applause,] so slow in their past history that nothing but a war that buried a half million of their chosen youth, and exhausted five thousand millions of their treasure, could open their eyes. [Renewed applause.] But we don't need two such "eye-openers" in one generation. [Laughter and Applause.]

At this point the venerable candidate for the Presidency on the Greenback ticket appeared in the rear of the platform, which was the signal for good-natured applause and laughter, that was protracted for fully two minutes. He was received by the Chairman, who invited him to a seat by his side, and Mr. Evarts then stepped back, cordially shook him by the hand. When the demonstration had subsided Mr. Evarts renewed his remarks:

Sometimes these grave issues are stifled until it is too late, and then the nation has to fight its way back to a ground of safety that it silently and foolishly surrendered. [Applause.] There was some danger of that in this canvass. ["That is so."] The South had come to be so exhausted in their strength, and all their animosities were so completely burned out, and their leader, Mr. Tilden, our fellow-citizen, so well known to us, ["Yes, very well",] had been so unwarlike in the past, [loud laughter,] and so hostile to the burdens of taxation, [renewed laughter,] that it was scarcely imaginable that there could be any threat to the public peace any danger to the public credit from advances even unopposed of so peaceful and passive a party as that. [Laughter.] But the American people, after all, when it comes to the point, had rather trust themselves than anybody else. [Applause.] If a bear should propose to one of our backwoodsmen, after he—the bear—had been worsted in a fight, to prove by experiment that the bear's strength had been exhausted and his hatred extinguished, by trying another good hug with him, I think the backwoodsman would prefer that he should try it with somebody else in his place, or in some other form—say with a slip-noose around his neck, to see whether he could throw the bear that way. [Applause and laughter.]

WHAT HE SAYS OF TILDEN.

Well, gentlemen, we are in the midst of a canvass; and simple as the call of the committee which honored me with an invitation is in its terms, no one can fail to see that in the brief enumeration of the subjects of discussion, which may be announced as matters touching the public credit, the public service, and the public peace, we have a Presidential canvass where the issues are of the vital and searching character I have named. I will first say whatever I have to say of the two candidates of the parties; and I will speak first of Gov. Tilden because I shall have less occasion to expatiate concerning him, as you all know him as well as I do. [Applause and laughter.] But I have not one word to say in disparagement of his abilities, which are distinguished; or of the character of his mind, which is very marked. Nor shall I deny that he has performed services of great value to this City when he was fighting the Democracy, [Applause and laughter,] and that he also was doing great service in the State when he was diminishing the taxes of the farmers [renewed laughter]. And I do not doubt that in those spheres of public usefulness he ought to be encouraged and continued by the people of the country [applause and laughter]. There he has made his fame, and whoever interrupts him in reaping the true harvest of these labors, does him no service, and may do the country harm. But the question is obviously very different whether Gov. Tilden at the head of the Democracy, and that Democracy, made up as it is, fighting the Republican Party, is in the same line of usefulness that he was when he was fighting Tweed and Tammany Hall. [Applause and Laughter.] And there is room to doubt whether auditing the war claims of the Southern people will be as likely to diminish the taxes of the farmers, as what he has done in the service of the City Government. Those tickets then produced for Gov. Tilden may entitle him to a ride on some other route, by some other train, but not by this one to the White House. [Applause.] And yet I can conceive an arrangement of the Democratic Party, wherein Gov. Tilden might be usefully and safely its leader, even in the conduct of the great affairs of the Federal Government, but I think the Republicans will prefer to choose a President of their own, [applause,] and that the time has not yet come when they will elect Gov. Tilden and a united South, [applause,] and if the Republicans don't elect them, everybody knows they will never be elected at all. [Continued applause.]

WHAT HE SAYS OF GOV. HAYES.

Now, Gov. Hayes [loud applause] is to me personally, almost entirely, a stranger: but there are some traits in his character, some facts in his life, some purposes in his conduct, which, when once recognized, make him or leave him a stranger to no true lover of his country. [Loud applause.] He is a gentleman of education. Whatever the instruction, or benefit from instruction, I received from the great masters of the law at whose feet I sat, Judge Story and Prof. Greenleaf, the same advantage and the same instruction, Gov. Hayes had. [Applause.] I should have been offended, if I had not been amused, at the flippancy with which some large portions of our Eastern people, mainly, no doubt, Democratic, but a great many Republicans, have felt at liberty to slight the personal claims and merits of Gov. Hayes because they had not heard of him. Well, but he had lived to be fifty-four years old; a man of education and of character, of high principle, of every social and personal virtue, and the people in the city and in the State in which he lived had heard of him. [Applause.] How many people had heard favorably of Gov. Tilden while he was in the secrets and the counsels of Tammany? [Applause.] And when Gov. Hayes, at the age of fifty-four, was discovered and made known to the great mass of his countrymen, and thousands, nay a million, intelligences burned upon his life and record, there has been nothing for him either to explain or explain away [Loud applause.] But let us see what are the traits that an equal people value in their citizens when they offer themselves for their suffrages. Let us compare his war record, for instance, with that of the other candidate. [Laughter.] How many seasons would it have taken to overcome the rebellion if Gov. Tilden, followed by the American people, had fought it on the line that he had adopted? [applause,] and how vast would have been the treasures for distribution among the soldiers and sailors of the war that were fighting for it if his method of replenishing the Treasury had been adopted?" [Laughter.] I will not disparage the record. [Continued laughter.] I take it as it is. But I say that he was not a foremost Captain or General in arms, and when the country was in need he didn't hurry with gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. [Laughter.] That is all I say of him, and it is all that any of his friends claimed for him. Well, now, there are a great many soldiers that become so from professional obligations. There are others, alas! that seek the service to repair a shattered character, and others that cannot find anything less dangerous and more profitable to do. [Laughter.] But I put it to you now, gentlemen, as citizens of New-York, whether, when you find a man in a peaceful profession, in the bosom of a family, with his wife and children about him, possessed of ample fortune, with no military obligations whatever upon him, and that man enlists for the war, and fights his way through it, if he has not done as much as America expects any citizen to do? [Loud applause.] Why, take our fellow-citizens in the organization for which we have so great an admiration, and to whom we owe many a real debt—the Seventh Regiment of this City. [Applause.] I think that all of those gentlemen, and their wives and sweethearts, all thought they had done a brave and manly thing in going in for a three months' service of their country. I think their fellow-citizens thought so too. I did, for one, and I should not think in any company of honest men of depreciating that degree of military service on the part of these gentlemen, surrounded as they are with all that makes home attractive; but Gov. Hayes, with everything about him, enlisted for the war. [Applause.] And, somehow or other, neither in classic times nor since, has there been supposed to be any greater honor than to be willing to die for your country, [applause,] and I think Gov. Hayes, having showed that willingness and that touch of patriotic duty, can never be disparaged in any company of citizens that were in favor of the war in which he fought. [Applause.] But they say he is not a statesman. Well, he has been a very good candidate, [laughter,] and that is all we have to do with him at present. He has beaten, in succession, all the favored Democratic statesmen of the State of Ohio, [laughter;] every one of them, in his own esteem and in that of his fellow-citizens, and of the Democratic Party, thinks himself fit to be a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, and he has beat them all; and it will be a little hard if, when he is running himself for the Presidency against a Presidential candidate that none of those three great statesmen of Ohio of the Democratic Party thought ought to have been nominated, he cannot beat him. But his service has been ample—thrice as Governor of the State of Ohio, and thrice discharging the duties of his office without fear and without reproach. If he will do for us, as President, as well as he did for us as soldier, and as well as he did for the people of Ohio as Governor, we shall be sorry that he has precluded himself from a re-election. [Applause.]

THE ISSUES OF THE CANVASS.

Now, gentlemen, we come to consider some of the topics which touch really the call and the issues of the canvass. And, first, these merchants want to know what the effect on the value of the securities with which their safes are stocked, will be from the election of Mr. Tilden or the election of Gov. Hayes. Now, it is pretty clear that they would not have asked the question unless they felt some doubt; and it is pretty clear that when the merchants and bankers doubt, then the humble people that cannot afford to lose their share in savings bank deposits or life insurances had better be stirring themselves a little. [Applause.] The great fabric of the public credit sustains all values and all interests. [Cries of hear, hear.] It is not the interest of the rich. When the poor man's property is shrinking, and the rich man buys it, the rich man don't lose anything. But when a pall is thrown over the public credit, and anxiety, solicitude, perturbation occupy the minds of the masses of the people, then comes the rush and the crush, and the loss and the collapse, and many never rise from that change in their affairs, produced without their fault, perhaps,—but not without their fault if they have blinded their eyes, from party zeal, not to see the differences to the securities of the country, whether its Government is in the hands of those who carried it through the war and sustained it, or in the hands of those who fought against it and broke it. [Applause.] We have a homely maxim, that "a fool and his money are soon parted," and those who expose themselves by that folly to that loss of property, they come within that maxim, [applause,] and it will neither console their self-complacency nor restore their property to know that so wise and wealthy a man as Belmont thought so too. Well, the two parties, or the one of them that is installed in power, will have to do with the public credit, and it is said that it is not altogether wise or prudent to trust the Republican Party with the further management of your finances, your debt, and your public credit. Well, why? They certainly have managed them pretty well so far. The only serious complaint that I heard for years against the administration of the finances by the Republican Party was that they were paying the debt too fast, [laughter,] and taking too much money out of the people to apply to that object. Well, gentlemen, there may have been some pinch in that; but see what a bold and fearful step it was, facing the opprobrium of heavy taxation, insisting even upon the income tax to pay the debt of the country. [Laughter.] Is it common for public servants to increase taxation with a view of public favor? But the great lesson was to be taught these people that their energies were not crushed by the war, [applause,] that they were not impoverished, and that the slain of the war had not so thinned the ranks of labor, and the defection of the South had not so far reduced the volume of our population and our wealth, but that we could honestly pay our debt, and show that it was not a mill-stone about our neck to invite the other man. [Applause.] There was statesmanship for you. Expose a party to unpopularity, open to adverse criticism; but when the party could point to the expenses of the Government regularly paid, and six hundred and fifty-six millions of the debt discharged, they could face the world of Europe, and they could meet any danger of another rebellion. [Applause.] Well, we have reduced the debt thirty odd millions a year, and we have reduced the taxes three hundred millions—so these merchants say—and it seems to me, that as the possibility of increase of payments of the debt, decrease of interest, decrease of taxation are multiplying on every side, a wise people will let a party that has paid so much of their debt, diminished their taxes so much, add the burden of interest on the unpaid debt so much, go on and do the same thing till they are tired. [Loud applause.] I never knew of a farmer discharging a hand because he dug too many potatoes in a week, and I never heard of a merchant discharging a clerk because he could sell too many boxes of goods to solvent customers. [Laughter.]

THE RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS.

But insensible as any propositions of that kind are, and hopeless of any influence on the public mind, there is another and a grave subject, to wit, the resumption of specie payments. [Applause] Well, now why is it that it is important for a people, especially a people made up of men who work and thrive, and commence with nothing but the capital of their labor out of which to make their fortune—why is it important for them that they should have the value and basis of specie for the measure of their labor? The laws says that the currency, whatever it may be, they shall take for their labor. And when men print currency, it is quite obvious that there is not so much labor in the making of a dollar as there is in doing a day's work. But when gold and silver are the measure of a man's labor, they measure it not by the imprint on the metal, but it is merely a certificate of the Government, so as to be understood by everybody, that it is gold, and how much there is of it. It gets its value from men's labor, because up to the last pennyweight of its substance it is the exact measure of somebody's labor that got it out of the earth. [Applause.] And when men have nothing but their labor in this world, they like to be sure when they part with it that they get a good measure of poor men's labor in return. [Applause.] That is the reason the Democratic party was so wise and so popular before it had occasion to modulate its principles to the getting of office. [Laughter.] It was the hard-money party of the United States. It was the champion of the laborer, of the farmer, of all men who produce by toil a portion of the public wealth. Nothing has discouraged me more than to see the utter profligacy of the party that has thus allied itself, identified itself with the cause of the laboring man and tied down the currency of the country by most useful enactments through a long series of years to the standard of gold and silver, now scouting it as a delusion and a snare, and hoping that the measure of the printing-press shall make the volume of the money that is to pay for the poor man's labor. [Cheers.] I can agree to all diversities of opinion on finance, but I do not know what has happened to these Democrats to change their opinions upon finance. I know they said this Legal-tender act was unconstitutional; I know they said it would never be paid; I know they derided and decried it, and lamented that even in war a people could not pay specie to their soldiers and for the commodities of life. But now we are told that when men say that it is the interest of labor and of honesty that gold should be the measure and the standard, they say it is an oppression of the poor. But the American people are not stupid. There is not a man in the country that does not know a gold dollar is a gold dollar—[Applause]—and that a paper promise to pay a gold dollar is only of value because the gold dollar is expected to come some time or other. [Applause.] You can very easily see that the denomination of paper notes does not amount to much if they are never to be paid. A promise to pay ten dollars, and a hundred—not performed—is not any better than a promise to pay one dollar that is performed, or even a promise to pay a dollar that is not performed. [Cheers.] And I had watched, therefore, to see whether I had overrated the intelligence of my countrymen in this behalf, and I really do not find that there is any danger of the American people being fond of money without intrinsic value, that is made for them by the fluctuating counsels of a parcel of Congressmen, who get the first hand in the distribution of it after it is made. [Laughter and cheers.] Now, does anybody doubt that the Republican Party is in favor of specie payment? Does anybody doubt that Gov. Hayes is in favor of specie payments? Nobody. Isn't it very plain, then, that if you want specie payments, you will get them from Gov. Hayes and the Republican Party? [Applause.] If you don't want them, why, then you have your choice between voting for Gov. Tilden and our esteemed fellow-citizen, Mr. Cooper, [turning toward Cooper and bowing amid great laughter and applause,] one of whom—Mr. Tilden—professes to want specie payment, but not enough to hurt Gov. Hendricks's feelings; [renewed laughter;] not enough to name a time when he wants it, and not enough to lose any votes by wanting it. [Laughter and cheers.] And Peter Cooper—honest man as he is and has been all his life [cheers]—he professes not to want specie payment, and not to want it all the time. [Laughter.] Really, then, gentlemen, when you look at this matter between the two parties, you will see at once that on this question of specie payments there is not any doubt on one side, and there is great uncertainty on the other. Now, the Republican Party passed a bill one of whose clauses was that specie payment should be resumed on the 1st of January, 1879—it is the law of the land to-day—[cheers]—and that the Secretary of the Treasury should prepare to meet that duty, thus imposed upon him, by surplus from the revenue or by the negotiation of bonds at a favorable rate of interest. Now, Gov. Tilden before he entered the currents of Presidential aspiration, thought that that was a good law, and one of the best things about it was its definiteness and certainty, and that the State of New-York ought to go and do likewise at the same time and place. But now he has discovered that naming a day for resumption is an insurmountable impediment to ever resuming. [Laughter.] He says that resuming without preparing is nugatory; and, therefore, that preparing, I suppose, without resuming, is a great deal better. [Laughter.] And he says, although it is a good thing to name a day on which you will start on a voyage, or a journey, it is a great embarrassment to know when you will arrive at the end of it. [Merriment.] I suppose his fear is that the steamers or the locomotives that are expected to draw people through in regular time will be apt to burst their "bilers" in doing it. [Laughter.] But this is not according to the common sense of the American people. I should as soon think of Gov. Tilden's ascribing his long unmarried life to the frequency with which he had named the day for it as to have him persuade us that having a certain time within which to prepare confused and embarrassed the preparation. [Laughter and cheers.] The truth is, gentlemen, that this Democratic profession of fondness for paper money, of fondness for Republican unconstitutional rights, has always seemed to me the extreme of political effrontery. [A voice, "Good!"] And I have seen some specimens of political effrontery sometimes, even in parties to which I have belonged myself. [Laughter.] I think, therefore, that the bankers in Wall Street did not need any instruction as to whether the Republicans would handle the finances well or whether they would bring about specie payments. They wanted some shrewd intelligence, if they could find it, that would prove to them that the Democrats would do the same thing; and I confess their application to me to perform that service is a complete failure. [Laughter.] I have tried it over in my mind every way that I could; I have read Gov. Tilden's letter of acceptance backward and forward; I have endeavored to see whether you would get specie payments sooner with Tilden President and Hendricks Vice-President, or with Hendricks President and Tilden Vice-President. I have endeavored to see what there was that should prevent the Democratic Party from submitting to the stimulus of a settlement by the Republican Party as to the time of payment and spending two years after the election of Mr. Tilden, up to the first of January, 1879, in getting ready, and then appealing to a Democratic Congress and a Democratic Senate—if they have one—to extend the time, say for sixty or ninety days, or some such short period. But I have been unable to understand it, and therefore my counsel to the bankers is that the Republicans will take good care of the finances and will resume specie payment, and that the Democrats will do as they shall be advised after the next election. [Applause.]

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

Now under those circumstances, as you cannot advise them after election, I think you had better exercise your function before. [Cheers.] Well, there is another topic of very great interest, too, and that is the civil service—the reform of the civil service. [Applause.] Well, gentlemen, I think the past of the two parties is not altogether satisfactory on that subject. I think that while the Democrats were in power, say up to 1860, they introduced, developed, and expanded, burned into the system of the politics of this country, the doctrine that the civil service belonged to the people that distributed or cajoled the votes. And I do not think that was a good basis of the civil service. Well, now, the Republicans had a great many things on their hands besides attending to the civil service. They suppressed the rebellion. [Applause.] They maintained the institution of the country unbroken, they restored its peace, they have paid off its debt, and they have been found wanting in some degree in their conduct of the civil service. I will not conceal or extenuate their faults; but I would like to compare the record of the Democratic Party with a budget as big as the Republicans have had, before I will prefer the Democrats to the Republicans. [Applause.] They had a budget of sixty or eighty millions before the war. The details of the peculations, and of the reductions which those peculations made from the volume of that revenue, have been spread before the public. Now, before they compare themselves with the Republican Party in the civil service, and the administration of the revenues of this country in that connection, I would like to see them with the budget of three hundred millions to give an account of to this people year after year for twelve years. [Applause.] Or, rather—I will take that back; I would not like to have them have that budget, even for the purpose of making that record. [Laughter.] I would rather concede the point than concede the budget. [Cheers and laughter.] The future question of this country, gentlemen, is precisely that: how we are to curb the power of the immense range of office holders over the politics of the country. They are killing all the statesmen; they are belittling all the issues; they are discrediting all parties; they are injuring all politics. But it is not a thing to be done in a day. The vicious circle has been keenly touched by Gov. Hayes in his straightforward letter of acceptance, [applause,] the vicious circle by which the placemen make the Congressmen and the Congressmen make the placemen, and both leave the people out, has been touched as with a needle by Gov. Hayes, [applause;] and the first ground of my confidence in any physician to cure an ill or heal a wound, is to be sure that he knows what the ill is and where the wound is. [Applause.] Now, I think you may search Gov. Tilden's long letter of acceptance, with candles, and you won't find any declaration that he means to make war on Democratic placemen making Democratic Congressmen, or Democratic Congressmen making Democratic placemen. [Laughter and applause.] He says he thinks their qualifications ought to be carefully scrutinized. [Laughter.] Well, they have always done that. All the talents and virtues that our poor humanity can collect about a man that wants an office won't pass the scrutiny unless he has the qualifications, which the Democratic Party was the first to require and will be the last to relinquish. [Cheers.] But you will observe that it is impossible that the Democratic Party should begin this reform of the public service while all the offices are filled by Republicans. That would be too much for human nature. [Laughter.] That would be a barren victory; that would be a division between fight and spoils that they never have been brought up to. And therefore I see that an eminent Democratic statesman, in an address the other night, has prepared the ground for turning out all the Republicans, not on political grounds, but because they are all liars and slanderers. [Laughter.] Well, gentlemen, we shall always have a reason—I am afraid too much of a reason—from both parties. But the Republican Party has a right to demand of Gov. Hayes, if he is elected, with a whole body of office-holders, speaking generally, of the same political party with himself—they have a right to demand of him—nominated because he was in favor of civil reform; accepting the nomination as given to him because he was in favor of civil reform—that he proceed with the work of weeding out the incompetent and the unworthy Republicans and filling their places with honest and worthy Republicans; and if their number fails, with honest and worthy Democrats. [Laughter and cheers.] That is the war that we are in for. [Laughter.] Now, gentlemen, this question does not much touch the public credit, except in the sense of the public payment of the interest and affection which the people feel for their Government, which has been sorely tried. I won't say during the last sixteen years, but during the last forty years, by the prevalence of what I think a dangerous postponement of the true political wisdom and ability of the country to the interests of what is called in gross language "the machine." But that belongs to neither party. That is the struggle of a generation, and that may be trusted to the party that did not invent it and that has struggled pretty hard to put an end to it. [Applause.] I did not understand that the competition of Gov. Tilden at St. Louis, by which he triumphed over his competitors, turned upon the ground at all that he would not appoint Democrats to office, or that he would apply a rigid exaction of that personal competency and integrity which excluded political issues. I think we must conclude, then, that all people that are in favor of Civil Service reform will find in Gov. Hayes a fearless, open, firm supporter of the principles which will lead to that reform. [Applause.]

PACIFICATION OF THE SOUTH.

And now, gentlemen, I am brought to what would be a third topic of administration as measured and to be expected from one party and the other; I mean, the treatment of that vital question of the pacification of the South, of the pacification of the country, of the preservation of the fruits of the war, of the discharge of the obligations of good faith which the Republican Party has assumed for one of the results of the war; but I am at once admonished that I cannot make the comparison between the administrative action and the administrative promise between the parties, because the Democratic Party, as a party, in its organization, and in its action as a party of the nation, has never done anything except to produce, to prolong, to embarrass the war and to thwart its purpose. [Applause.] I cannot tell what they would do if they undertook the service of protecting these Republican lambs down South; I do not know what they would do with observing the public faith in a debt that has been created in maintaining the Government, and which is a burden on the people. I do not know what they would do in regard to the maintenance unbroken of the right of suffrage, [applause,] a duty to which the white men of this country can never be recreant, [applause,] unless, at least, they are ready to admit that the freedmen are better able to govern them than they are to govern the freedmen. [Applause.] I do not wish to be romantic, I do not wish to be exorbitant, but there is one thing that can stand neither the curse of God or men, and that will be the desertion of the freedmen by leaving them a prey to the rebels. [Great and prolonged applause.] Now, as I do know what the Republicans will do, or wish to do, sometimes faultily, sometimes insufficiently, sometimes thwarted and opposed beyond their strength to overcome resistance, I prefer to advise the continuance of that duty in the hands that have thus far discharged it, and in the hearts that feel the obligation. [Loud applause.] I am, therefore, obliged, instead of pursuing details as to what will be the better course for the voters in reliance upon the administration of this question, to meet at once what includes the whole. Is it safe for the people of the United States to entrust to the Democratic Party,—[Cries of "No, no."]—organized and constituted as it is, led by the candidate that they propose, for your suffrages, with the record of the party constituted as it now is, and of the candidate during the struggles of the war, during the antecedent steps that led to it, during the process or pacification that has followed it—is it wise to trust it to them at all? [Cries of "No, no."] And I mean by that not whether the nicest wisdom would so determine, but I mean whether, if you trust what has been gained by so much blood sacrificed and so much treasure devoted, if you trust that and lose it, when will you ever have blood or treasure to save your country again? [Applause.] Now, there might be a Democratic Party that would include a majority of the thoughtful and honest citizens of the Northern States, led by a candidate who, notwithstanding party prepossessions, had leaped into the conflict of the country and sided himself with the loyal people to suppress the rebellion, but there might be economic issues, problems of finance, problems of administration, that by a measuring class, or that by a large volume of superiority, the people of the United States would trust to that Democratic Party thus constituted and thus made. I am discussing no abstract proposition I am describing no abstract party; I am not saying a word against the thousands and thousands of Democratic soldiers that fought on our side. [Applause.] The thousands and thousands of Democratic voters that voted on our side, [Applause,] and who for ought I know, may be all honestly and patriotically in their judgment, voting here and there, and now and then, with the Democratic Party, the party to which they were allied by birth or by habit. I am talking about a Democratic Party made up in its preponderance, of the soldiers, so far as there are soldiers in it, that voted against the country, and of voters in the mass who voted against the country, and did not help by voice, or word, or support, the maintenance of the great institutions of liberty, the sustenance of the nation, [applause,] and I say that when the people that have gone through these labors, toils, and sacrifices, are by their own vote to determine whether they will reinvest with power the Democratic Party, that, in its constitution and its leadership, is in my judgment wholly undistinguishable in principle or in make-up, from the party that we expelled from power, we are proposing a movement of this people that is intolerable to their self-respect, incompatible with the safety of the country, inconsistent with the maintenance of the Constitution. [Great applause.] It was thought to be a very good lesson of our war, and one that would not be forgotten, that men would fight as they voted; that if the mass of this people were determined that Abraham Lincoln should be President, [Applause,] they would fight until he was President of the whole United States to which they chose him [applause] and they did it. Now, the cool proposition on behalf of the Democracy is made to us that although we would fight as we voted, we won't vote as we fought. [Applause.] Well, gentlemen, we if won't vote as we fought, we will have some reason for changing our vote. We will understand what the issue is, and if, understanding that issue, we make up our minds that we will surrender our character, our conduct, our hopes, our future, why, we will do it, and on good reason; but we won't do it on any such foolish reason as that the Republican Administrations have shown eccentricities, shortcomings, blunders, or faults. It is too narrow an inspection of a house to find these blemishes and then determine to burn it down. [Applause.] Well, now, is the Democratic Party, as now constituted, and as now led, substantially identical with the Democratic Party as constituted and as led when James Buchanan was President and a solid South and a fragmentary North upheld him. Why, where is the difference? I don't think you could search the record of a statesman of the Democratic Party and find a closer analogy between his opinions as declared by himself and the opinions which led the Southern people into the folly of armed resistance to the Government and exposed the Northern people to the toils and labors and sacrifices of its armed maintenance, so close as those between Mr. Tilden and Mr. Buchanan. [Applause.]

There are no cerements of the grave about him, but that only proves that it is not Buchanan himself. [Laughter.] There is the same halting between two purposes—the same letting "I dare not" wait upon "I would;" the same imbecility to suppress the rebellion, although you might lament with a flood of tears. Ah, gentlemen, there is the same odor of denationality about him. [Laughter.]

RESISTANCE TO THE GOVERNMENT.

Now, the whole question whether the South could measure their strength and ours, would fly to arms against the Government, was to be solved in their judgment by the question whether the Government would fly to arms against them, and the turning point was by the Democratic Party saying that there was no license in the Constitution to do so, and that the moment a military rebellion took place that was the end of the Union. Well, gentlemen, a military organization—a military threat—is a very easy mode of overcoming the strength of a great people. But the Republican North—did I say the Republican North?—no, the loyal North led by Republicans [applause] determined that the question of whether military rebellion against the Government of the United States could be suppressed, turned upon the question whether the resolution, the courage, and the patriotism of the organized loyalty of the country was stronger than what Gov. Tilden calls the organized rebellion of the country. [Applause.] Well, they tried that, and we proved that we were right. As was said by a lawyer to a client who came to consult him about his brother, and asked him whether he could be put in jail on such a cause of action. "No," said the lawyer, "he cannot." "Well, but," said the brother, "he is; he is in jail now." [Laughter.] Now, whether we did it constitutionally or unconstitutionally, we did it, [applause] and judgment has been entered, and now an appeal is taken; and the Democratic Party, submitting in arms, now says that it is going to show that all that was unconstitutional, and that the consequences of that correction of the law of this land, you gentlemen can judge as well as I, if you are fools enough to have the correction made. [Applause.] I think the judgment we have got is a good one for us, and we will hold on to it. [Applause.] Now, I have said—for I will be guilty of no injustice and no confusion to Gov. Tilden—that the turning point was whether the loyal people of the country would find means, right, authority, and power to suppress that rebellion, and the question whether the South should be urged on to the fatal and irrevocable step of military resistance, was to be settled by the attitude of their apparent allies at the North, in anticipation of the election of Lincoln, and during the period between his election and his inauguration.

Now, I would like to have you understand what the Southern doctrine about this Constitution of ours is. Away back in 1798 Southerners undertook to determine a doctrine by which the Union should last as long as they wanted it, and end when they had sucked it dry. [Laughter.] And this is the doctrine that, as in all other cases of compact, parties having no common judge each party has an equal right to judge for itself, as well of any infraction as of the mode and measure of redress; and that nullification by these sovereignties—that is the States—of all unauthorized acts done under the color of this instrument is the rightful remedy. Well, under the instruction of that doctrine thus prepared, at the end of a generation, they thought they would try it on and nullify on the tariff question. And now let me show you the advantage of having a Democratic President having the views of the Constitution that concur with ours and with those of the energetic mass of the people of the United States, and their triumphant maintenance of the country against the largest rebellion that the world ever saw, [applause,] because of the Democratic doctrine—that the means were found to nip that rebellion in the bud, without its ruffling a hair, or increasing the debt, or sacrificing a life; let us see, then, what might have been done when the rebellion broke out had the incumbent in the Presidential chair had been Andrew Jackson. Now, he is a good Democrat. I never belonged to his party, but he was as loyal to this country as any man who ever lived in it. [Applause.] Now, he says, I have read you the resolution of 1798, and I will bring this down to modern times. "The Constitution of the United States then forms a government, not a league, and whether it be formed by compact between the States, or in any other manner, its character is the same. However it got to be a government, it is one, and it is not dissoluble at will. And, now, supposing the cannon had sent this exhortation to the people that were hurrying to fight against their Government. This is the exhortation which General Jackson addressed to the people of the South. Tell them that, compared to disunion, all other evils are light, because that brings with it an accumulation of all. Declare that you will never take the field unless the star-spangled Banner of your country shall float over you. [Applause.] That you will not be stigmatized when dead and dishonored and scorned while you live as the authors of the first attack on the Constitution of your country. [Applause.] Its destroyers you cannot be. [Applause.] You may disturb its peace. You may interrupt the course of its prosperity. You may cloud its reputation for stability, but its tranquillity will be restored, its prosperity will return, and the stain upon its national character will be transferred, and remain an eternal blot on the memory of those who caused the disorder." [Loud applause.] Away, then, with the notion that we Republicans draw a distinction between Democrats and ourselves in loyalty, in courage, in determination. No, we draw a distinction between the Democrats that are loyal, courageous, and firm, and the Democrats that are disloyal, timid, and base, [applause] and that is a distinction that so long as this is a free country I propose to draw, [applause] and if the Democrats don't like it they cannot like it worse than they liked that exhortation of Jackson. [Laughter,] for I cannot beat that if I were to try all night. [Laughter.] Well, let us see now, [Referring to manuscript.] The Democrats have got down to the year 1852. We cannot complain that that is as remote as 1798. "That the Democratic Party"—this was the resolution at their convention—will faithfully abide by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798 and 1799, [laughter,] and in the report of Madison to the Virginia Legislature in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import." Well, what enormous courage. [Laughter.] Carry out those resolutions in their meaning and import. That is, if the first gun was fired they would all run away. [Laughter.] Well, now, Buchanan came along [laughter,] four years afterward, and lasted until 1860 [laughter,] and he announced from the Presidential chair his views about this resistance to the Government of the United States that Jackson had expressed his opinions about thirty years before. See whether it sounds like Jackson, and when you have seen that, I will ask you to see whether it sounds like Tilden. [Laughter.] "The question fairly stated is: Has the Constitution delegated to Congress the power to coerce a State into submission which is attempting to withdraw, or has withdrawn, from the confederacy, I have arrived at the conclusion that no such power has been delegated to Congress, nor to any other department of the Federal Government." [Laughter.] And he was too consistent a statesman to issue an exhortation in the language of Andrew Jackson, denouncing with thunders of vengeance people who only did what they had a right to do. [Laughter.] Now, Black, then a learned lawyer, and now a learned lawyer, in strict adherence to the Democratic Party, became Attorney General, and he says: "If this view of the subject be as correct as I think it is, then the Union must perish—utterly perish—at the moment when Congress shall arm one portion of the people against another." [Laughter.] So, the moment we flew to arms to defend the country the Union should perish—so Black thought—"for any purpose beyond that of merely protecting the General Government in the essence of its proper constitutional functions." [Laughter.] Well, I don't know what its proper constitutional functions would have been while the whole Southern country was in revolt, and firing guns at it. Probably it would have been taxing the people of the North, and collecting nothing from the South.

TILDEN'S OPINIONS ON THE QUESTION.

Now, we will see about Gov. Tilden, [laughter,] whether he reminds you of Buchanan or of Jackson—[laughter]—whether his constitutional opinions are like Buchanan's or are like Jackson's. On the 26th day of October, 1860, at precisely the same stage in the Presidential canvass that we stand at now, Gov. Tilden, then a private person, but of great credit as a doctor of laws of the Democracy—[laughter]—wrote this letter, wrote it in the very stress of the incipient rebellion; wrote it as he thought it would paralyze the North and make the South triumphant, and wrote it as he wishes now he hadn't, [laughter;] but yet he has not changed a hair of his opinions—not one. Speaking of the States, he said: "Each is organized into States"—that is, the opposing parties—"with complete Governments, holding the purse and wielding the sword, and they are held together only by a compact of confederation." Now, doesn't that sound like Buchanan? [Laughter.] Buchanan did not write his Message that I have read here until thirty days after this letter of Tilden; so Tilden is not the plagiarist; he set the copy. [Laughter.]

"The single, slender conventional tie which holds in confederation has no strength compared with the compacted intertwining fibres which bind the atoms of human society into one formation of national growth."

Now, what an admirable piece of rhetoric that is. [Laughter.] If rhetoric could have allayed the Southern ambition this would have done it. Only think of the South relapsed back into the compacted fibres—[laughter]—which bind the atoms of human society into one formation of national growth! [Great laughter.] Well, they compacted their fibres and united their atoms in the form of squadrons and regiments and all that, which is not exactly a natural growth of a peaceful and civilized community. [Laughter.] Now, "our fathers," he said, "have made our Constitution, and they recognized no right of constitutional secession, but they left revolution organized whenever it should be demanded by the public opinion of a State; left it with power to snap the tie of confederation as a nation might break a treaty, and to repel coercion as a nation might repel invasion." Now, wasn't that an admirable doctrine? [Laughter.] "They caused us to depend in a great measure upon the public opinion of the State in order to maintain a confederated Union. They intended to make it necessary for us, in every reasonable extent, to respect that public opinion." And now we come to the idea that strangled poor Mr. Buchanan: "And especially is this true of a compact of confederation between the States, where there can be no common arbiter invested with authorities and powers equally capable with those which courts possess between individuals for determining and imposing a just construction and execution of the indictment." And now, in order to show that we Republicans did not, even in Mr. Tilden's estimate of us, hold these views, he says—and he says it with regret: "But I cannot fail to see, in the mind of every second man I meet among the Republicans, the prevalence of ideas upon which it is impracticable to administer a confederate Government. [Laughter.] Now, was not that hard on us that we could not see the way in which the Government was to stand, if it depended on the public opinion of South Carolina, and if these organized revolutions existed and there was no right and no power on the part of loyal communities to put it down? While Gov. Tilden was turning his attention to the organized forces of rebellion in disloyal States, some of us turned our attention to the manifest and noble opportunities which organized loyalty in the other States. [Applause.] And it is quite clear that, if you get the patriotism and the courage and the wisdom of a majority, say of the State of New-York, in favor of blows to maintain the Government, then you have got an organized loyalty of the State of New-York that fights with its whole power, and counts against the organized revolution of South Carolina. [Applause.] Ah! but, gentlemen, there was the trying point; there was the question; and Gov. Tilden laid his finger on the very marrow of it to say to the Democrats of New-York, "Touch not with one finger the unholy effort to use force to maintain the Government." And if we had not found a great many Democrats who looked at things as Jackson did, and not as Buchanan and Tilden did, we never should have had the organized loyalty of the State of New-York, but it would have counted on the side of organized revolution. [Applause.] I was one of five men that, on Tuesday after the firing on Sumter, met in a private office in Pine street to feel the pulse of this people and to rouse them and call a meeting; and we did not know whether we dared do it, lest the fewness of the number should be counted and the game should be lost. And then we did not dare to take the Academy of Music for fear our shrunken column would display the bareness of the patriotism in New-York. But by Saturday the 19th we determined that there was no place that could hold the loyal people—the organized loyalty of New-York. [Great applause.] And on the 19th of April we had 100,000 men there, and there would have been 100,001 if Gov. Tilden had been there. [Laughter.] There were 99,999 without Fernando Wood, [laughter,] and he was there. We went on; we appointed a Committee of Safety; we actually manned steamers and raised regiments in our own name, with our own funds, and without the power of taxation, [applause,] and we fought it out on that line on our construction of the Constitution, [applause,] on Jackson's construction of the Constitution. [Renewed applause.] And we have not hesitated to denounce anybody and everybody that thought or wished, or felt on the other side, as Jackson denounced those people. [Prolonged applause.] Now, gentlemen, I have never seen any retraction of these political opinions on the part of Gov. Tilden; I have never seen any retraction of those political opinions on the part of the "Solid South." But if I get the Solid South wishing to dissolve the Union either for interest or hatred, I don't think I have got a very strong barrier against it in their opinions backed by Samuel J. Tilden, [Applause.] If Attorney General Black should be recalled to that office I don't think you would get any very serviceable law to uphold this Government, for he has not changed that opinion.

THE SOUTHERN DEBT.

Now, what have they said in their own behalf on all this trouble about a great aggregation of debt; about the claims of the South; that the debts be paid all around; that losses ought to be borne; that bygones ought to be bygones, and that all matters ought to be settled by putting us on an equality of common ruin, I suppose. [Applause.] Gov. Seymour—and it is the most extraordinary recommendation for a party that is seeking the favor of the suffrages of the citizens of the Republic against the opposite party. Gov. Seymour beseeches his countrymen to confide the executive branch of the Government to the Democratic candidate, because if he undertakes to carry out his principles the Republican Senate will prevent him! [Laughter.] As to Gov. Tilden, he says in his last letter that if the Democratic Congress of his party undertakes to do these things he will veto them. [Laughter.] Well, I understand how you might choose Gen. Jackson because he would veto a bank that the Whigs were for; but I never heard of choosing a President to veto a measure that his party were in favor of. [Laughter.] Indeed, gentlemen, it seems to me as if this Democratic Party, as it comes mincing up to gain the favor of the American people, relies for grace both in its contour and its drapery upon the same thing that our modern ladies' dresses do—the "pull-back." [Great laughter.] And if the "pull-back" should break, as I never knew what would happen to a lady I cannot tell what would happen to them. [Prolonged laughter.] I remember many years ago to have seen a story told by the Ettrick Shepherd in Blackwood's Magazine of a couple of brave Scotchmen who went out boar-hunting, but their point was not so much the prowess of overmastering the savage boars themselves as of getting into their dens and securing the succulent and savory food of the young; and one of them went into the den where he heard the squealing of a litter of young boars, and left his companion Sawney outside to look after the old boar if he should come along. Well, Sawney was brave, but his gun missed fire, and the boar dodged him and got into the opening of the den, but Sawney, with great presence of mind and great strength of body, seized hold of the boar's tail and twisted it around both his hands, bracing his feet against the side of the den. Well, his companion inside, found the light darkened, and called out, "Sawney, Sawney, what stops the light?" Sawney was a man of few words, and had no strength to waste in explanations, but he says, "If the tail breaks you will find out." [Laughter.] Now, I cannot be any more explicit than Sawney was, but I am inclined to think on Gov. Tilden's letter that, if the veto breaks, you will find out what is the matter. Well, now, a boar's tail was never made except for the light and fantastic play—[laughter]—to keep the flies off—[laughter]—and a veto was never made for the hard work of carrying on a Government; and I think that the veto will break, or if it does not, that the resolute and set purpose of the men of strong convictions and strong passions that are to fill Congress with a united South, will break the President if they cannot break the veto. [Applause.] At any rate there is nothing in that story of the Ettrick Shepherd that that encourages us to choose Mr. Tilden President of the United States. [Laughter.] Now, Gov. Tilden won't change these political opinions; they are bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh. He would no more change those opinions than I would change mine, [applause,] who hold that the offspring of our revolution of 1776 was not a litter of feeble States having no tie but that which was severed when they parted from the mother country. [Applause.] I believe that there was then born a mighty and puissant nation, the United States of America, [applause] by the grace of God, free and independent of all the world, including South Carolina. [Great applause.]

WHAT WILL MR. TILDEN DO?

Now, about the ability of people to keep these promises when a party differs from him. See what he thought in this letter about President Lincoln, of whom we all have a very good opinion—had it in life, and we revere his memory as second only to that of Washington. [Applause.]

What will Mr. Tilden do? Can he be expected, as President, to understand the state of things in any other sense than that of his own partisan policy? Can he avoid the attempt to maintain the power of his party by the same means which will have acquired it? Can he emancipate himself from the dominion of the ideas, associations, and influences which will have accompanied him in his rise to power? Well, now, Gov. Tilden certainly would not expect the American people to give him credit for changing his views or defeating his party. That he—speaking in entire good faith, and with entire respect for President Lincoln and the Republican Party—said would be impossible for Mr. Lincoln to do. Then let me give you the advice he gave to people at the stage of the matter that we are now in; for I shall only need to alter the names of the persons spoken of to inculcate the injunction. He thus exhorts his countrymen: "Elect Lincoln and we invite those perils which we cannot measure. We attempt in vain to conquer the submission of the South to an impracticable and an intolerable policy. Our only hope must be that as President he will abandon the creed, the principles, and pledges on which he will have been elected. Defeat Lincoln and all our great interests and hopes are unquestionably safe." Now I will read it: "Elect Tilden, and we invite those perils which we cannot measure. We attempt in vain to conquer the submission of the South to an impracticable and intolerable policy," to wit: the impracticable policy of making them obey the laws of the United States. "Our only hope must be that as President Mr. Tilden will abandon, the creed, the principles and pledges on which he will have been elected. [Laughter.] Defeat Tilden and all our great interests and hopes are unquestionably safe." [Applause and laughter.] Now, gentlemen, we Republicans made a record and we incurred the hatred of a great many of our countrymen, and we were scorned and derided by the public opinions of many aristocratic classes in foreign society. We triumphed, and everybody recognized the power of this country, its strength, knew that it was a nation and had as much power to keep up its nationality as God had ever given to a nation in the world. [Applause.] Now they ask us—the same men that have demonstrated this—to bring back the same people and the same President that we expelled, defeated, and defied. A nation never did that, a nation never will do that. True that the English nation recalled the Stuarts, and bore a shameful penance for twenty years for doing so. But then it was the Army and the aristocracy that recalled them, and not the Puritans and the Commonwealth men. [Applause.] They did not vote that the Stuarts should come back. Human nature is the same. Whatever credit you may give to President Tilden, as he seeks to be, for purposes and for character, he cannot do what the party in Congress won't allow him to do. It will be in vain that he says: "I came in by the votes of many excellent Republicans, who trusted that bygones were to be bygones, and nobody was to be disturbed, for I told them so in a letter, [laughter,] and now you are raising the old storm over their heads." "What do we care for that!" they will say. "Were not our heads bowed to the Republican storm for years under what you have described as an unconstitutional coercion of a State that would snap the feeble tie of confederation, and aggregate itself in atoms according to natural growth!" [Laughter.] What did the Stuarts do? Brought in by people tired of the Puritan rule; Cromwell dead—Cromwell, that stood to England as Lincoln stands to America—[loud applause]—Cromwell, by the universal consent of the present generation of Englishmen the greatest ruler that ever wielded the power of England since Alfred—Cromwell dead! Cromwell dead! and feeble councils of Presbyterians that were not Puritans and of an Army that was neither Republican nor Royalist, at length brought back the Stuarts; and Charles had promised that when he came back bygones should be bygones, and religious toleration should prevail, and nothing but peace and happiness should reign in merry England. But what was the result? On his return the Parliament was crowded with Tories, and Courtiers, and Royalists, and Macaulay, in a few words sums up what came of the King's words, and of bygones being bygones. "The King, therefore, made a feeble attempt to restrain the intolerant zeal of the House of Commons, but that House was under the influence of far deeper convictions, and far stronger passions than his own. After a faint struggle he yielded, and passed with a show of alacrity a series of odious acts against the Separatists," and so on, the Commonwealth men, and the godly men, and the Ironside Regiment, and all the stout defenders of civil liberty and religious freedom in England were ground under the heels of the restored Stuarts. And Cromwell—the dead Cromwell—was exhumed, his head cut off by the executioner and displayed over Westminster Hall, the home of justice in England—that head—the greatest in England while alive, and the most terrible lesson to all feeble lovers of liberty that liked to bring back the foe that they have banished. [Applause.] Now the manners of the time have changed in England and here. Such revolting barbarity will never be practiced; but the scorn, the undying contempt, which the banished slave power will deal out to us loyal people if, after having had the courage, the purpose, and the fortune to rescue the country from them, we by our willing vote, having the question in our own hands, decide to let them back. The old parliamentary doggerel describes all the wisdom and prudence of the situation:

"Methinks I hear a lion in the lobby roar—
Say, Mr. Speaker, shall we close the door;
And keep him out, or let him in,
And take our chance to get him out again?"

[Laughter.]

Well, gentlemen, I think you have concluded that I don't consider that either the public credit, the public faith, the public fame, the public peace, the public government, the public people of the United States of America would be as safe under Tilden as they would be under Hayes. I answer these merchants and bankers in the gross. That is my opinion of the prudent choice between the two. [Applause.]

I cannot occupy your attention to-night into the late hours, [Cries of "Go on, go on,"] with all the details by which, if not an absolute drowning of the public credit, a continual threat of that drowning would infest our securities in all the markets of the world. But I will put it broad and clear that a people that by the suffrage having had the courage of their opinions of the Constitution, and having differed from Buchanan and agreed with Jackson, and fought it out on that line, [applause,] and then vote back a President that agrees with Buchanan and meets the denunciation of scorn that Jackson would shower upon him were he alive—[Great applause.]—that nation loses stability of purpose, courage in civil matters, prudence in affairs of State, and although fighting brings out the great qualities of a nation, fighting don't improve the price of its bonds. [Applause.] Well, Gov. Tilden can not be made President of the United States [cries of "No, never; no copperheads"] in any view of the canvass, without the vote of the State of New-York. He cannot carry the vote of the State of New-York unless by the vote of the people of the City of New-York and its neighborhood, and you, citizens of New-York, not only now wield that power of opinion that belongs to your wealth, your intelligence, your enterprise, your connection with the industry and the prosperity of all the land, but you have got the actual hold of the power itself, and as you determine and as you act from now onward to the 7th of November, at sundown, will the determination be whether this City will throw such a majority as overcomes the vast preponderance in the rural portions of the State. [Applause.] I speak as to wise men—Vote for Tilden, if you please, but vote knowing what will happen, and what you are doing and will have done.

I have never thought it possible that my countrymen, with the issue developed before them in time, could ever reproduce the phantom of Buchanan's likeness in the Presidential chair. [Laughter.] It may be that on the 14th of April next, the anniversary of the firing at Sumter, and the anniversary of the murder of Lincoln, Gov. Tilden may, by the voice of a free people, be its great Chief Magistrate; but I will not believe it beforehand, and I shall never have occasion to believe it afterward. [Laughter.] It may be, but I don't believe it, that the people of this country, with this record of the political opinions of Mr. Tilden, and this record of the party that is behind him pressing him on your suffrages, may clothe him with the purple of their powers—may put the golden chain of their public favor about his neck, and may applaud him as the man whom the people delighted to honor; but I don't believe they will; and if they do, the depth and measure of their repentance it is not worth while now to insist upon.

MR. EVARTS INVITED TO SPEAK IN BROOKLYN.

The following invitation was sent last evening to Evarts:

Hon. William M. Evarts:

DEAR SIR: Encouraged by your acceptance of an invitation to speak to the people of New-York City on the great issues of the day, we, the undersigned citizens of Brooklyn, do most respectfully ask that you address a similar meeting of our citizens to be held at the Rink on next Friday evening at 7 o'clock. Recognizing the fact that you enjoy the confidence of your fellow-citizens to a greater extent perhaps than any other private American citizen, we cannot well overestimate the extent and influence of your counsel and advice on the issues now before the American people, and hope you will do us the honor of accepting our invitation.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

A dispatch from Grenada, Miss., says a fire at that place Tuesday night destroyed sixteen business houses on the west side of the square and on the west side of Greene street. The buildings destroyed were principally frame. Among them were Snyder's Bank, the Post Office, and Lake's grocery.

The old Methodist church on Pleasant street, in Malden, Mass., was burned yesterday. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. Insured for $10,500, which will probably cover the loss.

The works of the Buffalo Hardware Company were destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The loss is $30,000; insured for $17,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A one-story frame building at No. 526 West Thirtieth street, owned by Alexander Caruth, was destroyed by fire last evening. Loss, $1,000; not insured.

The calling of the calendar will commence to-morrow with Case No. 1,614.

THE PROSPECT IN PENNSYLVANIA.

THE OUTLOOK IN DAUPHIN COUNTY AND ELSEWHERE—CONGRESSIONAL ANTICIPATIONS—GAINS EXPECTED IN MOST OF THE CENTRAL COUNTIES—BETWEEN 20,000 AND 40,000 MAJORITY FOR GOV. HAYES.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Tuesday, Oct. 31, 1876.

The Republican prospects in Pennsylvania are improving every day, and the condition of affairs in the interior of the State seems better on a near examination than when viewed from Philadelphia. Harrisburg itself, and Dauphin County, may not do any better than last year, though there is no disaffection here which will cause any Republican losses. John W. Killinger is nominated for Congress in this district, which has long been represented by Mr. John B. Packer, son-in-law of Senator Cameron, who has been an able and popular member. Mr. Killinger was Representative of a district which, in the changes of 1871, was partly absorbed into this one, and he therefore has experience and will be a good Representative. He is sure of election.

The central part of Pennsylvania is, as a whole, Democratic. But there are some very strong Republican counties lying contiguous to some of the most benighted Democratic regions of the State. There is Lancaster County, for example, the old district of Thad Stevens, which may be expected to give a Republican majority of not less than six thousand, while Berks, adjoining, will give even a greater majority for the Democrats. The latest information from the former county shows the certainty of a very full Republican vote, and, in consequence, large gains. As a class the religious denomination of Mennonites seldom vote or take any interest in an election, but this year they will all be out on election day, and when they vote it is for the Republican ticket. Then there are a great number of wealthy farmers in the county who do not trouble themselves to go to the polls, even when a Governor is to be chosen. But they are now alarmed about the safety of their large investments in Government bonds, and they will be active and alert until they have voted for Hayes. Some four thousand more votes have been registered than were given to Hartranft in the county last year. There may be a majority of 7,000 or upward, though that is a pretty large figure. The Democrats have been claiming that Berks would give Tilden from 8,000 to 9,000 majority, but that hope, if it was anything more than a boast, has been "nipped in the bud" by the seizure of forged tax receipts. Berks will this year probably something more than offset Lancaster, though formerly they were always nearly even in their votes. Hiester Clymer will be re-elected in Berks and A. Herr Smith in Lancaster. In York County the Democrats have been claiming 5,000. The information now is that 2,800 or 3,000 is a large allowance. They will make no gains on last year.

Adams County, adjoining York, is Democratic, but will not give any Democratic gains on last year. In Cumberland County the Republicans will gain something. Except in the counties mentioned, there will be Republican gains of more or less magnitude in all the central counties. Possibly Lycoming and the other lumber counties along the west branch of the Susquehanna should be excepted, though the feeling in that region is that there will be some gains. In Lycoming the Republicans hope to succeed in electing their ticket. The best and latest information here is to the effect that the counties east of the Alleghany summit will do quite as well as last year, and excluding Philadelphia, will give a small or perhaps no majority for Tilden. This leaves the majority for Hayes in the State dependent on the result in the counties west of the mountains and in Philadelphia. Of the counties west there are the most encouraging accounts. I learn from a Pittsburg gentleman that the Republican majority in Allegheny County will not be less than 6,000. Some of the Republicans claim that it will reach 9,000. Now, the county is quite able to give the latter number, but the estimates of the State Committee, made within the bounds of absolute safety, place the majority at only 3,000. By the most moderate estimate, Hayes will get a majority of 20,000 in the State. But, by the most recent indications of improvement, he seems quite likely to have between 30,000 and 40,000. The tide has now fairly set for his election, and it cannot be turned. Among the very strong influences now operating here is the position taken by the New-York business men in their address. It is much talked about, and among the mercantile classes is causing a thoughtful examination of financial prospects. I met yesterday a man from the West who does a business of some millions annually in New-York for the firm of which he is the principal member. He had just returned from New-York, where he had been two days, and he informed me that in his communications with a large number of old Democrats he discovered they were much disturbed, and that many of them intend to vote for Hayes or else not vote at all. Reports of the same feeling among business men are brought from Pittsburg and other places in the West.

HARTFORD'S CAPITALISTS ACTIVE.

A CALL FOR A GRAND HAYES AND WHEELER MEETING ISSUED—SIGNATURES OF BUSINESS MEN ATTACHED REPRESENTING ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY MILLIONS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Nov. 1.—Following the lead of the prominent capitalists of New-York and elsewhere, the foremost business men and corporations of Hartford have united in a call for a public meeting to give an expression in favor of the election of Hayes and Wheeler in the interest of peace and prosperity. The call is signed by the officers of the largest moneyed corporations in Hartford, among which are the following names: James Goodwin, President Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company; Lucius J. Hendee, President Ætna Fire Insurance Company; Henry Kellogg, President Phœnix Fire Insurance Company; James G. Batterson, President Travelers' Insurance Company; T. O. Enders, President Ætna Life Insurance Company; E. B. Watkinson, Treasurer Connecticut Trust Company; Zalmon A. Storrs, Treasurer Pratt Street Savings Bank; R. E. Day, President Security Company; J. D. Browne, Secretary Hartford Fire Insurance Company; J. B. Bunce, Vice President Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Company; James Nichols, Secretary National Fire Insurance Company; C. H. Brainerd, President State Bank; J. C. Tracy, President Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank; M. G. Buckeley, President United States Trust Company; T. W. Russell, President Connecticut General Life Insurance Company. In addition are the signatures of the officers of the various banking institutions and of the heaviest capitalists and business men, including Cheney Brothers, Calvin Day, Root & Childs, E. H. Owen, Austin Dunham & Son; Case, Lockwood & Brainerd, and very many others. The capital represented by these business and personal interests is enormous in the aggregate. There are over ninety-three millions of life insurance assets; nearly forty millions in business and individual investments; more than thirteen millions of fire insurance capital, and nearly eight millions in banking, making a grand total of over one hundred and fifty millions of dollars.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY RULED BY SENATOR W. H. BARNUM—HOW THE PURITY OF THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE IS CORRUPTED.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Much surprise is often expressed that so large a portion of the people of Connecticut should vote the Democratic ticket and send two "Copperhead" Senators to represent them in the Senate. It may be accounted for when it is remembered that Senator W. H. Barnum is President of the Connecticut Western Railroad Company, a corporation which he rules with absolute power. He has appointed all the officers, from Superintendent down to trackmen, because they vote the Democratic ticket rather than for their fitness for their positions. He cannot be ousted from the Presidency of the company, although his administration of its affairs has been disastrous, because he controls Mr. Burr, the town agent of Hartford, who votes the stock of that town at all the meetings of stockholders, $750,000 in one vote, which invariably elects the Barnum ticket. Mr. Barnum is also President of the Housatonic Railroad, and controls its policy; his friends fill all the offices. W. D. Bishop, another life-long Democrat, is President of the New-York, New-Haven and Hartford Railroad, and also controls the Naugatuck Railroad and the Shore Line Railroad. He is an intimate personal friend of Barnum, and also of Chapin, of Springfield, also a Democrat and President of the Boston and Albany Railroad. These great corporations have a vast influence in corrupting the purity of the elective franchise in Connecticut, and can always sway vast bodies of needy men to vote as they dictate. Their plans are secretly made and quietly executed by the aid of unlimited financial resources.

A CONNECTICUT REPUBLICAN.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Oct. 31, 1876.

THE CANVASS IN NEW-JERSEY.

GRAND MASS-MEETINGS IN RED BANK—A TELLING SPEECH BY GEN. KILPATRICK.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

RED BANK, Nov. 1.—The grandest mass-meeting ever held in this part of New-Jersey took place here to-day. Gen. Kilpatrick, the orator, was received by 100 ladies on horseback, with gentlemen escorts; hundreds of cavalrymen were in line, and the procession of carriages, clubs, boats, and full-rigged vessels full of ladies, was over four miles long. It is estimated that fully eight thousand people were present. Eleven years ago Gen. Kilpatrick spoke at this place in joint discussion with Hon. A. J. Rodgers. The people remembered him, and came miles and miles to hear him. Hundreds of Democrats were present, and all say that such a speech has never been heard in Monmouth County, convincing Democrats and firing the Republicans with enthusiasm. A grand evening meeting was held, which was addressed by Mr. Labroke, of Maine.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC REPUBLICAN MEETING IN A DEMOCRATIC STRONG-HOLD.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEWTOWN, Nov. 1.—The largest assemblage of the voters of Sussex County during the campaign met here to-day in the interest of Hayes and Wheeler. A more orderly and respectable gathering was never convened in the county, and the enthusiasm manifested surpassed anything we have ever seen in this Democratic stronghold. Speeches were delivered by Hon. William Bross, Gen. Thomas W. Conway, and Prof. John M. Langston. Conway and Langston spoke for three hours in the open air and held the hosts in earnest attention. The Democratic leaders look sour and disappointed and may well fear that even old Sussex cannot do much for the Tilden Reform.

RATIFYING THE TICKET.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING IN THE NINETEENTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT—A SOUND CODE OF RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

A grand mass meeting of the citizens of the Nineteenth Assembly District was held last evening at the corner of Seventieth street and the Boulevard, for the purpose of ratifying the Republican National, State, and local nominations. During the progress of the in-door meeting, at which Mr. Andrew Bleakley presided, the Boys in Blue of the district, after their parade, assembled in the square opposite the building, where they were addressed by Prof. Hunt. The Secretary of the in-door meeting read the following series of resolutions, which were enthusiastically adopted:

We, the Republicans of the Nineteenth Assembly District of the City and County of New-York, in mass-meeting assembled, recognizing the importance of the questions to be decided by the American people on Tuesday next, and believing that the issues are such as are vital to the continuance of good government and public morality, national prosperity and individual happiness, are hereby

Resolved, That we affirm our belief in the great principle announced by the immortal Lincoln, illustrated in his life, and made glorious in his death, that Republican Government is not a failure; that we reaffirm our allegiance to the Republican Party, our fidelity to the principles advocated by it, and our determination to make those principles coextensive with American institutions and laws; that we point with pride to the abolition of slavery, to the enfranchisement of millions of Americans heretofore held in bondage; to the crushing out of armed rebellion and the restoration of the reign of law; to the successful solution of the great questions growing out of the war; to the enforcement of the national authority over territory in rebellion thereto; to the confidence created among foreign nations in our national honor and integrity; to the peace and prosperity that have followed the strife of armies; and to it, for the perpetuation of these principles, we shall rally to the support of Rutherford B. Hayes, William A. Wheeler, Edwin D. Morgan, and John A. Dix, all gentlemen of acknowledged ability, unimpeachable records, and fitting candidates for the suffrages of the people.

Alderman Henry E. Howland was then introduced, and delivered an effective speech, in which he contrasted the records of the two parties and their respective nominees, and exposed the hollowness of the Reform pretensions of the Democratic presidential candidate. The speech was followed by a stirring address from Mr. George W. da Cunha, the Republican candidate for Congress in the Ninth Congressional District. The meeting adjourned soon afterward amid general enthusiasm.

GEN. WOODFORD ADDRESSES AN IMMENSE MEETING OF ALLEGANY COUNTY REPUBLICANS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WELLSVILLE, Nov. 1.—The largest meeting ever held in this town, which is the largest in Allegany County, was held to-day at the wigwam. No such gathering has ever been seen here. The side of the wigwam had to be torn out, so that the people who crowded outside unable to get in could hear. Gen. Stewart L. Woodford was the sole speaker, and he held the attention of the audience for two hours with one of his most eloquent and convincing speeches. He treated of the money question in his logical and masterly way, and, as there are three hundred Cooper votes hereabout, he is known to have done much good. He spoke also on the reform and Southern questions. In conclusion, he assured his hearers that the frauds in New York are to be squelched, a fact over which the country voters are greatly excited.

Mr. Woodford's reception was of the most flattering kind, and his speech has surely made many Republican voters.

POLITICAL NOTES.

One of the candidates on the Democratic State ticket in Massachusetts having resigned, the State Committee has adopted the nominee of the Prohibition Party. Extremes have met there.

The Secretary of the California Republican State Committee recently wrote: "California will give a majority of at least six thousand for Hayes and Wheeler. I write knowingly. The members of our Central Committee have thoroughly canvassed the field, and know how matters stand."

J. G. Carlisle, a Tildenite candidate for Congress in Kentucky, said in a recent speech: "I deny that the United States is a nation. It is a vicious system that has destroyed sovereign States and oppressed nine millions of people in the South. If a State has no right of secession, she certainly has the right of revolution."

A Missouri paper has this statement: "C. H. Morgan, the Democratic candidate for Congress in this district, said in a private conversation in McDonald County, that were he a private citizen, and not a candidate, he would frankly admit he would be afraid to trust this Government in the hands of Samuel J. Tilden. But, being a candidate, he would not dare to speak his honest sentiments."

Edwin Porter, Esq., a life-long Democrat, made a speech at Albion on Friday night last in opposition to the election of Tilden to the Presidency. He showed how, since he became Governor, he has labored to make the Democratic Party a Tilden party only; and proved by the records that his boasted reform is a sham and a fraud, and an insult to the intelligence of the working people of the State.

A business man in South Carolina writes: "The Democratic club appointed a 'high-toned' committee to wait on me to tell me how to do business." And further, "I should have voted for a white government in South Carolina, but I say now, incompetent negroes are better than murderers, or those who try in every way to defend and clear them when arrested. They can take the life of a negro as coolly as they would that of a beast."

THE EASTERN COMPLICATIONS.

AN ARMISTICE SIGNED—THE PORTE AGREES TO A TWO MONTHS' CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES—RUSSIA'S ULTIMATUM ACCEDED TO.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—There are various reports concerning Turkey's reply in regard to the armistice. Reuter's telegram from Belgrade is as follows: "It is said that Servia has accepted the two months' armistice, which has been agreed to by Turkey, as already announced." The Vienna Tagblatt in a special edition publishes a dispatch from its correspondent at Belgrade, according to which the Porte is willing to accept an armistice of any length, but demands information beforehand as to the conditions of peace.

The Pall Mall Gazette, to-day, prints the following very prominently: "We believe the statement that an armistice was signed yesterday to be incorrect. The Russian ultimatum seems to have interrupted arrangements, on the point of completion, when it arrived. In all probability the signature is only delayed."

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Standard's Belgrade dispatch declares the statement fully confirmed that the Porte has agreed to a two months' armistice, with power to renew it for six weeks. The same dispatch reports that Kruschevatz is in flames. The Post says, editorially: "We understand that the Russian ultimatum is couched in peremptory terms, and is accompanied by angry language. The Sultan is required to sign an armistice for six weeks or two months, and the Porte is informed that its conduct in continuing hostilities while negotiations are pending is strongly resented."

The Times' dispatch from Belgrade confirms the report that a two months' armistrice has been agreed to. It also states that the levy en masse has been countermanded, and the Turks have entered and burned Krushevatz. Whatever may be the result of the negotiations for a permanent peace, Servia will fight no more, and Russian volunteers are not likely to come again to fight for her.

The Times in its leading editorial says there is every reason to believe that an armistice is already agreed upon.

The Vienna correspondent of the Times says, as a proof of how far things had gone before the ultimatum was sent, the Porte, before its receipt, had confidentially informed Abdul Kerim that an armistice was concluded, and hostilities should cease on Nov. 1. The arrival of the ultimatum seemed to surprise Gen. Ignatieff as much as any one. It is reported that a third of the Russian privates, and half of the Russian officers in the Servian Army, have been killed or wounded. A special to the Daily News from Paratchin reports that Gen. Tchernayeff is still at that place with Prince Milan.

A Belgrade dispatch to the Daily New. and a Constantinople dispatch to the Telegraph assert that Turkey's offer of a two month's armistice with a six weeks prolongation, is a counter-proposition to Russia's ultimatum. The Telegraph's correspondent says Ignatieff rejected the Porte's offer, and gave the Turks forty-eight hours from Tuesday night to reconsider the matter. He adds that the archives and furniture of the Russian Embassy at Constantinople are being rapidly shipped to Odessa, and the Russian Consuls in Turkey have been ordered to move within reach of the frontiers. The correspondent of the Daily News at Belgrade states that great apprehensions are felt in the upper circles of Servian society of internal troubles. A dispatch to the News, dated Paris, Wednesday night, says: "It is reported at the Turkish Embassy here that no answer to the ultimatum is expected until Thursday evening. At the French Foreign Office a peaceful solution is confidently expected."

THE WAR IN SERVIA.

A DESCRIPTION OF SUNDAY'S BATTLE—DEFEAT OF THE SERVIAN FORCES—COWARDLY SOLDIERS—MONTENEGRIN SUCCESSES.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The correspondent of the Daily News with Gen. Tchernayeff's Army telegraphs that journal a description of Sunday's battle and the position of affairs afterward. The following are extracts: "The Turks fought with a dogged pertinacity and occasionally with a brilliant dash which claim the highest admiration. The Russians fought hard and stoutly, but then the Russians had borne the brunt of fight after fight in this very position, and as for the Servians, it was not their day. The full weight and significance of the Servians' defeat is not easy to estimate, and it is too early to form an opinion of the loss incurred. We do not know where the troops are, to say nothing of the wounded, many of whom, I fear, will never be brought in. The Deligrad wing of the Army is in a condition of demoralization and at least temporary depression. Gen. Harvotovich, with the right wing, is retiring out of reach of the Turks, and it would be folly for him to offer battle. The Russian officers are leaving. They decline to be massacred for people whom they denounce as destitute of all martial spirit. They have no words to express their contempt and disgust for the pusilanimity of the Servian soldiers. The whole territory in the Morava Valley south of Paratkin is in course of universal evacuation painfully accelerated by incorrect rumors of Sunday's losses, no estimate of which can be formed, because most of the Servian battalions are more or less disintegrated, and nobody can distinguish between killed, wounded, and missing, the latter being stragglers. Many wounded must have been left on the field of battle."

A Ragusa dispatch says: "The Montenegrins are bombarding Podgoritza. The Montenegrin army has penetrated into Albania by way of Medun, cutting the communication between Podgoritza, and it is reported that the Turks have entered Deligrad."

CARDINAL ANTONELLI DYING.

A CONSULTATION OF PHYSICIANS HELD—HIS CASE DECLARED HOPELESS.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The often repeated rumor of Cardinal Antonelli's critical condition, which has been again circulated the past day or two, there now seems reason to apprehend is well founded. A Reuter dispatch from Rome says: "Cardinal Antonelli is dangerously ill. The members of the diplomatic body went to the Vatican yesterday to inquire as to his condition." A special dispatch from Rome to the Daily News says: "Cardinal Antonelli is dying. His Holiness, the Pope, on Sunday ordered a consultation of physicians, who declared the Cardinal's case hopeless. His relatives were summoned to his bedside and found him unconscious."

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NOTES.

A GRAT MARITIME CANAL OPENED—THE DEMAND FOR COTTON IN EUROPE—A REVOLUTION IN JAPAN—AFFAIRS IN SPAIN.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 1.—The great maritime canal, connecting this city with the German Ocean, was opened to-day with imposing ceremonies, at which the King, members of the Cabinet, and foreign representatives were present. A grand banquet took place this evening. The city is covered with flags; there is a general illumination to-night, and splendid exhibitions of fire-works are given. The canal is sixteen miles long, and has at the sea end a harbor covering 250 acres, which, however, is not quite completed.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The Times to-day in its financial article says: "Messrs. Ellison & Co., of Liverpool, cotton brokers, in their annual review of the cotton trade, make a calculation based on figures and past experience, that Europe will next year require 2,241,000,000 pounds of cotton, or 5,602,500 bales. They estimate that the demand will exceed the supply by 145,000 bales. If, however, Europe continues unsettled, the demand doubtless will be less, and the probable supply may exceed the estimates, as reports from the United States frequently do not give a fair idea of the actual state of facts at the outset of the season."

The following telegram has been received at the Japanese Embassy in this city. Some portions of the dispatch are unintelligible to the Embassy itself, but it indicates that serious disturbances have occurred: "The Kumamotto Shisjokus (Lamonre class) revolted on the night of the 23d October, killing many officials. They were soon subdued. The Imperial troops also fought and overcame the Akitsouki Shisjokus near Kokoura. Hundreds surrendered. The Yamagutsi Shisjokus rose and escaped. Orders are issued for their arrest."

A lighter, laden with 200 barrels of petroleum, part of the cargo of the Norwegian bark Viking, Capt. Lasmusen, which arrived at Exeter Oct. 20 from New-York, was burned in the Exeter bight to-day.

A Cabinet council has been summoned for Saturday next, the 4th inst.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Standard's dispatch from Madrid reports that Gen. Quesado yesterday held a conference with the Ministers on the state of the Basque Provinces. The army of occupation will be reinforced, and Quesado returns to Biscay immediately. The Conservative press urge an energetic policy against the growing disaffection displayed in the attitude of the Biscayan deputies and towns.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Artic steamers, Alert and Discovery, arrived off Spithead yesterday. The Daily News says: We understand that Mr. Gladstone will contribute to Harper's Monthly for December, a paper explaining his attitude toward the United States during the civil war.

THE DU SOMMERARD SCANDAL.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN MINISTER WASHBURNE AND THE DUKE DECAZES ON THE SUBJECT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The following is the correspondence which has passed between Minister Washburne and the Minister of Foreign Affairs of France, relative to the recent publication of a letter in certain French journals concerning the Centennial Exposition:

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, PARIS, Oct. 28, 1876.

My Dear Duke Decazes:

I have read with amazement the extraordinary letter published in the Figaro of yesterday over the signature of Du Sommerard, who is the General Commissioner of France pres les Exposition Universelles. Were this a letter of a private individual I should deem it utterly unworthy of notice, but being from a high functionary of the French Government, having official connection with the American Centennial Exposition, I should be forgetful of my duty and all the obligations I owe to my Government and to the people of the United States, did I not hasten to denounce to you the charges contained in the letter touching the Exposition, and against my country, its magistracy, and even its women, as the most monstrous calumnies. The substance of the letter has not only been already telegraphed to the United States, where it will excite the most profound indignation among all classes, but I shall deem it my further duty to call the attention of Mr. Fish to the outrageous and slanderous imputation on the American people by the French Commissioner. I am, &c.,

E. B. WASHBURNE.

DUKE DECAZES REPLY.

My Dear Minister:

On the 28th inst. you did me the honor to signalize to my attention the publication of a letter attributed by a journal to the French Commissaire General, near the Exhibition of Philadelphia. I hastened myself to bring this regrettable incident to the knowledge of my colleague, the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, and as early as on the 29th the note inserted in the Journal Official has proved to you how much the French Government preoccupied itself to immediately inquire into the facts, and to give you, in case their exactness should be established, a legitimate and prompt satisfaction. As I had hoped, the letter published under the signature of M. Du Sommorard is apocryphal. That functionary disavows it in formal terms, as you will see by the protestation here annexed, which he has addressed to the Minister with whom he is connected, and which seems to me an answer such as we could desire to the calamny.

I am pleased to think, therefore, my dear Minister, that this categorical declaration closes this regretful incident. No doubt it will seem to you, as to me, ended; and it will have had for its principal result the presentation to the French Government of an occasion to give, by the promptness with which it received your remonstrance, a new testimony of the sentiments of cordial sympathy by which it is animated for the Government and people of the United States. I am, &c.,

DECAZES.

SALE OF BOOKS BY AUCTION.

RARE AND VALUABLE WORKS DISPOSED OF AT RUINOUS RATES—THE COLLECTION OF A CONNOISSEUR BOUGHT BY SECOND-HAND DEALERS.

Messrs. Levett & Co. last night commenced at their art sales room, Clinton Hall, the disposal by auction of one of the finest collections of rare and valuable classical books and fine engravings that has been offered to the New-York public for many years. The attendance of professional book buyers was large and the competition in several instances was keen. On the whole, however, the most valuable books were sold at prices far below their value. The first work of importance offered for sale was the well-known Cadell and Davies (London, 1811,) edition of the works of Addison. This very elegantly bound but most imperfect edition of Addison's works was knocked down for $4 75. A four-volume edition of Alison's "History of Europe," a work "written by a Mr. Wordy," as Disraeli once said, went for ninety cents per volume. Alibone's "Critical Dictionary," a great classical work, was sold, after keen competition among dealers and students, for $10. Two folio volumes of Audubon's "Viviparous Quadrupeds of North America," and three volumes of descriptive text were very sharply bid for, and were knocked down at $19 per volume. Audubon's great and most popular work, "Birds of America," the plates being almost life size, were sold for the paltry sum of $50. After a few elegantly-bound copies of Bacon's Works and others were disposed of at good prices, a splendid edition of Beaumont and Fletcher's Dramas was put up. This edition, (edited by Dyce—publisher, Moxon, London,) is now the only complete one in the public market. Apart from its purely literary merits, the work in eleven volumes, was in splendid condition, bound in full calf, with yellow edges. It was sold for $60, an insignificant price for such a work. The plays and histories of Mrs. (Aphra) Behn, most elegantly bound, went for $3, which partially indicates the lack of taste for this very anti-Tupperian class of literature. A number of well-bound copies of Blackwood's Magazine were sold for a song, and even a ten-volume (Bell & Daldy, of London,) edition of "Boswell's Life of Johnson" only brought $2. A volume of splendid engravings (fifty in number) of paintings of the modern British school, with descriptive letter-press, was sold at $75 50. A magnificent edition of Brome's (Richard) dramatic works, in three volumes, 8vo, went for $4. Some volumes of Bryant's and Robert Buchanan's poems, and Buckle's (Henry Thomas) work on Civilization" were sold at prices far below their value. Evan Allan Cunningham's (1834) edition of the works of Burns, in fine condition, brought only $1 90. The next most valuable book put up was a very fine edition of Byron's works. This large paper and superbly-printed edition was issued by John Murray in 1839, and the edition offered for sale last night was enhanced in value by the addition of hundreds of fine engravings, inlaid in their appropriate place, illustrating the text. There were few bidders for this superb work, and it was finally bought for $18 by a dealer in rare and valuable books. Campbell's "Lives of the Lord Chancellors of England," in eleven volumes, elegantly bound in half-calf, was knocked down at $7 50 per volume. A Baskerville (1761) edition of "Congreve's Plays," strongly bound in mottled calf, with gilt edges, was sold for the paltry sum of $6 50. A superb edition of Davies' "Athenæ Brittanica," in six volumes, was sold for $5 per volume. A set, in three volumes, of "Les Principaux Tableaux de la Galerie Royale de Dresde" sold for $65. The sale will be resumed to-night at 7:30 o'clock.

SERIOUS RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—A serious accident occurred to the Buffalo express train going north on the North Pennsylvania Railroad to-night, at Centre Valley, caused by the breaking of an axle of one of the cars. Three sleepers and one passenger car were thrown from the track. The brakeman and porter were killed, and several others injured. The track will be obstructed for several hours. The wounded are being cared for by a relief train with surgeons sent from Bethlehem.

DASTARDLY OUTRAGE IN VERMONT.

WOODSTOCK, Nov. 1.—At 7:30 this evening, as Myron Emery, aged seventeen, was going to his barn, which is a short distance from the house, he was seized by three masked men, who gagged and dragged him two miles to Silver Lake and threw him in. The men then fled. Emery managed to free himself, and got ashore, where he was found completely exhausted and insensible. The perpetrators of this outrage have not been discovered, and no cause can be assigned for the deed.

STRIKE OF RAILROAD ENGINEERS.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 1.—Three days ago General Manager Canda, of the Cairo and St. Louis Narrow Guage Railroad, notified the engineers and firemen that their wages would be somewhat reduced on and after Nov. 1. To-day the men left their engines without notice, and endeavored to prevent new men from taking their places. One or two trains were stopped, but arrangements will be completed before to-morrow night for the full resumption of business by the road.

GENERAL TELEGRAPH NEWS

TWO POWDER MILLS BURNED.

A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION NEAR XENIA, OHIO—ONE MAN KILLED, AND SEVERAL PERSONS INJURED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 1.—An explosion occurred at the Miami Powder Mills this afternoon, by which one man was killed and several persons badly injured. The mills are situated along the Pan Handle Railroad, near Xenia, Ohio, and consist of a large number of small buildings scattered along the road for some distance. At a few minutes past 2 o'clock mills Nos. 3 and 4 blew up with terrific force, scattering fragments of buildings in every direction, breaking the windows of houses within a radius of several miles, and blowing Michael Deneare, a workman employed in one of the mills, to pieces. His trunk and shattered limbs were found several hundred feet away from the mill. Fortunately very few persons were in or about the mills at the time of the explosion, and such as were, by some means almost miraculous, escaped fatal injury. The concussion was so great that the windows of Antioch College, at Yellow Springs, four miles distant, were broken. The shock was distinctly felt at other towns a much greater distance away. The damage is estimated at $15,000. The same mills were blown up three years ago, and five persons killed. The cause of explosion is, of course, a mere matter of conjecture.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

A SCANDAL DENIED—A SCHOONER LAUNCHED—NAVAL AND MILITARY—SUBSIDIARY SILVER COIN.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Mr. Mariscal, the Mexican Minister to this country, has just returned from a brief visit to Mexico, where he called upon Mr. Romero, his predecessor, and saw him living happily with his wife. He was consequently surprised to learn on his return that a report had been extensively published in the United States that Mrs. Romero had eloped with a libertine in the City of Mexico. Mr. Mariscal does not hesitate to pronounce the report to be entirely destitute of truth.

The Robert Portner, a schooner of about 650 tons Custom-house measurement, was launched at Alexandria, Va., yesterday. Although many years ago, when Alexandria had three ship-yards at work, vessels of all sizes sailing the seas and bringing to her wharves the products of every clime, such sights were common, this is the first vessel of her size launched from a ship-yard in that city, or from any point on the Potomac, for thirty-four years.

MR. LICK'S CONTESTED WILL.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—It has been ascertained that the main grounds on which John H. Lick intends to contest his father's trust-deed are insanity and undue influence on the part of the Trustees and others, who, it is alleged, have used means to prejudice the deceased against his son by falsely accusing the latter of obtaining the passage through the Legislature of a bill providing that no decedent should divide over a certain proportion of his fortune to charitable or other objects, aside from the natural heirs, by which, and other alleged untrue representations, the deceased was induced to leave the estate in trust to the prejudice of the petitioner. The legitimacy of John H. Lick will be made a prominent feature in the contest by the Trustees, and an impression prevails that it will be difficult to prove any action on the part of his father by which his legitimacy can be established.

A LONG JOURNEY.

The Pittsburg (Pa.) Gazette of Monday says: "On Saturday a denizen of the Far West made his appearance in the city, having started from California two years ago to attend the Centennial. The old man was in a dilapidated old wagon, drawn by a pair of dilapidated old horses. The wagon was full of skins of different kinds of fur-bearing animals, which he had taken on the way. He stated that he had started from California two years ago, and had been on the road ever since. He was a hunter and trapper, and he had hunted and trapped along the route, making the journey in easy stages to suit himself. As a result of his two years' journey and labor he had a wagon load of skins, and he was now proceeding to dispose of the same and indulge in a little relaxation by taking in the Centennial."

BROAD HINTS TO WILLIAM ALLEN.

The following letter has been addressed to ex-Gov. Allen, of Ohio, by a Cuyahoga County Democrat:

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 30.

Hon. William Allen Chillicothe, Ohio:

DEAR SIR: The writer is one of the Democrats of this county that worked for you, and helped elect you Governor of the great State of Ohio. He also done everything to the utmost of his abilities to help elect you a year ago. He worked from pure patriotic motives. He, as did hundreds of others, believed then, as they do now, that the principles you advocated then were the true principles of this Government. You were not elected, and I now ask you why not? If you cannot answer I can answer for you. It was because Samuel J. Tilden, of New-York, threw his entire influence against you. Samuel J. Tilden early and clearly saw that if you were elected Governor of Ohio, that he would stand no chance whatever for the nomination of the Democratic Party for President. Had you been elected a year ago Governor of Ohio Samuel J. Tilden would not to-day have been the candidate of the Democratic Party for President. You know this as well as I do. After taking all these things into consideration, it appears very strange to Democrats who have believed you honest, that you could stoop so low that you could demean yourself to the extent you have done in writing the letter you did on the 17th inst., to John G. Thompson. In that you speak of the rule of the sword wielded by fools for the benefit of knaves. Let me ask you where will you find a greater political knave than Samuel J. Tilden? He has been a knave all his life. You know this as well as I do. Let me say to you, Gov. Allen, that your letter of the 17th inst. to John J. Thompson will cause hundreds of greenback Democrats to vote for Hayes and Wheeler. Although they are not all in sympathy with that party, they see clearly that it rests between honesty and trickery, and they will go for honesty. Respectfully,

L. J. FISH, Independence.

THE FALSE TILDEN CLAIMS CONCERNING COLORADO.

The Albany Times of Monday says: "The result in Colorado is at last announced officially to the public, and the truth compels us to say that it bears out the statement that was made soon after the election there, to the effect that the 'Tilden bureau' in New-York City were injuring the Democracy by fradulent telegraphic dispatches heralding a Democratic success. The New York Times on the 5th of October claimed an aggregate Republican majority in Colorado of 708, and the election of Belford, Republican, to Congress by 1,300. It also claimed the State Senate by 17 Republicans to 9 Democrats, and the House by 35 Republicans to 14 Democrats. The Associated Press reports on the 6th of October placed the Republican majority at 1,200 on the State ticket, with the Legislature two-thirds Republican. On the contrary, the 'Tilden Bureau' seems to have been able to manufacture a result for various journals which were too ready to accept news from such a quarter, and the consequence was that leading Democratic newspapers were found claiming the election of Patterson, Democrat, to Congress, and a Democratic majority in the State Senate. This shows that somebody did some persistent falsifying, and the 'Tilden Bureau' will be made to shoulder the responsibility. The Republican majority on Congressmen for the short term is 1,038, and for the Forty-fifth Congress it is 100 less. The Senate is nearly three to one in favor of the Republicans, and the House nearly two to one of like political complexion. John L. Routt, Republican candidate for Governor, has a majority of nearly one thousand over Bela M. Hughes, Democrat. When 'Reform' is made the rallying cry, Tildenism alone has been injured by misstating the facts. The Democratic Party can not justly be held responsible for 'Tilden bureau' falsehoods, whether they concern election returns, income tax, or any other subject."

THANKSGIVING IN CONNECTICUT.

Gov. Ingersoll, of Connecticut, has issued the following proclamation selecting the same day as the President for thanksgiving and praise:

By his Excellency, Charles R. Ingersoll, Governor of the State of Connecticut, a proclamation.

And I request all persons throughout the State to observe the day in a manner becoming a purpose so high and holy.

M. H. SANGER, Secretary of State.

WAR SCENES IN BOSNIA.

A TURKISH COLUMN SEARCHING FOR INSURGENTS.

THE START OF THE EXPEDITION—MARCHING THROUGH A PICTURESQUE COUNTRY—A SINGULAR CAVALCADE OF GLOOMY-VISAGED CUT-THROATS—A BOSNIAN DINNER—THE ENEMY FOUND AT LAST—HOW A SKIRMISH OF TWO HOURS RESULTED—NO QUARTER ASKED OR GIVEN—A STARTLING PROPHECY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

JAITSCHI, Sunday, Sept. 24, 1876.

Our expedition was to have started at daybreak, but no one should ever look for punctuality in the East, and it was after 8 o'clock when I was summoned to the Kohak. Here, in the court-yard, was drawn up Osman Agha's squadron; the troopers were clad in the species of Zouave costume adopted for all arms of the Turkish service, carried lances, sabres, and revolvers, and were mounted upon serviceable but badly groomed importations from Hungary. The physique of the men was good, and their general appearance, although somewhat faded and ragged, soldierly and withal superior to that of the Servian cavalry. I had been promised "my pick from the Caimacam's stables," but with Oriental casuistry, this estimable functionary had only kept to the letter of his engagement. He had sent away, during the night, all his best chargers, and thus, while allowing me a selection, had taken care that the field for that selection should be circumscribed. So I, too, only got a Hungarian, and saw none of that "choicest blood of Arabistan," which he had so vaunted over his wine cups, at our first meeting. Riza Ali was still in his harem, nor did he make his appearance until another half-hour had passed. Then he entered the Divanhané, all smiles and sunshine for me, but particularly out of humor with everybody else. This, he soon explained to me, was caused by the arrival of a Tartar with news of the burning of a small Christian village near Jaitschi, on the main road to Travnik. The outrage was of course attributed to the insurgents, but was more likely a Basha-Bazouk than a Rayah depredation. However, he intended to put a stop to this sort of thing and to make an example. So Osman Agha was called in and was ordered to slay or capture every armed rebel, but to prevent all incendiarism, mutilation of prisoners and wounded, and ill-treatment of women, children, and old men. Then a light collation of coffee, tobacco, and preserves—of which last the acme of Oriental courtesy, the cavalry officer was not invited to partake—was served by way of a stirrup cup, and then we mounted and rode away.

The population of the town was at its usual avocations, but not a glance followed us from café or shop window as we passed, and no one seemed to take the slightest interest in our movements, except two blue-jacketed peasants who jumped hurriedly upon their ponies and galloped off, in the opposite direction, as we crossed the Tscharstin. Our route led through the smiling valley of the Verbas, with much sliding and scrambling across spurs of the Kukawitza and Tissowa Planine, which might have been perfectly avoided, if it were not a point of honor with Turkish engineers to direct their roads strictly in accordance with the axiom that the straight line is the shortest distance between two places. Geometrically true, its application is sometimes attended with difficulties, and common sense should have taught them that by winding around the base, instead of toiling painfully across the summit of these hills, there would have been a great economy of time. At times we passed through dense forests, incumbered with fallen timber, through which a path is made, not by the removal of the obstacle, but by simply chopping away such portion of it as may embarrass the circulation. The old Illyrian saying, "Where the rocks cease and the trees begin, there begins Bosnia," is no longer true. On the mountain sides there are still magnificent woods of oaks and beeches, and, as you ascend, groves of pine trees, but much of the once luxuriant vegetation has disappeared, and in the lowlands one sees little save straggling undergrowth and bald places covered with bracken, with here and there some solitary monarch of the forest, kept, perhaps, as a landmark. Owing to the frequent rains and the innumerable springs and small water-courses, the roads would be impassable if they were not paved in the middle, but this rude causeway is never repaired, and although it keeps the communications from being bodily washed away, the peasants prefer wading through the mud on either side to trusting themselves and their animals upon its disjointed surface. Bridges are numerous and primitive, generally built upon piles, sometimes with piers and buttresses of masonry, with queer, triangular-shaped arches and a flooring of logs, rarely fastened together, and utterly impracticable for vehicles. Indeed, the only means of transport, except near the Save and Drina, are pack horses, of which we met several strings, whose black-turbaned drivers seemed trying to solve the problem of how to get over the minimum of space, in the maximum of time. The only accommodation for travelers in which the natives have taken any trouble is in the erection of fountains, and this is due entirely to the circumstance that the Koran enjoins frequent ablutions. As in Servia, the absence of singing birds is universal, and, except a few crows, and magpies, and red-legged partridges, I saw no specimens of either fur or feathers, although Bosnia is said to be a very paradise for the sportsman. But of swine, those idols of the Sclavonic heart, there were myriads running about the woods in a half wild state, and one can readily understand the contemptuous nickname of "home of the pigs," which the Osmanli have given to the province.

The villages were few and far between; mere collections of rude log huts, often unplastered, those of the better sort only having a rough coating of clay and a hole in the roof by way of a chimney for the smoke, which in most cases finds an issue through the crevices in the walls. Now, whether it was that the inhabitants were really at their work in the fields, or that they did not fancy our appearance, certain it is that nearly every village seemed tenantless; not a dog barked at us as we rode through the deserted streets, if streets they can be called, and not even at the roadside khans, whose landlords are all Mussulmans, did we receive a word of greeting. On reflection, I cannot wonder at their shyness, for we were not, on the whole, a reassuring-looking party to the timid mind. Ever since leaving Banialouka, we had been joined, at different points, by squads of local militia, horse, and foot, varying in numbers from ten to fifty each, so that by the time we reached Jaitschi, our force must have been nearly six hundred strong. With the exception of Osman Agha's lancers, all were numerously and wretchedly armed, with every description of gun, sword and pistol ever exhibited in a curiosity shop, and with a collection of murderous knives at their girdles. Very unlike, indeed, were they to my Kurdish and Syrian irregulars of 1854, who, were wild enough, in their way but who, at least, carried some weapon which they knew how to use; whereas these ruffians had absolutely nothing formidable to any but an unarmed or disabled enemy. Mounted upon dilapidated saddles perched on the backs of half-starved ponies in rope bridles they showed no signs of that enthusiasm which prompts the fiery Arab to dash out from the ranks and execute some brilliant fantasia with lance or sabre. They were nothing but gloomy visaged cut-throats animated by a hope for plunder and perhaps by a certain amount of bigoted fanaticism, although, as to this motive, I am not a little skeptical.

Eight hours had we ridden, with, of course, some halts for rest and refreshment, and a little praying, with faces toward Mecca, on the part of the most pious, and never an insurgent had we seen, nor, indeed, heard of, except from some Redif infantry, who joined us as we passed the little fort of Komotin, on the right bank of the Verbas. Even they could only speak from hear-say, and I began to doubt the presence of any insurgents in the neighborhood, and was heartily glad when we came in sight of the once important fortress of Jaitschi, whose castle, built upon an island in the Jezero Lake, has repulsed many a fierce assault during the bloody wars between the Hungarians and Turks in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. It would now scarcely resist a determined coup de main, and its meagre, half-starved garrison only serves to keep order among the native population, two-thirds of whom are Schokatz or Catholics, and, by the way, the most dissolute Christian community which I have ever come across. There was a Latin prelate martyred here, some three hundred years ago, and, but for the annual 10th of May pilgrimages to his tomb the old town would probably long since have ceased to exist. A deputation of notables, accompanied by some of the Ayan's cavasses, met us on our arrival with a request that the Bashi-Bazouks at least should remain outside. They would send them provisions, tobacco, everything that they might need or desire, "but for God's sake do not let them enter!" After some demur, this was agreed to, and the "miscreants" bivouacked in the fields, but, from the noise during the night, I judge that some of the houses in the suburbs were favored by a visit from these highly undesirable guests. The Ayan is a very disagreeable person, although professing much esteem for his superior of Banialouka, whose Teskiré he put on his forehead and rubbed on the pit of his stomach, as who should say, "Soul and body I am his slave!" He was not of a hospitable mind, either, and did not invite me to dinner, although he did offer me lodings beneath his roof—for a consideration. His Konak is a wretched dilapidated building, whose Divanhané, to which one is obliged to mount by a ladder, adjoins what was once the principal café of the town. Carif Effendi is its landlord, but his greed for gold has so raised the rent that he cannot find a tenant, and so he tries to turn an honest penny by taking in and doing for the casual Mousafir. Notwithstanding, then, his protestations, Baschoume oustoun, on my head be it, there is naught better in this abode of swine! I elected to accept an invitation from the Khodgibashe, or chief of the Christian community, Mr. Tochitze, who was "more than charmed to be able to receive one of his own faith beneath his roof." The presence of books and photographs, in addition to the pictures of saints, and the guzlas which usually form the sole adornments of even the wealthy Bosnian dwellings, showed me that my host had attained to a higher degree of civilization than the generality of his fellow-countrymen. Alas! why had not his studies been extended a little in the direction of culinary art? A Bosnian dinner is a curiosity and an abomination to which no pen can do full justice. We were eight guests, seated on chairs, each furnished with a knife and fork, the latter instrument being used with great moderation. First came tumblers of sliptovics, with sodden pastry, then a soup of onions and turnips cut up in small pieces and swimming in rancid butter; the third course was a stew of smoked salt mutton, with pickled cabbage; then bean soup flavored with nutmeg and vinegar; last, that pièce de résistance of every ceremonious Bosnian dinner, a sucking lamb roasted whole and stuffed with rice, hashed tripe, and garlic. Bumpers of plum brandy followed each remove, and we wound up with a dessert of watermelons and cucumbers. During this frightful banquet scarcely a word was spoken, but with their pipes and coffee they became more communicative, corroborating what I had gleaned elsewhere, yet adding no additional information. Some insurgents were really in the neighborhood, but under whose leadership they either could not or, as I am inclined to suspect, would not tell.

The stars were setting as we rode out of Jaitschi and struck off eastward, toward the village of Diwetschané, where, according to Osman Agha's scouts, the rebels were encamped. But there was no one there, except a few dogs, and so we wandered on, wading through streams, clambering over craggy hills, losing ourselves in dense pine forests and heavy jungles of birches, where we ought to have been ambushed. Fortunately, the enemy was ignorant of our movement, for the ground was unfit for cavalry, and the advanced guard and flankers were so close to the column that they would have been driven in before we could have formed so as to meet an attack. About 9 A. M. we got hold of a Tsigane, who volunteered to serve as a guide. The W'lachs, he said, were, at the foot of the Sonvna, below Vitoije, about half an hour further on, and there, sure enough, we found them. Half a dozen of our Bashi-Bazouks had galloped forward to reconnoitre, and were hidden from our sight by a wooded knoll, when we heard a sputtering noise as of the burning of small charges of bad powder, and promptly back rushed the videttes to report that, "At least two thousand horse and foot were drawn up in the meadow to receive us;" in reality, there were not more than half that number. I don't know who gave the orders for our people, and rather think that each detachment commander acted according to his lights and on his own responsibility. The half battalion of Redif's pushed on, deployed one company as skirmishers and commenced firing; the lancers formed squadrons and moved slowly toward the right, and the irregulars went where they listed, capering about and discharging their fire-arms at impossible distances, and so opened the Dobritije ball. Numerically, the combatants were pretty evenly matched, but we possessed an incontestable superiority in our regulars, who behaved as regulars always do, with great steadiness and gallantry. Evidently the W'lachs had been drilled to a certain extent, for their line was not badly formed and had reserves, and a painfully discordant bugle note was sounded occasionally to direct the movements of their skirmishers. Whoever their chief was, I cannot compliment him on his strategical knowledge, and do not think that I would have selected open ground either for the encampment or battle-field of green troops, when there was a hill-side half a mile in rear with excellent cover. He had probably been influenced by the little stream which traversed the valley, and as we came upon him unexpectedly, as is usually the case in the East, where outpost service is in its infancy, he had no choice but to fight where he stood. The two lines engaged at about eight hundred yards' distance, the Turkish infantry advancing steadily, the lancers manœuvring so as to gain the insurgent left, and so cut off its retreat from the Sonvua. The rôle of the Bashi-Bazouks continued to be a series of absurdities without any influence whatever upon the result of the action, which should have been decided in fifteen minutes, although it lasted nearly two hours. At first we had very few casualties, but as the Redifs gradually gained ground, some of the enemy's bullets got home, for he stood his ground unflinchingly. At last Osman Agha decided to attack, and a platoon rode forward and charged as foragers, the rest of the squadron following in column of platoons at halt distance, at a trot. To my surprise, about two hundred footmen, on the extreme left of the enemy's line, at once began to form square, and I could see several mounted officers in foreign uniforms driving the men into their places with the flats of their sabres, while a detachment of cavalry clustered together on their outward flanks. This was conclusive evidence of the presence of some directing influence not of Bosnian growth, and produced upon my mind the unpleasant impression that if the W'lachs stood firm we should be beaten, for we had no reserves to fall back upon. However, there was no help for it now, and my apprehensions were very soon dissipated. With a yell, that same Allah Hu! which has been the war cry of the Osmanli for centuries, the troopers, with couched lances, bore down upon the foe, and then occurred an incident which I have never seen elsewhere. In their eagerness the Bosnians opened fire from the four faces of the square at the same time, pouring a volley right into their mounted support, which at once broke and fled in confusion to the rear. Several of our saddles were emptied, but there was no second discharge, no time for reloading their old-fashioned flint-locks, no bayonets to resist the shock. Their officers behaved gallantly, and so did some of the men, and no quarter was either asked or given as the Turkish horsemen rode through the disorderly rabble. But the lance, although the "queen of weapons," as my old Professor, Mahan, calls it, must be handled by an adept to be formidable at close quarters, and many a poor devil owed his safety to the clumsiness of the Turkish spearmen. As it was, some fifty or sixty of the insurgents were killed or wounded, and as many taken prisoners; had they been attacked by Polish Hulans, not a man would have escaped.

Our fellows suffered more severely than I should have expected, for among the insurgents were many white-frocked Montenegrins, who fought savagely with their khandjars and died hard. Only one of their mounted officers was killed, and he was, I should judge from his uniform, a Servian; the others, when the square gave way and resistance in the bottom had become useless, galloped to the rear and rallied the fugitives behind the corn on the hill-side, where pursuit by the Osmanli would have been dangerous, and thither retreated the insurgent right wing as soon as our lancers had made their successful charge. The Bashi-Bazouks now came again upon the scene, there being no longer any risk for their personal safety, and although I did not actually witness the commission of any atrocity, I fear that more than one poor wretch was put out of his misery by these incarnations of cruelty and cowardice. Osman Agha and the Captain of the Redifs behaved with moderation and humanity, and the prisoners could complain of no violence during their march to Jaitschi, whence they will be directed to Travnik. Here, according to Riza Ali Pasha, they will be treated strictly as prisoners of war, but I fear that humane although the Mudir may be, he will be powerless to restrain the fanatical excesses of this the most bigoted Musulman population of the province.

The skirmish at Dobrijitzi, like those which are fought at different points in Bosnia every day, was insignificant and without bearing on the general issue. But it has proved to me that the natives possess a far higher courage than do the Servians, on whom hitherto all the sympathy of Christendom has been lavished. Their country, too, is better fitted for guerrilla warfare than is Servia, and I have little doubt of their ultimate success, provided foreign diplomacy will not interfere in a silly, if well-meant, attempt to patch up this Eastern question. That any real reforms can be introduced into Turkey so long as Mohammedan theocracy is allowed to form the basis of its Government is too absurd to admit of discussion. Nothing short of the establishment of the autonomy of each province can secure to the Christians protection for life and property, and to obtain this the Mussulmans must be driven across the Bosphorus or exterminated. The Sublime Porte will promise everything, but without the slightest intention of carrying one single engagement into execution. An armistice may be concluded, but an armistice, with both Turkey and Russia, is merely a device to gain time. Turkey would prolong the suspension of hostilities until the Spring, in order to Winter her African and Asiatic contingents, who will die off like sheep with the murrain from the inclemency of the weather. Russia wishes to protract the negotiations only until the ice shall have formed a natural defense to her seaboard, for she still fears England's iron-clads. My opinions will probably be called pessimist, but they are based upon a knowledge of the peoples and the Governments on whom depends the solution of the Eastern puzzle. So far we have only seen the premonitory symptoms of the terrible religious war which will be waged within three months between the Cross and the Crescent, between civilization and barbarism, and whose complications will change the map of Europe.

THE HEMPSTEAD RESERVOIR.

KINGSLEY AND KEENEY'S SUIT AGAINST THE CITY—TESTIMONY BEFORE THE REFEREES.

The suit of Kingsley and Keeney against the City of Brooklyn for the recovery of $178,000 for extra work which they claim to have performed on the Hempstead Reservoir, under their contract for the building of that work, was continued yesterday in the Common Council Chamber of the Brooklyn City Hall, before the Referees appointed to take the testimony in the case—ex-Judge Lott and Messrs. George H. Fisher and Thomas H. Rodman. The plaintiffs were represented by Joshua M. Van Cott and Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy, and Corporation Counsel De Witt and John E. Parsons appeared for the city. When the reference was adjourned on Tuesday of last week, it was for the purpose of giving the plaintiffs time to prepare and present testimony identifying the plans referred to in the contract, and to prove that the same plans had been approved by the Common Council July 11, 1870, in order to prevent the granting of the motion of defendants' counsel to dismiss the complaint.

The entire session yesterday was taken up with the examination of Col. Julius W. Adams, Chief Engineer of the Brooklyn Board of City Works Witness testified that he had been a civil engineer forty-four years, and Chief Engineer of the Brooklyn Board of City Works since 1869; Mr. Kirkwood, Consulting Engineer of the board, called his attention to the fact that an increased supply of water was needed for the city during the very first week after he was appointed Chief Engineer. The first communication he sent to the Board of Water Commissioners on the subject, is now on file in the office, and is dated May 6, 1869. Mr. Parsons objected to the introduction of the document, on the ground that it was not connected with the action of the Common Council on the subject. The communication was read by the witness, after which his testimony was continued as follows: Subsequent to the sending of this communication was authorized to employ Mr. Kirkwood as Consulting Engineer in the matter of increased water supply; employed him about the 1st of July; he had charge of drawing up the plans and surveys; we sent a joint communication to the Board of Water Commissioners, dated Jan. 1, 1876; [communication admitted in evidence;] witness instructed Mr. Kirkwood, to perfect his plans and specifications, which he did, and handed them over, when completed, to witness; witness revised them, and on June 20, 1870, transmitted a land plan to the Board of Water Commissioners; [communication also put in evidence;] witness then gave a detailed statement of the manner in which the contract was made under the specifications as prepared by Mr. Kirkwood and the subsequent negotiations for the control of Nichols' pond, and also the veto of the resolutions of the Common Council by Mayor Kalbfleisch, Aug. 22, 1870, together with the visit of the Mayor and Common Council to the reservoir in October, 1870. Pending the examination of Col. Adams the reference was adjourned until 11 o'clock this morning.

BOODY AGAINST TILDEN.

THE GOVERNOR'S BREACH OF TRUST.

HIS EXCUSES FLIMSY AND UNWORTHY A MAN OF HIS PRETENSIONS—PLEADING THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS A BAD CARD FOR A PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE—A LETTER FROM ONE WHO KNOWS SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The recent publication by you of some of the papers in the suit of Boody against Tilden and others, which bring to public view some of the doings of our reform candidate for the Presidency in connection with the consolidation of the Chicago and Galena Union Railroad Company with the Chicago and North-western in 1864, seems to have caused no little stir among the friends of that gentleman, if one may judge from a long article of yesterday's date in the New-York Herald, in which the Reformer himself, or the "nincompoops" who write for him, attempt to break the force of the damaging statements contained in those papers by a series of "denials" and counter-allegations, and by raising the cry of "black-mailer."

Possessing a thorough knowledge of all these transactions from the very beginning, I propose to examine those "denials" and counter-allegations a little in detail, and endeavor to ascertain how far they relieve Mr. Tilden from the unfavorable judgment to which many minds have been led by a perusal of those papers.

Without dwelling upon the fact that it is no very uncommon thing for the defendant in a suit to deny the allegations of his adversary—a sort of denial which, as it imposes upon nobody, is not esteemed of much importance—I have to remark:

First—That it might be entirely true, (as alleged by Mr. Tilden or by those who write for him,) that Mr. Boody was formerly the Treasurer of the Chicago and North-western Railway Company, and that as such Treasurer he was a defaulter in a large amount, and still it would not be easy to see how those facts would affect the merits of his suit against Mr. Tilden, which is based upon entirely different matters; yet, in fact, Mr. Boody was never the Treasurer of the North-western Company, nor did he ever make default to that company, either in a large sum or in any sum whatever. In the Spring of 1866, two years after the consolidation of the Galena Company with the North-western, Mr. Boody, becoming suddenly and unexpectedly embarrassed through the villainy of persons whom he had implicitly trusted and greatly benefited, borrowed from one of the defendants in this suit the sum of $134,079 80, to enable him honorably to settle his accounts with the North-western Company, which for several years had kept their New-York account with him as a banker. The loan was made upon collaterals which, at the time, were worth in the market much more than the sum borrowed. This debt, which subsequently was assigned by the owner to other parties, was eventually paid by Mr. Boody in full, principal and interest, and there now exists no legal or equitable claim or demand of any sort against him, in which the lender of this money, or any other of the defendants, has, or ever had, any interest whatever.

Second—The $67,500 received by Mr. Boody for 750 shares of the preferred stock of the North-western Company, issued to him for the purpose of aiding in the purchase of stock of the Galena Company, was duly credited in the accounts on the very day it was received—as any one may see who will take the trouble to examine the accounts—and the fact that it was so accredited was and is well known to Mr. Tilden and the other defendants, and also to their attorneys. Of course, the insinuation, or assertion, that this money was appropriated by Mr. Boody to his own use is one of those slight deviations from the truth which common people call opposite to the truth, and which is like that other assertion of Tilden, that he has reduced taxation in this State some seven millions; when the truth is, and he knows it, it was the Republican Administration of Gov. Dix that put into the State Treasury the money that reduced taxation; the only virtue that Tilden can truthfully claim in regard to the reduction of taxation being that he did not steal or allow to be stolen from the State Treasury the money Republican rule had put there.

Third—Mr. Tilden, in his answer in the Herald—he has as yet served no answer in the suit, though he has had 175 days to do it—denies that he was in any way interested in the "pool" or association which, in the Spring of 1864, bought up the stock of the Galena Company for the purpose of consolidating said company with the North-western. Now, he either was or was not. If he was, what shall be thought of this denial? If he was not, upon what ground did he receive and does he still retain the $26,000 claimed by, and paid, him in August, 1864, solely and only as his distributive share of the supposed profits of that "pool" or association? His fellow-citizens who are asked to vote for him would be glad of a little light upon this subject.

Fourth—But Mr. Tilden denies that he ever received any money whatever as the proceeds of the "pool or association." This denial is eminently characteristic of Mr. Tilden, and shows exactly how much of real truth there is in his statements, whether political or financial. What he did actually claim, and receive from Mr. Boody, as his share of the profits in that "pool" was paid to him, at his request, by Mr. Boody, not in cash, but in the preferred stock of the Chicago and North-western Railroad Company belonging to the pool, at its then cash market value; and at the same time when this was done he purchased, through Mr. Boody, for cash, $19,000 worth of said stock at the same rates, giving his check therefor on the 22d day of August, 1864.

Mr. Tilden denies, in his article in the Herald, in regard to said pool, "that he ever received from the plaintiff any money as the proceeds thereof." This is technically true, but substantially false; since, instead of money, he took $26,000 worth of stock at its then cash value.

Fifth—Mr. Tilden denies that he ever borrowed from "it"—the pool—or from Mr. Boody, "in connection therewith," the sum of $60,060. Exactly; he borrowed nothing from "it," or from Mr. Boody "in connection therewith." But this is "denying" what nobody ever alleged. Mr. Tilden did borrow from Mr. Boody, on the 9th day of March, 1864, some weeks before the "pool" was formed or thought of, the sum of $60,000, imperatively claiming it upon the specific ground that, being a Director of the North-western Company, he had as good a right to the use of the company's money then on deposit with Mr. Boody as Mr. Boody himself had. He received the money, but he refused to give security for it, or to allow or pay any interest for its use, on the ground that it was money belonging to the railway company, and not to Mr. Boody.

Sixth—Mr. Tilden's friends allege in the Herald article that this claim of Mr. Boody was not made upon the defendants until about the time when Mr. Tilden's name came to be prominently mentioned in connection with the Presidency. The fact is that the matter was brought to the notice of all the defendants upon the same day, the 4th of September, 1875, and long before Mr. Tilden's name had been "prominently" mentioned for the office to which he now ardently aspires; and so far from its being an attempt to levy black-mail, as Mr. Tilden and his friends would have the public believe, Mr. Boody, at the outset, invited Mr. Tilden, and all the other parties interested, to make the fullest personal examination of all his books and accounts relating to the business, and if upon such examination they should not become entirely satisfied of the justness and equity of his claims, he offered to submit all the matters in dispute to the friendly arbitration of disinterested persons. Under these circumstances the cry of "black-mailer" raised by Mr. Tilden and his friends looks a little suspicious.

Seventh—It is stated in the Herald article, with the evident purpose of helping out Mr. Tilden, that Charles J. Canda, a former employe of Mr. Boody, and as such familiar with the whole matter, had examined the accounts, and is of the opinion that Mr. Boody has no just claim against Mr. Tilden or his associates. The errors in the statement are as follows: 1. Mr. Canda was never an employe of Mr. Boody, in any capacity whatever. 2. He is now, but was not 1864, an employe and the confidential clerk of one of the defendants in Boody's suit. 3. That he is not now, and never was, familiar with the whole transaction. 4. A portion of the accounts he has never seen at all, much less examined.

Eighth—In regard to the allegation that about the time of Mr. Tilden's nomination Mr. Boody promised a "friend" of Mr. Tilden that if this claim were paid he would stump the State of Maine in his behalf, and that if it were not paid he would "appeal to the newspapers," it is enough to say that herein "Truthful James" has drawn upon a somewhat vivid imagination for his facts. Mr. Boody has had no conversation with any "friend" of Mr. Tilden, with reference to a friendly adjustment of the matters in dispute, since October, 1875, more than eight months before Mr. Tilden was nominated, nor did he then make any such offer, threat, or suggestion. This is simply an attempt on the part of Mr. Tilden to shield himself in his wrong-doing by throwing mud at the party he has injured.

Ninth.—But the defendants to this suit did agree in September last, through their attorneys, to submit all the matters in dispute between the plaintiff and themselves, to the friendly arbitration of Controller Andrew H. Green, who, though formerly the law partner of Mr. Tilden, and still his personal friend, and the confidential friend of the other defendant, nevertheless bears so unimpeachable a character for integrity and for sound, discriminating judgment, that Mr. Boody felt no hesitation in submitting the whole matter to his sole decision. Yet though the arbitration papers were immediately prepared and submitted to Mr. Tilden for signature and verification, he has persistently refused to sign them, and now through his attorney threatens to serve an answer, setting up the Statute of Limitations, and go into court relying upon that.

We leave the public to judge how much Mr. Tilden has gained in the estimation of his fellow-citizens, by his denial of facts susceptible of the clearest proof, and by raising against the plaintiff in a suit against himself, to which he has no defense whatever except the Statute of Limitations, the invidious cry of "black-mailer."

AN EX-DIRECTOR OF THE CHICAGO AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

RACING AT WASHINGTON.

FIRST DAY OF THE NATIONAL JOCKEY CLUB'S AUTUMN MEETING—INSPIRATION, BILL BRUCE, AND DERBY THE WINNERS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The opening day's races of the Autumn meeting of the National Jockey Club, postponed from yesterday, took place to-day at the Washington Driving Park, near Benning's Station. The weather was clear and warm, the track in good condition, and the attendance larger than at any previous meeting. For the first race, in which Inspiration was the favorite, a good start was made, with Fadladeen in the lead and the others in a bunch; Matador pressed forward and took the first place, with Inspiration second, Courier third, First Chance fourth, and the others together. Going around the turn Inspiration went to the front and held it to the finish.

SUMMARY.

FIRST RACE.—Dash of three-quarters of a mile for all ages; entrance, $10; entrance money to second horse; purse, $150.

A. Smith's br. m. Inspiration, 5 years old, by Warminster, dam Sophia, 111 pounds.....1
P. M. West's b. c. Courier, 3 years old, by Star Davis, dam by Lexington, 95 pounds.....2
Barton & Medinger's ch. c. First Chance, 5 years old, by Baywood, dam Dot, 111 pounds.....3
Sunbeam, Matador, Leamington Second, May D., and Fadladeen, not placed.
Time—1:16¼.

In the second race Bill Bruce sold as the favorite in the pools. Fadladeen led at the start, followed by Bill Bruce, Burgoo, Hatteras, Rose, and well in the order given. Before reaching the quarter the four first named horses were bunched, with Burgoo leading. On the back-stretch Burgoo held the lead, closely pressed by Bill Bruce, with Hatteras and Fadladeen two lengths away, neck and neck, and Rose still well in the rear. At the half mile Bill Bruce went to the front, with Burgoo at his flank and Fadladeen and Hatteras following well together. Hatteras then ran to the third place. Going down the home-stretch Bill Bruce was first, Burgoo second, Hatteras third, Fadladeen fourth, and Rose fifth. Burgoo and Hatteras made a desperate rush for Bill Bruce and captured him, but he soon regained his position and came to the score three lengths ahead of Hatteras. In the second heat Bill Bruce got away first, Burgoo second, Fadladeen third; Hatteras fourth, and Rose fifth. At the quarter Hatteras had passed to the third place and Rose to the fourth, while Fadladeen had fallen to the rear. From this there was no change to the finish, and Bill Bruce came in two lengths ahead, an easy winner of the heat and race.

SUMMARY.

SECOND RACE.—Mile heats for all ages; purse $300, of which $50 to the second horse.

Owner's Rose and Davis' Fadladeen not placed.
Time—1:45, 1:46¾.

In the third and last race, a steeple-chase, Resolute was the favorite. The horses started well, with Derby in the lead, and the others well together. Derby and Captain Hanmer went over the first hurdle together, followed by Resolute and Jack Trig, who were also together. Derby and Captain Hanmer reached the second hurdle, and jumped it at the same instant. At the third hurdle they had Resolute for company, and the three horses went over together, the others coming after them in a bunch. At the fourth hurdle Resolute had fallen back; Derby and Capt. Hanmer leaped it together, followed by Risk, then Resolute and the others close at their heels. At the close of the first mile, Derby was in the lead, Capt. Hanmer second, Risk third, Resolute fourth, and the others bunched. The first hurdle of the second mile was taken by Derby first, Capt. Hanmer second, Resolute third, Risk fourth, New-York fifth, Jack Trig sixth, Bill Monday seventh, Paladin eighth, and Lorena ninth. The second hurdle was jumped in nearly the same order. Resolute and Derby took the third hurdle together, and Risk followed, then Capt. Hanmer and the others. Going down the home-stretch the horses were all together, with Derby, Resolute, New-York, and Capt. Hanmer in the front rank, neck and neck. When the last hurdle was reached, Capt. Hanmer had fallen back, but New-York, Derby and Resolute went on together, with the others close behind them. Derby passed under the string first.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held yesterday in the Hall of the Board, President Wood in the chair. The report of the Superintendent of Truancy for the month of October was presented and adopted. The total number of cases investigated was 1,439, of which 889 were not classed as truants, leaving 550 truants and non-attendants, who were placed at school. President Wood read a communication in which he urged the necessity of making an arrangement with the New-York Juvenile Asylum for the detention of all truants, such a step having become imperative by reason of the action of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in denying the application of the Board of Education for $100,000 to found a reformatory institution on Ward's Island. On motion the report was referred to the Committee on By-laws. Commissioner Kane offered a resolution, which was adopted, ordering that the 6th and 7th of November be made holidays to afford the teachers and pupils an opportunity of visiting the Centennial Exhibition. A resolution ordering the Committee on Supplies to advertise for bids for the printing of the board for the ensuing year, was also adopted. The report of the Evening Schools Committee, adverse to the application for the establishment of an evening high school on the east side of the City, was adopted. A communication from the school officers of the Twenty-second Ward asking for an appropriation of $53,835 for the erection of a new school in West Fifty-eighth street, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

THE RELIEF OF DESTITUTE CHILDREN.

The thirtieth anniversary of the Society for the Relief of Destitute Children of Seamen was held at the institution on Staten Island on Friday, Oct. 27. Mr. G. C. Wetmore was called to the chair, and the various reports for the year were presented and read. From that of the Secretary it appeared that an average number of one hundred children between the ages of two and fourteen years had been cared for, and that there are at present at the home 108. The Treasurer's report showed a balance of $743 63, but it appeared that during the year the society had to draw $1,200 from its very small invested fund, and even with that would have been compelled greatly to curtail its operations had it not been for unexpected aid most opportunely given. The exercises were very interesting, creditable alike to teachers and children. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. Jacob LeRoy, First Directress; Mrs. William A. Booth, Second Directress; Mrs. N. Marsh, Third Directress; Mrs. A. C. Kingsland, Jr., Treasurer; Miss Griswold, Corresponding Secretary; Miss E. Bogart, Recording Secretary. After a few appropriate remarks from Mr. Erastus Brooks and Capt. Snow, the meeting adjourned.

THE CREDIT OF THE NATION.

CARL SCHURZ TO BUSINESS MEN.

OUR PUBLIC CREDIT ABROAD—HOW IT WOULD BE INJURED BY A DEMOCRATIC VICTORY—WHY EUROPEAN CAPITALISTS FEAR THE SOUTH—A REPLY TO AUGUST BELMONT.

Prominent business men of this City have addressed a note to Hon. Carl Schurz, asking an expression of his views upon the probable effect of a Democratic victory on the public credit abroad. Mr. Schurz has responded in a letter in which he brings his thorough acquaintance with European affairs to bear upon the subject, and shows how, in his opinion, such a misfortune would come of Mr. Tilden's success. The correspondence is given below.

THE MERCHANTS' LETTER.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 25, 1876.

DEAR SIR: We have noticed that in your speeches delivered in this campaign you have not discussed the question whether a victory of the Democratic Party this Fall would be calculated to injure our public credit abroad, and what the influence of such an event would be on our business interests at home.

We should be glad to have you, before leaving the City, favor us with an expression of your views upon this question, which is one of great importance to all classes of our people. With much respect,

ELLIOT C. COWDIN, H. STURSBERG,
E. D. MORGAN & CO., LEWIS BROS. & CO.,
JOHN JAY, W. STURSBERG,
T. L. THORNELL, M. H. LEHMAIER,
Hon. CARL SCHURZ. and others.

MR. SCHURZ'S REPLY.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 31, 1876.

GENTLEMEN: In response to your kind letter, I beg leave to say that I did not deem it necessary to discuss in my public speeches the question upon which you invite from me an expression of opinion, believing that the natural instinct of business men would suggest to them all that can be said about the effect of a Democratic victory upon our public credit abroad, and, correspondingly, upon our business affairs at home. But since you desire it, I shall give you, with pleasure, my views on that matter.

Some time ago I saw it stated in the newspapers, apparently on good authority, that the Secretary of the Treasury had received information from financial men in Europe to the effect that a Democratic victory would seriously embarrass, if not altogether arrest, the funding of our national debt at a lower rate of interest, and generally depress the market value of our national securities. While I can well understand that such advices should have come across the ocean, I have no personal knowledge of them, and can only reason on the general aspects of the case and my own experience of the drift of European opinion.

Mr. August Belmont, in his letter on the same subject, recently addressed to the Evening Express, stated that "the safety and wisdom of investment in the funded debt of the Government of the United States do not depend upon Presidential elections, in the opinion of European capitalists and bankers, any more than the soundness of English consols depends on whether the Ministry is Tory or Liberal." He reiterated the same statement in a speech last night. The question is not why Mr. Belmont urges such views, but whether such would be the current opinion among European investors generally; for it is upon the confidence of investors, large and small, that the value of securities will ultimately depend. This is an important point which Mr. Belmont has not seen fit to mention; and in this respect there is a striking difference between the relations of political parties in England to the public debt of that country, and the relations of political parties here to the national debt of the United States. However much or little interest Europeans may take in our political struggles, that difference is well calculated to arrest their attention, as it undoubtedly does. The English debt was for the most part created in consequence of wars between England and foreign powers, in which neither political party was to any great extent identified or in strong sympathy with the enemy. In the course of time all differences of opinion as to the expediency of such wars have been completely neutralized, and the debt has, therefore, always rested upon the support of a strong national feeling common to all Englishmen, aside from a widely diffused pecuniary interest. There is at present in England not a single public man of character or influence in either party the sincerity of whose desire to see all national obligations faithfully discharged according to law is the least doubted by anybody.

On the other hand, the world knows, and every investor in United States securities, down to the owner of a single $100 bond, knows that the war to which our national debt owes its origin was not a foreign war, in which all parts of this country had an equally patriotic share, but a civil war, virtually carried on by one part of the country against the other; in other words, that the debt was created by the National Government, controlled by the people of the Northern section of the country, for the purpose of subduing a great rebellion set on foot by the people of the South. Now, whatever means we may employ to that end, it will be difficult, if not entirely impossible, to make the world believe that the white people of the South, whose ambition to set up an independent Government for themselves was defeated by means of our national debt, will regard that very debt as a sacred obligation of honor and patriotism, in the same measure as it certainly will always be regarded by those who created it for the purpose of saving the integrity of the Republic. This, I think, is stating the case in its mildest form. Nothing could be more unfortunate in this respect than that the Democratic Party should have impressed all observers of current events with the fact that its success in the Presidential election is to be accomplished by the votes of a united South, under the control of the late Confederates, aided by a small number of Northern States. It is to be expected, if a Democratic victory be achieved in that way, that the world will regard the late Confederates of the South as numerically the strongest element in the victorious party; and the conclusion lies near, that this element, especially as it will inevitably furnish the bulk of Democratic Representatives in Congress, will wield the controlling influence in the councils of the organization. If that be so, those who have invested, or might, under other circumstances, be induced to invest, in United States securities, will scarcely be inclined to give their confidence to a party Government in a great measure controlled by a class of men who, when the debt was created, regarded the national creditor as the ally of their enemies, and the national debt itself as the engine of their discomfiture.

I see, therefore, strong reasons to apprehend, as I know that apprehension to exist in the minds of many financial men of influence, that the market value of our national securities depends in a much greater measure upon the result of our Presidential election than "the soundest of English consols depends on whether the ministry is tory or liberal." The difference of the two cases is evident. It should not be forgotten that public opinion abroad is apt to believe the policy of Republican Governments generally subject to sudden and violent fluctuations, and that this belief, however unjust in some cases, predisposes the public mind to unfavorable impressions. Moreover, owing to past events, the idea of repudiation is, in the European mind, unfortunately associated with a Southern State, and it is still remembered that the Democratic Party, in 1868, pronounced in favor of paying off a part of our bonded debt in depreciated greenbacks, a policy of partial repudiation. Neither will the credit which is attached to Mr. Tilden's financial views and intentions be sufficient to counterbalance the disquieting apprehensions created by the character and antecedents of the party behind him, especially as the succession to the Presidency of Mr. Hendricks, in case of accident, would open a still more alarming prospect. Considering the timidity of capital, and the sensitiveness of credit, all these things combined would seem to me well calculated, should the Democratic Party triumph, to have an unfavorable effect upon the standing of our national securities in the markets of the world.

How far that effect would go it is certainly difficult to estimate. It may be small, but it may be great. At any rate, it seems to me that those who think it "of little consequence to us whether the bondholders lose a certain percentage of the value of their bonds," take a very superficial view of the matter. It would require only a comparatively slight disturbance of our national credit to stop the funding of our securities at a lower rate of interest, and thus to prevent the annual saving to our national Treasury of a considerable amount of money. And it is scarcely necessary to tell business men that a heavy decline in the market value of our securities would bring on consequences of a very serious nature to them. In the City of New-York alone about one hundred and thirty-six million dollars of our national bonds are held by banks, savings institutions, trust companies, and life, fire, and marine insurance companies. These bonds form, aside from the ready cash, their most reliable and most available assets that can be used in case of emergency. The effect of a heavy fall in the gold value of those assets would scarcely be neutralized by an accompanying rise in gold, for it would be calculated to create wide-spread distrust as to the safety of those institutions of credit, and, where such a distrust, when once started, will stop, nobody can foretell. Such effects would be all the more dangerous, as the number of persons directly interested in those institutions is immense, especially in the northern part of the Union. According to the census of 1870, the savings banks of only nine States—the six New-England States, New-York, New-Jersey and California—have 2,200,000 depositors, and the amount of their deposits is about $1,200,000,000. In the life insurance companies doing business in New-York, not less than 800,000 persons are interested, and the policies run up to an aggregate of about $1,200,000,000. All these and similar interests of equal magnitude, which I need not enumerate, depend to a very great extent upon the value of our national securities, our public credit. That which endangers the public credit does, therefore, not touch the interests of the bond-holder alone, but it endangers the credit institutions of the country, and with them the business community in the largest sense; in fact, not only the honor, but the material interests of the whole people.

Mr. Belmont in his letter and speech intimates, and some Democratic newspapers have taken up the cry, that it is unpatriotic to discuss the possibility of a danger to the public credit arising from the triumph of a political party. I do not so understand the duties of patriotism. When a just apprehension exists in the public mind that a certain event would be apt to injure the public credit, then true patriotism imposes upon us the duty not to close our eyes against the danger and blindly to run into it, but to look carefully ahead, and use every legitimate means to avert it. But the peril can certainly not be averted by willfully ignoring it. We might as well protest against the exposure of official corruption on the ground that it would injure the national character. The existing distrust as to the consequences of a Democratic victory has been created by the Democratic Party itself, its record, and its component elements, and not by this discussion. It is an unquestionable and a very significant fact that, while for obvious reasons considerable fear is entertained of an injurious effect of a Democratic victory upon our public credit, no man, not even the most prejudiced Democrat, questions the absolute safety of our public credit in case of the triumph of the Republican candidates. The reason is that the financial policy of the Republican Party, to whatever criticism it may have given rise in other respects, has certainly succeeded in winning, in an unprecedented degree, the confidence of the whole world as to our national securities. This general confidence, which to a nation situated as we are, is of so immense a value, would unquestionably be confirmed by the election of the Republican candidates, while a Democratic success may put it in jeopardy. There is then, certainty on one side, and on the other, to say the least, serious doubt. Between these two things we have to choose.

Submitting this expression of my views, in which I have carefully avoided any overstatement, I am gentlemen, most respectfully and truly yours,

C. SCHURZ.

NOTES FROM THE CONTROLLER'S OFFICE.

The Controller issued over 2,500 warrants on the Treasury, each of which requires his signature twice, to pay off the City creditors.

Of the permanent debt, the sinking fund pays off $2,500,000. The balance of permanent debt, amounting to $816,500, is paid from taxation, which, with $2,060,000 revenue bonds, make a reduction of $5,376,500 in the permanent and temporary City debt.

The amount of interest and City debt due yesterday is $10,303,823 40, as follows:

Interest due Nov. 1, 1876	$3,373,323 40
Stocks and bonds, permanent debt, due Nov. 1, 1876	3,316,500 00
Assessment bonds due Nov. 1, 1876	1,554,000 00
Revenue bonds due Nov. 1, 1876	2,060,000 00

Including the receipts of taxes yesterday, the sum of $12,418,105 12 has been collected within the last two weeks, since the tax-books for 1876 were opened, or more than one million dollars a day for taxes. To collect this enormous amount of taxes, a large clerical force has been constantly engaged day and night since the books were opened at the Tax Receiver's office.

The Finance Department was the scene of immense business operations yesterday and the day before. Yesterday a long line of stock and bond holders attended at the Controller's office to receive their semi-annual interest, and the amounts of due them for stocks and bonds maturing on the 1st November, and, as on the day before, the tax-payers besieged the Bureau for the Collection of Taxes all day long to pay their money into the City Treasury, and save the discount allowed for prompt payment of their taxes, that being the last day they could have the benefit of this privilege.

INSPECTORS OF ELECTION IN TROUBLE.

There is a vacancy among the Democratic Inspectors of Election in this City, which was caused by the arrest of an Inspector. It appears that one Caleb L. Woodruff, residing at No. 1,209 Broadway, was recently appointed an Inspector of Election, and also registered as a voter. Investigation into his case by United States Deputy Marshal Crowley, showed that Mr. Woodruff has not resided in this State the requisite length of time to act in either capacity. Mr. Crowley, on making this discovery, went before Commissioner Davenport and obtained a warrant for Woodruff's arrest. The latter was taken into custody and was brought before Commissioner Davenport, who committed him in default of $5,000 bail, to await the action of the Grand Jury.

William McNulty, an Inspector of Election of the Twenty-seventh Election District in the Fifth Assembly District, was charged before the Police Commissioners yesterday with having falsely sworn, on September 25, before Mr. Hasbrouck, Chief of the Bureau of Elections, that he [McNulty] was a citizen of the United States and had been a resident of the City for five years or more. From an examination of the registry of the district it was ascertained that McNulty had been naturalized as late as Oct. 4 last. John Williamson, an Inspector of Election of the Fifth Election District in the Sixth Assembly District, was charged with violating section 82 of the Election laws, in absenting himself from the place of registry on Oct. 28, and thus leaving the place without a quorum of the Board of Registry. Both cases were heard in detail and referred to the full Board of Commissioners for consideration.

LACK OF SCHOOL FUNDS IN JERSEY CITY.

It seems as though the School Board of Jersey City will be obliged to close the schools for want of funds to carry them on between Nov. 11 and Dec. 1. The Board of Finance reduced the appropriation for educational purposes in the hope of forcing the Board of Education to reduce the salaries of the teachers. The Board of Education refused to make the reduction, and ran the schools at the same expense as though the appropriation had been as large as usual. The consequence is that only enough money is left to the credit of the School Board to pay the teachers to Nov. 11, and no longer. The Board of Finance is precluded by law from making any supplemental appropriation, as is the Board of Education from incurring debts in anticipation of future appropriations. In this dilemma the teachers were invited to give their services to the city gratuitously during the hiatus. They considered the proposition at a meeting held Tuesday night and refused to accede.

A RAILROAD BOND SUIT DECIDED.

Judge Larremore, in the Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, denied the motion for an injunction against the defendants in the case of Gilley against the Illinois Central Railroad Company. The plaintiff desired to restrain the latter from refusing to take up more than twenty bonds per annum of each of two Southern Railway Companies, the Illinois Central having agreed to take up one hundred bonds of each company each year. It appeared, however, that the Illinois Central Company had taken up two-thirds of the whole amount of the bonds in a lump. The plaintiff alleged that the time of payment of his bonds of one of the Southern companies was postponed thereby and their value depreciated. Judge Larremore holds, however, that the Illinois Central was not obliged to take up the bonds in their numerical order, and that the plaintiff, if aggrieved, will have an ample remedy by his action, the defendants being responsible parties.

THE COUNCIL OF RAILROAD MANAGERS.

Another conference of the railroad managers was held yesterday morning at the Brevoort House, at which Mr. William H. Vanderbilt, of the New-York Central and Hudson River; Mr. Thomas A. Scott, of the Pennsylvania; Mr. King, of the Baltimore and Ohio, and Mr. Jewett, of the Erie, were present. The meeting, like those of the day previous, was held, it is understood, for the purpose of discussing the advisability of fixing a schedule of rates that will do away with ruinous competition, and was, like them, strictly private. Messrs. Vanderbilt and Jewett, after the conference was over, declined to make known any of the business transacted except the fact that no definite conclusion had been arrived at, and that the meeting had adjourned subject to the call of the Chairman. Both gentlemen professed ignorance of the time and place of the next meeting.

THE MANAGEMENT OF THE CANALS.

In reference to the opposition to the proposed amendment to section 3, article 5, of the Constitution, relative to the appointment of a Superintendent of Public Works and the abolition of Canal Commissioners, the President of the Produce Exchange stated yesterday to a TIMES reporter that the Board of Managers had received several letters, as well as the circular issued from Albany, indicating that an attempt would be made to defeat the amendment. Its passage, he said, would abolish the office of Canal Commissioner, and as there were three Commissioners it was very plain how their influence would be used. With respect to the distribution of ballots, he was not aware that the Exchange would take any steps in that direction, outside such action as might be taken by members in an individual capacity.

PHILIP OTTMAN'S DISAPPEARANCE.

Detectives Lyons and King, of the Central Office, who have had charge of the search for Philip Ottman, the Fulton Market butcher who disappeared so mysteriously on the evening of the 21st ult., have succeeded in tracing him to a house in Broome street, between Forsyth and Eldridge streets. He was seen in a hack standing in front of the house indicated on Saturday night, but since that time all trace of him has been lost. The detectives have also failed to trace the driver of the hack, and a reward is offered for his discovery.

In a brief address to Republicans, the Chairman of the National Committee pointedly sets forth the grounds of confidence in the result of next Tuesday's voting. His estimate of the effect produced by Mr. TILDEN'S disingenuous letter on war claims is undoubtedly correct. Not for the first time, the cunning of the Democratic candidate reacted prejudicially to his party. The question of the rebel claims, in itself formidable, acquired increased urgency from Mr. TILDEN'S epistle, which, as Mr. CHANDLER says, "alarmed, instead of quieting the Northern people." The accumulating evidence of the fact that the business men of the country realize the danger to their interests and to the public credit which the return of the South to power would entail, and the indignation aroused all over the North by the desperate devices employed by the South to break down Republican majorities, are too apparent to need more than mention. Mr. CHANDLER expresses the opinion that, despite all violence, four Southern States will give majorities for the Republican candidates; while the North, he anticipates, will be all but unanimous in their favor. These hopeful assurances are not intended to lull Republicans to sleep. They show, however, how the popular current runs, and they should stimulate the party to do its whole duty. If this be done, the result is reasonably sure. To make it sure, the work must be carried on with unbated energy to the latest moment.

We trust that Republican managers in districts which are threatened with Democratic frauds do not forget that they hold in their own hands the means of securing help from Federal officials on election day. The United States Court for any district is required, upon the petition of ten voters, to appoint Supervisors for each voting precinct within the district represented by the petitioners. Where no step has been taken it is, of course, too late to secure the advantages conferred by the presence of these Supervisors at the registration, but they are entitled to be present at the polling places next Tuesday, and at the counting of the votes in their respective precincts. Nor are the Supervisors powerless. They may obtain from the United States Marshal as many Deputies as may be required for protection in the discharge of their duties and in the maintenance of order at the polls. The law excites the ire of the Democrats, who did their utmost last session to set it aside. But it is a righteous law, and its provisions should be turned to account everywhere as diligently as they will be in this City.

If the Sheriff of Baltimore had entertained the idea which has been erroneously imputed to him, and proposed to arrest United States Deputy Marshals on election day, in order that fraudulent voting in the interest of the Democrats might go on with impunity, he would simply have accepted the suggestion thrown out by no less a personage than Senator BAYARD. The Delaware Senator, at a meeting in Baltimore the other night, actually urged resistance to the Federal law enacted to secure order and purity at the polls. He denied the authority of the National Government to enact and enforce any law relating to elections, contending that in regard to these, each State is supreme, and declaring his readiness to resist the law, in behalf of his own State, if the opportunity were afforded him. The obvious intent of Mr. BAYARD, in making the suggestion, was to precipitate a conflict between the State and Federal officials; and the frantic applause with which his defiance of the law was greeted showed that his disloyal utterances fell upon sympathetic ears. The Sheriff seems to have more sagacity than the Senator. The latter is apparently unable to control his temper in view of the safeguards which Federal law provides for honest voting, and his zeal for the Democracy manifests itself in expressions that would have been worthy of a Georgia fire-eater on the eve of the rebellion.

In announcing the abandonment of the movement in favor of a non-partisan ticket for Mayor, and other local officers, Mr. OTTENDORFER throws upon the Republican Committee the blame for the failure of the negotiations. Should the nomination of a "straight" ticket result in the entire success of the Tammany nominees, it will certainly be a misfortune for which this community will some day desire to fix the responsibility somewhere. There is very little to be gained by discussing the subject now. The Germans and Municipal Reformers can best show the sincerity of their attachment to the cause of good government by voting for the least objectionable candidates who are in the field. If they prefer ELY to DIX, CALVIN to PEABODY, or FREEDMAN to SCUDDER, they will certainly prove that there was rather more pretense than reality in their expressed solicitude to put an end to the arrogant and debasing political despotism of KELLY and his colleagues. If they desire to give a clear indication of their strength, let them make up a ticket partially selected from the Republican nominees, and so prove to the satisfaction of the politicians that the vote they represent really controls the choice of local officers in this City.

Mr. GREEN has replied to the request to be permitted to withdraw his name from the contest in a letter replete with dignity and strong common-sense. He wisely abstains from replying to the malicious slanders in regard to his "bargain" for a renomination for the Controllership or from recognizing the necessity which some captious critics have discovered of keeping in the field by way of proving the sincerity of his candidature. Mr. GREEN'S position in this contest has been from the first, a perfectly consistent one, and will, when the smoke of the conflict has cleared away, be reckoned as certainly not the least of his many services in the cause of reformed methods of local government.

In another column will be found a caustic analysis of the answer printed in the Herald to the complaint brought by HENRY H. BOODY against SAMUEL J. TILDEN. Our correspondent disposes very thoroughly of the flimsy excuse urged to palliate Mr. TILDEN'S breach of trust in connection with the purchase of the stock of the Chicago and Galena Railroad Company. He points out how thoroughly characteristic of Mr. TILDEN'S foxy and treacherous disposition has been his treatment of these charges, and with what callous disregard of all considerations of right and justice he announces his intention of pleading the Statute of Limitations as a defense to the suit. It is unfortunate for Mr. TILDEN that the plea which has helped him to swindle tradesmen and business associates will not serve him when the courts take up the case against him for fraudulently withheld income tax.

Mr. CARL SCHURZ, in his admirable statement of the dangers with which the public credit is threatened in the event of Democratic success, notices one point which has unexpected verification in the letter of Mr. REAGAN, JEFF. DAVIS' Postmaster General, as found among the rebel archives. Mr. BELMONT'S assertion is that the whole American people are as intent upon the faithful discharge of all national obligations as are the whole English people in reference to their national debt. But the British debt is a consequence of wars between Britain and foreign powers, the expediency of which no longer forms a party question. Our national debt, on the other hand, was incurred by the Government, sustained by the Northern people, for suppressing a rebellion waged by the South. The South regards the public creditor as the ally of the North, and therefore as the enemy of the Southern cause; and it would have none of the scruples in dealing with his interests which it might have felt had Mr. REAGAN'S proposition been acted upon as one of the conditions of a restored Union. That proposition was that provision should be made "for the auditing of the debt of the Confederacy, and for its payment in common with the war debt of the United States." And the reason assigned by Mr. REAGAN was that it would be unjust to compel the Southern people to assist in the payment of the war debt of the North, if no arrangement were allowed for the payment of their own creditors. This opinion is held as universally throughout the South to-day as it was in the Spring of 1865. It is, in the judgment of the South, an equitable opinion; and though its practical application is for the time forbidden by the Constitution, it cannot fail to render the Southern representatives less sensitive than otherwise they might have been to questions affecting the public credit.

Although prudent men decline to commit themselves to specific measures, predicated upon contingencies which may not arise, the contingencies themselves are worth thinking of as possible sources of very serious trouble. The tactics employed by the Democrats to secure a united South suggest more than one unpleasant hypothesis. There are certain Southern States, for example, which, under anything like a free and fair election, would be as decidedly Republican as Maine or Vermont. Alabama, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, all have assured Republican majorities, which can be overcome only by organized intimidation and violence. Exactly what questions would arise if the Democratic "shotgun policy" produce its intended result, it were idle at this moment to consider; but it is clear that awkward questions might grow out of the reported results of elections which had notoriously been controlled by violent and unlawful methods. We know in advance that only by these methods can the Democrats hope to elect their candidates in any of these States. Their denials and disclaimers are worthless. That the canvass is, on their part, a canvass which depends for its efficacy on brute force and cruelty, is a fact as well authenticated in Louisiana and Mississippi as in South Carolina; and it will naturally be borne in mind in judging of the legality of elections in these States, and their right to be considered in making up the result.

MR. EVARTS' SPEECH.

The speech of Mr. EVARTS last evening was a powerful one, and cannot be without great effect at this stage of the canvass. It was devoted mainly to a very clear and logical statement of the controlling issues pending between the two great parties, which statement was, however, preceded by an exceedingly acute and skillful comparison of the private and public characters of the candidates. Mr. EVARTS found no difficulty in giving to Gov. HAYES a cordial but discriminating indorsement, and drew a striking contrast between the services which he has rendered to his country and the principal features of Mr. TILDEN'S career.

The three subjects to which Mr. EVARTS particularly addressed himself were the prospect of specie payments afforded by the respective parties, the chances of civil service reform which each holds out, and the supreme question of the effect upon the results of the war to be expected from the election of Gov. TILDEN. His treatment of the positions of the parties relative to specie payments was exceedingly apt, and his exposure of the insincerity, imbecility, and duplicity of Mr. TILDEN'S course was very telling. On the matter of civil service reform, he was explicit. His exposition of the vicious system by which the "machine" embarrasses the public service, enfeebles the Legislature, and perverts and corrupts politics, was very plain, and was received by his audience with evidences of hearty approval. We commend our readers, who had not the pleasure of hearing Mr. EVARTS to this portion of his remarks, and to his explanation of why he believed Mr. HAYES could and would reform this evil, and why Mr. TILDEN would not if he could, and could not if he would.

In the discussion of the relations of the two parties to the results of the war. Mr. EVARTS spoke with great eloquence and force. He constantly recurred to the struggle for the Union, and his words were deeply charged with that warm patriotism which he so often displayed at that period. We have no doubt that his expressions will offend those who think there can be no statesmanship in a man who cannot regard the war with calm indifference, and treat the past as if it were not. Mr. EVARTS is not ready to bury the past, or belittle the forces which survive from that time. He does not think that it is yet safe for the American people to "recall its Stuarts." He pointed out that the turning point in the growth of the rebellion was when the South asked its political allies in the North what would be the consequences to it of military resistance to the Government. He recited the message which, on a precisely similar occasion ANDREW JACKSON had sent to the same section, contemplating a like attempt, and recalled the fact that at that crisis the attempt was abandoned, and the Union kept safe without the arming of a squadron or the loss of a life. He then recounted the course of Mr. TILDEN, who, in October, 1860, at a stage of the Presidential canvass corresponding to the one at which we now stand, had given to the South every encouragement to rebellion by his celebrated Kent letter. Had he taken the opposite course, and had his party been guided by other counsels than his, the war might have been avoided. Why, then, should we exalt to the highest place in the nation a man, who at the most trying crisis of its history, did what he could to ruin, and nothing to save, it? Why should we suppose that this man, who at such a moment yielded everything to the South, would now be able to resist its passions, its eager interest, and its burning ambition? It was true that Mr. TILDEN had said that he should veto the claims of the South, but it was a novel idea that a free and intelligent people should elect a President in order that he might veto the measures of his own party. The entire address of Mr. EVARTS was masterly. His point of view was elevated, his reasoning was logical, direct and pointed, and his lighter touches were skillful and witty.

THE MAYORALTY.

It has been conceded somewhat too hastily that the Republican nomination for Mayor has not been made with a view to win. Whatever was the motive of the political managers who headed the County ticket with the name of Gen. DIX—and we don't presume to be in the secret of their management or their motives—there can be no possible reason drawn from the character of the two candidates why Gen. DIX should not poll more votes than Mr. SMITH ELY, Jr. Mr. ELY labors under the fatal disadvantage of being the nominee of JOHN KELLY. Had the "Boss" of Tammany Hall chosen to exert his power, he might as easily have nominated for Mayor an obscure politician like Alderman PURROY, as a tolerably well-known public man like Mr. ELY. The one would have been obviously and notoriously nominated as Mr. KELLY'S "dummy"; the other must, from the necessities of his position, be a dummy too. There is nothing in Mr. ELY'S past career to show that he is incapable of doing the bidding of a man like JOHN KELLY, and there is everything in the influences which would surround him, in the event of his election, to show that he would have no choice but to obey the demands of Tammany Hall.

Mr. ELY had pluck enough in 1866 to protest against "the extravagant and improper contracts which had been made by the persons directing the erection of the new Court-house." Two years later his name appears as voting for the allowance of hundreds of thousands of dollars to GARVEY, INGERSOLL, KEYSER, MILLER, and all the familiar gang of Ring tradesmen, who erected that Court-house. Mr. ELY says that he was misrepresented by the official minutes of the old Board of Supervisors. Mr. JOHN FOX says that he was misrepresented, so does Mr. JAMES HAYES, and Mr. ISAAC OLIVER wishes a trustful public to believe that instead of helping to pass the jobs of the Ring, he was the steadfast opponent of TWEED, and was a subject of constant dread to that potentate. It is singular that these eminent statesmen did not think of correcting the alleged interpolation of the minutes when the printed copies were laid on their desks. It is still more singular that Mr. FOX did not think of this mode of defense when he was assailed by Mr. MORRISSEY for the very votes in which his name appears in conjunction with that of Mr. ELY, and that Mr. HAYES did not attempt to turn the edge of similar accusations against him when he ran for Register two years ago. Charges which helped to beat Messrs. FOX and HAYES can hardly assist to elect Mr. ELY.

But if the minutes of the Board of Supervisors are, somewhat late in the day, declared to be fraudulent, it will hardly be pretended that the minute-book of the late Stuyvesant Bank is unworthy of belief. Here are some facts which appear from that record.

Dec. 21, 1869—SMITH ELY, JR., was elected Director and President. (He was not a stockholder until Jan. 6, 1870, and never held but ten shares of stock.) He held the Presidency for a few weeks only, but on June 28, 1871—Messrs. SEARLES, ELY, LANDON, DAVIS, and BELL were appointed the Committee on Quarterly Examination.

July 1—Committee reported that "they were pleased to find the bank in so prosperous and, in their judgment, sound condition, as set forth in Cashier's quarterly report. They recommend a dividend of four per cent. (free of tax) from net earnings. They believe this just to the stockholders, and for the best interests of the bank, establishing confidence in the minds of the community, as well as insuring success to the institution."

When this report was made and adopted, the books showed that the bank was hopelessly insolvent. The nominal capital was $200,000; half of it was lost in bad debts, while the other half was locked up in the lease of the bank building and in a loan to the Columbia Iron Mine, appearing on the books as the Weed Iron Company. This loan was accepted by Mr. ELY, to whom it was referred as a committee of one. On his recommendation the bank advanced $40,000 on the security of bonds, which the Receiver sold for $12,000, and on which he received $1,200. At the date of the statement in question, "bills discounted" were reckoned among the assets at $324,149 31. But of this amount, $41,841 83 was under protest, and so hopelessly under protest that at the time of the bank's failure only $5,121 28 had been paid. Of these bills receivable, $250,073 74 were held as collateral by another bank. Six months after the failure the bank credited as collected $152,172 88 against its claim of $180,294 11. "Loans" figured in the assets at $190,612 25. Among these the Weed Iron Company loan was included at its full amount, as well as $65,200 set down after the failure as "notoriously bad." In fact, the condition of the bank was hopelessly rotten, at the time when Mr. ELY incautiously declared it to be prosperous and sound. One of the results of this culpable blunder was the deposit in this bank, and the consequent loss through its failure, of $50,000 of the savings of working men and women.

Mr. ELY may be as free of legal responsibility for his share in the mismanagement of the Stuyvesant Bank as Mayor HALL was of responsibility for signing the Ring warrants. But we do not want in the Mayor's office a man who can be so easily led by the nose, and we certainly do want a man who could be trusted to oppose, with some vigor and effect, the raids of Tammany claimants on the Public Treasury. The career of Gen. DIX as Governor of this State shows how unfaltering is his opposition to corruption in all its forms, and how hopeless would be the effort to revive under his administration the efforts, which Controller GREEN has so successfully resisted, to press the outstanding mass of fraudulent claims held by the representatives of the old Ring. From the Ring advertising bills to the smallest swindle in the shape of special legislation for the benefit of official sinecurists, nothing escaped the unfailing veto of Gov. DIX. In his hands the interests of the City would be safe, its credit sustained, and its tax-payers protected against spoliation. It would be impossible to say as much for his opponent.

A SOUND RECORD.

The financial record of our candidate for the Presidency is a sound one. There is no repudiation of dollars or of dates in it. Twelve years ago, by one of his first votes cast in Congress, he declared that the public debt is "sacred and inviolate," and that any attempt "to repudiate or in any manner impair or scale" the debt should be promptly rejected by Congress. In the years 1866 and 1867, when a successful candidate for Congress and for Governor, and in 1868, when not a candidate for any office, he vigorously battled against the tide, in those years strongly setting in in favor of the captivating scheme of wiping out the war debt with an enormous greenback inflation. Gen. HAYES manfully maintained his ground with all the Democrats in Ohio and part of the Republicans against him. Even Senator THURMAN, who has since been ostracized by his party for his supposed hard-money views, in a speech delivered at Marietta in August, 1867, distinctly declared in favor of the payment of the five-twenties in greenbacks.

In the canvass of 1869 Gov. HAYES fought and vanquished PENDLETON, the author of the greenback heresy, on the square issue of greenback expansion. In 1872, in his Glendale speech of Sept. 4, he said:

"In the present condition of the country two things are of vital importance- peace and a sound financial policy. We want peace, honorable peace, with all nations, peace with the Indians, and peace between all of the citizens of all the States. We want a financial policy so honest that there can be no stain upon the national honor and no taint on the national credit; so stable that labor and capital and legitimate business of every sort can confidently count upon what it will be the next week, the next month, and the next year."

Then again emerging from private life after a third nomination for Governor had been forced upon him, he reiterated his old faith, and with singular exactness sets forth the evils of inconvertible paper, in a speech delivered at Marion, Ohio, July 31, 1875:

"An irredeemable and inflated paper currency promotes speculation and extravagance, and at the same time discourages legitimate business, honest labor, and economy. It dries up the true sources of individual and public prosperity. Overtrading and fast living always go with it. It stimulates the desire to incur debt; it causes high rates of interest; it increases importations from abroad; it has no fixed value; it is liable to frequent and great fluctuations, thereby rendering every pecuniary engagement precarious, and disturbing all existing contracts and expectations; it is the parent of panics. Every period of inflation is followed by a loss of confidence, a shrinkage of values, depression of business, panics, lack of employment, and widespread disaster and distress."

In the same speech, with a clear comprehension of what ex-Secretary BOUTWELL and others seemed confused about, he says:

"The more promises to pay an individual issues, without redeeming them, the worse becomes his credit. It is the same with nations. The legal-tender note for five dollars is the promise of the United States to pay that sum in the money of the world—in coin. No time is fixed for its payment. It is therefore payable on presentation—on demand."

The history of the great currency campaign of 1875, is well known. In it Gov. HAYES was raised from a State leader to a national man. He had to struggle against adverse majorities and demagoguery in its most dangerous forms. The Democracy had carried the State by 24,000 majority on their Congressional ticket the year before. His competitor was a popular man, then holding possession of power. The aggressive inflation party fully expected to elect WILLIAM ALLEN Governor of Ohio by a prodigious majority and then nominate and elect him President of the United States. That they were paving the way with their inflation lunacy to elect his Republican competitor to both offices, never entered their inflated calculations. HAYES had to encounter and cure this paper-money madness in his own party. Republican members of Congress begged him to tone down, for the sake of success, his hard-money views. His answer can be found in his Marion speech, from which we have quoted, and in the Garfield letter, written on the 4th of the following March. In that already-published letter are as bold and as courageous expressions as any public man ever used:

"My opinion is decidedly against yielding a hair's breadth. * * * 'No steps backward' must be something more than unmeaning platform words. * * * We are in a condition such that firmness and adherence to principle are of peculiar value just now. * * * To yield or to compromise is weakness, and will destroy us."

After what we have quoted, Gov. HAYES could well say in his letter of acceptance: "On the currency question I have frequently expressed my views in public, and I stand by my record on this subject." What follows is familiar to every man who has been honestly seeking to learn who has made sound money pledges, and who has kept them.

For more than ten years the financial faith of the Republican candidate has been known to the world. He believes that duty and interest alike require the earliest resumption of specie payments. He is opposed to repealing the present Resumption act, or unsettling the date, which is the vital point—unless a better act is substituted in its place. The only paper or leather dollar he believes in is one that is at all times instantly convertible into coin. The only promise to pay that can be safely used as a measure of values, he thinks, is one that, at all hours, has a coin dollar behind it with which to redeem it. For the Government to promise every day to pay three hundred and sixty millions of greenback dollars, and refuse every day to pay a dollar, he believes is neither sound business nor sound morality. To postpone indefinitely the period or date of payment or solvency, is to leave the Government in the condition of a broken bank or an insolvent debtor. A private debtor who has the ability to pay his overdue debts, and refuses to pay them, or to take any steps or to fix any date or time when he will pay them, would be looked upon as lacking common honesty. And this is the precise way in which Mr. TILDEN and his friends would have the Government of the United States regarded.

A CHIVALROUS JUDGE.

JOHANNA TURBIN is a resident of the District of Columbia who, some time since, had a little difficulty with her husband. After a lively debate, in which Mr. TURBIN displayed an unbecoming obstinacy, his wife convinced him of his error by summarily killing him, and subsequently soothed her wounded feelings by cutting him in pieces. A brutal Grand Jury, wholly forgetful of the respect due to Mrs. TURBIN'S sex, indicted her for murder, of which crime she was found guilty. On Tuesday last she was arraigned for sentence, but fortunately for the honor of our country, the Judge was a truly chivalrous man. He informed Mrs. TURBIN that she had committed "a most atrocious and revolting" crime, and that "if there ever was a case in which capital punishment was deserved" it was the case under consideration. Nevertheless, the Judge felt "a repulsion" toward hanging a woman, and he therefore announced that he would take measures to secure the commutation of the death sentence, which the law required him to pass, and that the criminal could confidently count upon escaping the gallows. Thus we are spared the disgrace of hanging a woman merely because she had committed an atrocious crime, and the sacred right of women to kill their husbands is established more firmly than ever.

Hitherto women who have been tried for murder have been acquitted on the plea of insanity. Of course, this was merely a legal fiction, invented in order to remedy the failure of the law to exempt the sex from capital punishment. Every one knows that Mrs. HARRIS, Mrs. FAIR, and other female homicides, were perfectly sane, and were acquitted solely because of their sex. Still, no lawyer has so far ventured to claim an acquittal for a female homicide on the solitary plea that she was a woman. While the fiction of "temporary insanity" has always secured the desired result, it was a clumsy way of supplementing a defect in the law. That defect no longer exists. The Washington Judge has boldly decided that a woman must not be hanged in any circumstances. This decision renders the insanity plea henceforth unnecessary, and when Mrs. HOUSE kills her next husband, and is indicted by an ignorant grand jury, her counsel will save her from the gallows by merely proving that she is a woman, and citing the precedent established in the case of Mrs. TURBIN.

That no plea of insanity was made in Mrs. TURBIN'S behalf may seem strange, but it is readily accounted for by the fact that she was a colored woman. It is universally recognized by our courts that colored criminals are never insane. As a rule, the colored murderer has neither money, friends, nor political influence, and hence he is hanged with great promptness, and the inexorable impartiality of the law is thus justified. Had Mrs. TURBIN been a white woman, the jury would have found her insane without leaving their seats. Being a colored woman, the hypothesis of her insanity was out of the question, and hence had it not been for the Christian Judge, who regarded her sex rather than her color, she would doubtless have been hanged for the murder of which the jury was compelled to find her guilty.

The judicial announcement of the great truth that women ought not to be hanged is a matter upon which honest and straightforward people ought to congratulate themselves. To laymen who cannot appreciate the subtleties of law, it has always seemed unpleasantly disingenuous to ask for the acquittal of a female homicide on the false plea of insanity, when the Judge, the jury, and the public perfectly well understand that the defense was the fact of the defendant's sex. Henceforth there will be an end of this sort of thing. When next a woman is tried for murder, her lawyer will call witnesses who have seen her try to hit a nail with a hammer, and have noticed the subsequent state of her fingers, or who are prepared to swear that they have known her to mend broken chairs with mucilage; and having thus proved her to be a woman, he will demand and secure her acquittal. The maxim that a woman can do no wrong in the direction of homicide will hereafter be an acknowledged principle of our criminal jurisprudence, and even the humble colored woman whose razor carves the throats of objectionable husbands will no longer be in peril of her life because her color is judicially held to be incompatible with insanity.

Having gone so far in our determination to honor and protect woman, we ought to go a step further. Now that it is settled that no woman can be hanged for murder, we should also exempt the sex from punishment for lesser crimes. We have given women authority to take our lives whenever they so desire, and we ought to be equally willing to surrender to them our property. The chivalry which refuses to hang a woman for murder but which punishes her for theft is inconsistent. What is wanted is an amendment to the Constitution guaranteeing to women the full enjoyment of theft, arson, forgery, and other crimes. The world will then know that we are the most chivalrous people in existence, and that our respect for women is so unbounded that we regard them as licensed criminals, and hold them to be as irresponsible as full-grown lunatics or chemically pure idiots.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN.

A Republican Legislature, years before Gov. Tilden's term, provided for the payment of the bounty debt. When, by the provision thus made, the debt was canceled, Gov. Tilden claimed the credit of doing it.

The total taxes levied in this State during Gov. Morgan's second term of office, were $12,471,041. For two years under Gov. Tilden, they have been $22,835,854. The current expenses for the same period under Gov. Morgan, were $7,409,772; under Gov. Tilden, they are $15,576,167.

The cost of running the State Government under Morgan, in 1861, was $2,342,862; under Dix, in 1873, it was $3,194,395; and under Tilden, with all his "economies," during the current year, it has risen to $3,734,271, or over half a million more than was ever known before.

Mr. Tilden makes professions and pledges of what he will do if elected President. We should have more confidence in these, if Mr. Tilden had not previously given us his code of morality on this matter, in his "Kent letter," wherein, referring to the probable election of President Lincoln, he says: "Our only hope must be that as President he will abandon the creed, the principles, and the pledges on which he has been elected."

"The Brady's Bend Iron Company, as reformed by Samuel J. Tilden," was the motto on a large placard suspended in the ruined mill of the company on the occasion of a Republican meeting held in it last week. Mr. H. Dudley, former Superintendent of the works, addressed the meeting and explained how the once prosperous concern and the little village which depended upon it had been ruined by the stock-watering of Samuel J. Tilden.

"I did not sign it," cries Gov. Tilden, when asked how it was that the bill became law giving Willard Johnson $55,000 on a contract which had been declared fraudulent. The Governor is right. He did not sign it; he only kept it the ten days necessary to make it become a law. Mr. Delos De Wolf, banker, and Democratic leader of Oswego County, can explain what arguments he used with Mr. Tilden to save the bill and his advances to Johnson.

We have been hearing from the solid South. We now hear from solid New-York. Wealth speaks Commerce has tongues as well as wings. Capital sounds the alarm. The men of wealth and of substance, of solid worth and exalted character, of highest standing and largest influence, have, with united voices, warned their countrymen of calamities to come. Never has New-York spoken with such weight. The call to Charles Sumner to speak when foreign intervention seemed impending, was not of such weighty force as that with which William M. Evarts has been honored.

Do not forget that two important constitutional amendments are to be voted upon at the coming election. They are intended to place the State Prisons under one general officer, to be called the Superintendent of State Prisons, and the canals under one head, to be called the Superintendent of Public Works. These officers are to be appointed by the Governor of the State, and to hold office during his term. This places the whole responsibility for the conduct of these works and institutions directly upon the Governor and his two appointees. At present we have a beautiful arrangement of double-action boards and commissions, specially contrived for inefficiency and shifting responsibility.

While preparing his admirable letter of acceptance, in the executive office at Columbus, Gov. Hayes said to a friend: "I have been overwhelmed with letters from Indiana imploring me to put some soft-money phrases in my letter, and warning me that the State will be lost should I not do so. But I can't do that thing, so I guess we shall have to throw Indiana overboard. Thus by standing by his hard money convictions, the Republican candidate has lost inflation support in the West. Shall not the East reward an honest Western man who in principle is with them, who thinks as they they think and dares to say so, with inflationists threatening and surrounding him!

Mr. J. Albert Englehardt has been renominated for the Assembly by the Republicans of the Twentieth District. Mr. Englehardt was a good and useful member of the last House, and did not disappoint the just expectations of those who elected him. He is a gentleman who represents the best element of our voting population, and was looked up to and respected as such. He seldom spoke without commanding the attention of the House. If members could not always agree with him, they at least felt that they were listening to a gentleman who believed what he said, and was far above the influence of mercenary considerations.

Quite recently Mr. Tilden has found it to his advantage to pen some very pretty sentences about reform in the civil service, but as he had already made for himself a record, as in the case of Rev. E. W. Flower, a Union soldier crippled in the war, by turning Republicans out of office merely because they were not Democrats, his professions were received with decided coolness. Gov. Hayes' devotion to this reform is more than a profitable novelty. Eight years ago he supported Jenckes' bill, and six years ago he recommended, in one of his Messages as Governor, the amendment of the Ohio Constitution so as to make civil service reform a part of the organic law. Furthermore, though influentially urged to turn out the Democratic State Librarian and appoint a most worthy and competent Republican, he refused, because the incumbent was "painstaking, faithful, and courteous." The contrast is strong enough to make its moral apparent.

Joseph Hoffman has been renominated for the Assembly in the Tenth District. We hope respectable Republicans there will not vote for him. The nomination should never have been made. Personally the man is not worth notice; but as the Republican Party has to bear the responsibility of his acts, a few words may be devoted to him. Hoffman served his first term in the last Assembly. He first attracted attention by the silent stolidity of his demeanor and a hopeless idiocy of mind which raised a doubt whether he understood what the Assembly was, or why he was in it. About the close of the session, the fact seemed to have wormed itself into his head that votes had an exchangeable value; that they could be sold like any of the commodities he was accustomed to vend. From that time, his party was sold out on every close vote. He was one of the four renegades who defeated the Ogden charter on its final passage. He became an object of universal contempt. Other men would have sunk under it, but Hoffman appeared too stupid to feel any sense of shame. He was ironically pointed at as a "specimen of the party of moral ideas." Most people thought he had been disposed of when the Legislature adjourned, and he ought to have been. Such men are not only utterly useless, but a positive detriment to the party which they are supposed to represent. Of what earthly use is it to elect a "Republican," who votes against his party every time the other side are willing to buy a vote?

The Republicans of the Seventeenth District have done themselves honor by renominating for the Assembly Mr. William T. Graff. They have a right to feel proud of the gentleman who represents them. Mr. Graff took his seat in the last House entirely unknown outside his own district. At the close of the session he was respected and honored by everybody, without distinction of party. He was probably one of the most painstaking and conscientious members that ever sat in the Assembly. It was said of him that he never gave a vote without knowing all that could be learned about the matter he voted upon. His bill files and memoranda were so accurate a record of the business of the House, that whenever a member wanted to learn the situation of a bill, or any other matter, he went to Mr. Graff, who forthwith produced his little book or hauled out his files and gave the needed information at a glance. Mr. Graff's inflexible honesty became almost proverbial. He was not an easy speaker, yet when the House came to learn what sort of a man it had in him, he never spoke without being respectfully listened to; and his vote was one which generally carried a number of others with it. "I shall vote as Graff votes," was a frequently heard observation from members who wished to vote right, but had not a very clear idea of the matter in hand. A characteristic incident was Mr. Graff's return of all his unused official stationery to the Assembly Clerk, at the close of the session. The old Clerk told of it with great glee, and it would never have been known had he not mentioned it. Mr. Graff, though a firm Republican, is not a partisan. No one asked him to vote for a bill merely on party grounds. It would be useless. If he could conscientiously approve the measure, he voted for it; not otherwise. His sole desire and effort seemed to be to do his duty.

The large number of persons who think that the use of public money for sectarian purposes is dangerous to the stability of the public school system, will not forget Gov. Tilden's discreditable course concerning the Gray Nuns bill in 1875, and his refusal to preside over a public meeting held in 1871, and having for its object the non-partisan condemnation of such use of the funds of the State. The question was also raised in the last campaign in Ohio, when the Democrats truckled to the Priest-led foreigners who demanded a division of the school fund, while the Republicans, led by Gov. Hayes—who though no enemy of Catholics as religionists, is the relentless enemy of Catholics as Catholic politicians, as he would be of Methodists as Methodist politicians—insisted upon political recognition of the fact that our system of free secular schools lies at the very basis of our liberties, and won a triumph, owing far more than has been realized to the abhorrence excited by the attempt to substitute parochial for public schools. The Ohio journals contain abundant evidence as to the boldness of the assault and the reality of the danger.

OBITUARY.

GEORGE SHEARMAN.

George Shearman, one of the oldest printers in the State, died yesterday in Williamsburgh, at the age of sixty-two. He was a native of Providence, Rhode Island, in which city he learned his trade. He came to New York in 1834, and was employed in the office of the Courier and Enquirer. Subsequently, he worked in the office of the New York Gazette and on Mumford's Standard. In 1841, in company with Jeremiah Gray and other printers, he began the publication of the Planet, a daily Democratic newspaper, which had an existence of about two years. He was one of the first compositors employed on the Tribune when that journal was founded by Horace Greeley, and he remained in that office until near the end of his life. He was highly respected by the members of his craft for his devotion to the art of which he was such a proficient master; and all who knew him will remember him as an honest, kindly and honorable man.

LETTER FROM MR. J. M. FORBES.

An assertion by Mr. Wendell Phillips, in reference to the management of the canvass in the Seventh Congressional District of Massachusetts, has elicited from Mr. J. M. Forbes a letter, in which he says: "Mr. Phillips's language is easily open to the construction that I had been guilty of the sublime impertinence of pretending to direct the course of Judge Hoar, the man of all others who best knows his own mind and acts upon his own convictions. If Mr. Phillips, however, simply means that I expressed my opinion that Judge Hoar ought not to submit to his dictation, and in the face of such a canvass plead before him for votes by putting out opinions or promises, Mr. Phillips may be right. In this he would only give me credit for the opinion held by most sane men then, and which, with equal force, applies to the very transparent bait lately thrown out by Gov. Tilden for Northern votes in promising to veto the claims of his solid South for our soldiers' trespasses on the sacred soil."

THE INDIAN BATTLE ON CEDAR CREEK.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—An official report of the battle between Sitting Bull, Pretty Bear, Bull Eagle, John San Arcs, Standing Bear, Gaul, and White Bear, on Cedar Creek, the general results of which were given in a St. Paul dispatch last night, states that the number of Indians known to have been killed is five. The report concludes: "I believe this matter can be closed now by vigorous work. Some cavalry is indispensable."

SILVER COIN AND BULLION FOR CHINA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—The Pacific Mail steamer Alaska sailed to-day for Hong Kong via Yokohama, taking out $600,000 in silver coin and bullion, a large proportion of which was sent by local banks, on account of Eastern and European correspondents, who prefer to settle their indebtedness in Oriental markets through this channel, and have recently purchased bills on San Francisco to large amounts for that purpose.

THE NATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

TO THE REPUBLICANS OF THE UNITED STATES.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE,
FIFTH AVENUE HOTEL,
NEW-YORK CITY, Nov. 1, 1876.

A spontaneous and enthusiastic uprising of the Northern people within the last few days, evidenced by recent advices up to this evening at these head-quarters, leaves no doubt about the election of Hayes and Wheeler by a large majority of electoral votes. The evasive and valueless promises of Mr. Tilden, with the stereotyped and reluctant approval forced by him from a few Southern Democratic committees not to press rebel war claims for loss or damage to property, although still demanding the payment to rebels as well as to loyal persons, of about two thousand millions of dollars claimed in their bills before Congress for supplies furnished or taken, and for use and occupation of property, have failed to produce conviction in the face of overwhelming evidence of their contrary purpose, and have alarmed instead of quieting the Northern people.

The imminent danger to the public credit, and to reviving commerce and manufactures, if the payment of the national debt is to depend upon a Government of men whose rebellion that debt was created to suppress, has aroused the merchants and business men of New-York and of the country.

The violation, over nearly half the territory of the nation, by intimidation and murder, of the fundamental republican principle that the ballot shall be freely chosen and safely cast, is rallying a united North to put down promptly this new Southern rebellion.

With this uprising of Northern sentiment, every Northern State will probably be carried for Hayes. The frauds in New-York City will be prevented, and the Democratic City majority kept down to such an amount that the large Republican majorities elsewhere will not fail to overcome it and secure a decided majority in the State for Hayes and Wheeler. The three Pacific coast States and New-Jersey are believed to be surely Republican, and there is a good fighting chance for Indiana, while the information from North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, and Louisiana shows that, in spite of the murderous opposition of Tilden Democrats, those Southern States will give majorities for Hayes. The systematic and prearranged boastings from the Tilden head-quarters in New-York are only desperate expedients to avert inevitable defeat. The Republicans of the country have only to perform their full duty, and every man go early to the polls, and the triumph of Hayes and Wheeler will be overwhelming.

Z. CHANDLER, Chairman.

ALBANY AND RENSSELAER COUNTIES.

THE BEST OF FEELING AMONG REPUBLICANS—BUSINESS MEN OF BOTH PARTIES WANT TILDEN DEFEATED—NO ONE WANTS HIM ELECTED BUT THE ARMY OF CLERKS WHO ARE PAID BY THE STATE FOR DOING THE GOVERNOR'S CAMPAIGN WORK.

TROY, Wednesday, Nov. 1, 1876.

If the Republicans of Rensselaer County do as well as they expect, and those of Albany County as well as they hope, the two counties ought to offset each other in the majorities for the Electoral ticket. But in both counties there is a large margin denominated the "floating vote," on which neither party is able to make very reliable calculations. In Albany County the Democratic majority is variously estimated from 700 to 1,500. There is a large number of leading Democrats in that city who will not vote for Tilden under any circumstances, and there is a much larger number who wont vote for him unless they are paid for it, provided inducements are held out for them to vote for some one else. The number who will vote for Tilden because they like the man, or think him a fit candidate for the Presidency, is confined almost exclusively to the men comprising what is known as his "kitchen cabinet." These men are working for him with an unscrupulous devotion and a desperation that are not surprising when it is considered that they are, for the most part, upstarts, who owe all they are to him, and who know very well that if he is defeated they will all sink back into their native insignificance. They are aided in their work by all the clerks in the State departments, who, for the last three months, have illustrated Tilden's idea of civil service by devoting their whole time to the political campaign of their master while drawing their pay from the State Treasury. But they constitute only a very small fraction of the votes that Tilden must get if he carries this State, or even Albany County. The Democracy cannot all be furnished with clerkships or be given employment on the canals when there is no work to be done. The bulk of them must be rewarded in some other way, and there is no other way but to buy their votes. This is what Tilden proposes to do. It is the only way in which he can make a decent show of support from his own party in the capital of the State where he has resided for the last two years. He understands this and so do the voters, and there is probably not one Democrat in ten in Albany County who will not insist upon seeing the inside of those famous "bar'ls" before he casts his vote for "Tilden and Reform" on Tuesday next. But, in spite of all these obstacles which they have to contend against, the Albany Republicans expect to get enough of the better class of Democrats, who can neither be bribed nor intimidated, to reduce the usual Democratic majorities of the county at least one-half. They also feel confident of electing their Congressman, Hon. Hamilton Harris, over Terrence Quinn, the Democratic candidate, who, like his Presidential candidate, is trying to buy his way to Washington. The Assembly delegation will probably stand the same as last year, two Republicans and two Democrats. James F. Fisher in the First District, and Addison A. Keyes in the Third, will probably be the Republican members, and there is also a fair chance of electing W. W. Braman in the Fourth District.

RENSSELAER COUNTY.

This county two years ago gave Tilden 21 majority, and has regretted it ever since. A year afterward (1875) it reduced the majority for Tilden's ticket to 14 for Sohn Bigelow, and this year it expects to make another reduction in the same ratio, which will leave a Republican majority of 807. In Troy, as in Albany, there are many of the better class who will not vote for Tilden, and within ten days past there have been many changes among business men, who, up to that time, intended to vote the Democratic ticket. Tilden's letter promising to veto rebel war claims, instead of allaying apprehension has greatly increased it, and every day brings reports of accessions to the Republican ranks from business men and tax-payers who, but for that letter, would probably have voted for Tilden. I have heard the names of more than a dozen in this city to-day who have always voted the Democratic ticket, but who now declare their intention to vote for Hayes and Wheeler. A marked change has taken place in the spirits of Republicans all through the State from last week, and the Democratic brag and bluster which have prevailed all along the line for the past ten days are now pitched on a much lower key. The real panic turned out to be on the Democratic side, and the extent of the fright was made manifest when the head of the ticket found it necessary to write that letter to Hewitt. The Republicans of Rensselaer County who, previous to that letter, were claiming a majority of only 200 or 309, now predict a thousand and over. The majority for Martin I. Townsend, for Congress, in this district, comprising the Counties of Rensselaer and Washington, is estimated at 3,500. The Republicans will carry the Second and Third Assembly Districts, electing John J. Filkins and Richard A. Derrick, which will leave the delegation the same as last year—two Republicans to one Democrat. The people are thoroughly aroused all over the county, and the vote will be the largest ever polled, which, in the country towns, means an increased Republican majority. In the City of Troy it means a full Democratic vote for Tilden, provided the "barr'ls" hold out, but not otherwise.

SENATOR BLAINE AT AUBURN.

THE GREATEST POLITICAL DEMONSTRATION EVER HELD IN CAYUGA COUNTY—AN IMPOSING PROCESSION AND SEVERAL IMMENSE MEETINGS—SPEECHES BY SENATOR BLAINE AND GEN. GIBSON.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

AUBURN, Nov. 1.—The Republican demonstration in Auburn to-day exceeded in enthusiasm any political meeting ever held in this city. At an early hour the streets were thronged with people from the surrounding country, and private dwellings and stores were profusely decorated. A severe rain-storm, accompanied with thunder, deluged the streets, but in no manner diminished the enthusiasm of the people. At 12 o'clock the procession was formed, and delegations from the various towns marched through the principal streets. A cavalcade a mile in length was the feature of the day. The town of Sinnett received a flag as a prize for turning out the largest number. At 2 o'clock the speaking was commenced from the grand stand in front of the Court-house. Gen. Gibson, of Ohio, thrilled the immense audience with an impassioned speech of three hours. Senator Blaine arrived from Ithaca at 7 o'clock by special train. As early as 5 o'clock the crowds gathered at the Opera-house and Court-house and patiently awaited the opening of the doors. The jam was unprecedented in any campaign in this city. Both the opera-house and court-house were packed to overflowing. Meetings were extemporised in the street. Gen. Gibson and Senator W. B. Woodin addressed the people at the Opera-house and G. W. Carter at the Court-house.

Senator Blaine arrived at the Opera-house at 9 o'clock, and was received with thunders of applause, repeated again and again. In his speech, he referred to the fact that the debt of New-York City and Brooklyn, under the rule of the Democrats, and in the immediate control of Gov. Tilden, was over two hundred millions, more than the indebtedness of the country incurred in the war of the revolution. He reviewed the Southern claims question, showing that there were no Constitutional objections to the Riddle bill and kindred bills, and that, while the Constitution prohibited the payment of debts incurred for the rebellion, it did not stand in the way of the payment of debts incurred on account of the Rebellion. He referred to the fact that the South had always dictated the policy of the Democratic Party, and always would; that the party expected to succeed by a solid South and two or three Northern States, and that fact meant Southern rule. He showed the result of this return to power of the South, and illustrated the subserviency of the Democratic Party to the South by the fact that all the chairmanships of the principal committees in the present Congress were occupied by Southern men, and New-England, with eleven of the ablest Democrats in the House, were deprived of representation. The Democrats hoped to elect Mr. Tilden by two agencies—coercion in the South and fraudulent votes in New-York. In both instances they were to be disappointed. He assured the people that all measures would be taken in New-York and Brooklyn to prevent the home of the reformer from perpetrating the crime of electing him through fraud. Referring to the sending of troops to the South, he said the country that could not protect its humblest citizen in the rights of citizenship was unworthy of allegiance, and that while no Democrat would be deprived of his vote, every Republican of the South should be protected in his endeavor to vote as his conscience dictated without molestation or intimidation. This sentiment, eloquently expressed, was received with cheer after cheer. Mr. Blaine spoke for nearly an hour at the Opera-house, and then proceeded to the Court-house, where another audience awaited his arrival, whom he addressed for half an hour. The speeches were all of great merit, and produced an enthusiasm paralleled only in the wonderful campaigns of Lincoln's day. The meetings closed at 11 o'clock. The most encouraging feeling prevails, and the County of Cayuga will do its full duty on Tuesday next.

A GREAT MEETING IN ITHACA.

THE REPUBLICANS OF TOMPKINS COUNTY AROUSED—SENATOR BLAINE ON THE SOUTHERN CLAIMS QUESTION—A GRAND TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ITHACA, Nov. 1.—This afternoon and evening has witnessed here the grandest political demonstration in the history of this section of the country. It has been said, with some degree of truth during the great campaign, that the Republicans of Tompkins County were lacking in enthusiasm and interest, but in the light of the magnificent rally of to-day, this charge loses all its force, and it may be stated as a truth that if all sections of the Empire State are as thoroughly aroused to the importance of the occasion as is this county at the present time, there need not exist the slightest fear in the heart of a single friend of the party anywhere but that the Republicans are to achieve in this State, rightly called the battle-ground of the campaign, on Tuesday next, a splendid and overwhelming victory. To-day was the occasion of the coming to Ithaca, for the first time, of Senator Blaine, and at an early hour, from near and far, loyal friends of the party and admirers of the great ex-Speaker began to pour in. They came from every town in the county, in vehicles of all descriptions, in large delegations, with banners and flags waving, and bands playing; in small parties, singly, on foot, on horseback; they came in throngs on the railroad from many surrounding towns and counties; they literally swarmed into the place from everywhere and in every fashion, until, when the hour arrived for the speaking, there was a sea of humanity surging toward the Fair Grounds, where a monster tent had been erected, whose ample folds covered thousands gathered there to listen to forcible and convincing addresses by Senator Blaine, Hon. Galusha A. Grow, and Hon. Francis M. Finch, Chairman of the meeting.

Thunders of applause went up at frequent intervals from the huge throng as some telling point was made. Senator Blaine's arraignment of Tilden and the "reform" party, added scope for the terrible and scathing invective, in which lies his great force as an orator, and it was called into play without stint. The Senator confined himself most largely, however, to a discussion of the Southern claims question, showing most clearly the real danger in which the nation would be placed by the election of Tilden to the Presidency, on this account if on no other. Mr. Blaine left for Auburn at the conclusion of his speech, having spoken twice yesterday and twice again to-day. He is laboring incessantly, but bears it well.

Mr. Grow's address was an able discussion of the financial question. The speaking continued for over two hours, being interspersed by well-executed campaign solos by Mr. E. D. Hocking, of Syracuse, who has done much good in this manner throughout this part of the State in the present campaign. To-night occurred the largest and finest torchlight procession ever held here on a political occasion, thousands participating in it, while the whole town was ablaze with illuminations and fireworks, the residences of hundreds of our more prominent citizens being handsomely adorned with flags, banners, bunting, transparencies, &c. In the parade there were ten bands, delegations of Wideawakes from Cortland, Waverly, Dryden, Candor, Trumansburg, Spencer, Danby, Ithaca, and other places, and hosts of citizens mounted and on foot carrying torches, lanterns, flambeaus, and transparencies. Prominent in the procession were a large number of the Cornell University cadets in uniform, and commanded by their regular officers. The University is largely Republican. After passing through the principal streets the procession countermarched in front of the hall, where the orators of the evening, Hons. C. D. Murray and Galusha A. Grow, were stationed, and while this was in progress a pyrotechnical display, principally gotten up by the "Kappa Alpha" and "Zeta Psi" fraternities of the University, occurred. After the parade, addresses were made to immense throngs by the gentlemen mentioned, and their stirring and encouraging words formed a fitting close to a day such as we have never had here before, and one which, if there be any virtue in such signs, must foretell a great success for the party in this section on Tuesday next. In addition to the distinguished gentlemen on the stage already mentioned, were Hon. Douglas Boardman, Judge of the Supreme Court; Hon. J. W. Dwight, candidate for Congress from this (Twenty-eighth) district; Hon. E. S. Esty, Hon. C. D. Murray, Hon. W. L. Bostwick, B. G. Jayne, Senator Seikreg, and numbers of others of the most prominent and highly estimable citizens of this and surrounding places.

THE PRELIMINARY SKIRMISH.

THE SHAM REFORMERS DEFEATED IN SAG HARBOR—HOW LONG ISLAND REPUBLICANS ARE WORKING FOR THE GOOD OF THE PARTY.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

SAG HARBOR, Wednesday, Nov. 1, 1876.

The Tilden Democracy of this village have for weeks been playing the same game of brag and bluster here as elsewhere throughout the State. They have claimed that they would carry this village by a considerable majority, and their leaders have repeated the story so often, under the direction of their New-York masters, that they began to believe it. The annual school meeting was adjourned until last evening, and the Tildenites determined to put in nomination a clean Democratic ticket for members of the Board of Education, the purpose being to take the people of the village unawares, elect the ticket and then howl over great gains for "Tilden and Reform." They "counted their chickens before they were hatched." The Republican leaders here took hold of the matter, and the sham Reformers and their ticket were defeated overwhelmingly, namely, by a majority of 94 in a total vote of 220. Great preparations had been made by the Tildenites for a grand jollification. But after the count, disappointed and disheartened, they left the polling place.

This is the first skirmish on the east end of Long Island. The Republicans have been earnestly but quietly at work. Their canvass is complete. Enthusiasm has given place to stern determination, and on the 7th of November the towns of East and South Hampton will roll up an old-fashioned majority for Hayes and Wheeler, Morgan and Rogers, and true reform.

MEETING OF REPUBLICANS IN BROOME COUNTY—SPEECHES BY GOV. NOYES AND GEN. SHERIDAN—THE MEETING BROKEN UP BY DEMOCRATS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BINGHAMTON, Nov. 1.—The mass-meeting of the Broome County Republicans in this city to-day was by far the largest political gathering seen in this part of the State for years. It is estimated that 15,000 people filled the streets, and elaborate decorations gave a gala day appearance to the place. Large delegations from the neighboring towns were arriving all the morning, and when the procession started about noon, its ranks extended nearly two miles. The industrial and manufacturing interests of the city were largely represented. The afternoon meeting was addressed by ex-Gov. E. F. Noyes, of Ohio, and in the evening by Gen. George A. Sheridan and Hon. Edward Culver. The torchlight procession numbered about one thousand, and the line of march was finely illuminated. The evening meeting was so largely attended, that thousands were unable to gain admittance to the spacious wigwam, and an out-of-door meeting was organized in front of the Exchange Hotel, with Gen. Sheridan, of New-Orleans, as speaker. The meeting was broken up by a Democratic mob, led by "Jim" Lyon, a notoriously bad character, who upon several occasions has unsuccessfully endeavored to break up Republican meetings by organizing meetings, and who, becoming exasperated by the repeated failures of his party, and by the Republican success to-day, made it impossible for Gen. Sheridan to speak. This action against free speech has cost the Democrats many votes.

THE REPUBLICANS OF OSWEGO COUNTY—A LARGE MEETING IN OSWEGO—SPEECHES BY COL. CARTER AND SENATOR BOUTWELL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

OSWEGO, Nov. 1.—By far the largest meeting of the campaign was held in this city last evening by the Republicans. At least three thousand five hundred people—many of them being ladies—assembled to hear the political questions of the campaign discussed by two able and distinguished speakers. Hon. John C. Churchill, ex-Member of Congress, presided. The first speaker of the evening was Col. George W. Carter, the eloquent Louisianian, who, though suffering from severe hoarseness, delivered a very able and eloquent speech of an hour in length, showing up the Southern question in a clear and convincing manner. Col. Carter was followed by ex-Senator Boutwell, of Massachusetts, who spoke in an able manner of the main issues of the campaign. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed. The Republicans of Oswego County are wide awake and enthusiastic, and will make a good report on Tuesday next. The whole line is in motion. On Friday evening next the Republicans will have a monster torchlight procession.

GREAT RALLY OF JEFFERSON COUNTY REPUBLICANS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WATERTOWN, Nov. 1.—The Republicans of Jefferson County held a mass-meeting here to-day, and, notwithstanding very unpropitious weather, it has been a remarkable success. Rain commenced falling at an early hour this morning, and heavy showers followed in quick succession all day. Despite this, the people came flocking in, and all arriving trains were well loaded. About noon, a procession of several hundred horsemen in uniform was formed and paraded the streets. An afternoon meeting was advertised to be addressed by Senator Boutwell and Gen. Thayer, and the crowd was so great that it became necessary to transfer the meeting from the place advertised to the skating rink. This evening there has been a torchlight procession, composed of influential business men of this city and surrounding towns in this county. Hundreds of dwellings along the line of march were profusely decorated and illuminated, which, with the brilliant display of fireworks, made a thrilling scene. Another meeting was held at the rink this evening, when John A. Kasson, of Iowa, addressed fully five thousand earnest, enthusiastic people for two hours. Aside from the unfavorable weather the demonstration has been in every way satisfactory to the Republicans. There has certainly never been a time since 1864 when the people of this section were so thoroughly stirred up on political matters, and Jefferson County is sure to show the result next Tuesday, of the thorough hard work done by the Republicans during the past two month.

REPUBLICAN PATRIOTISM IN OHIO.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ASHTABULA, Nov. 1.—Three thousand persons assembled in the park here to-day, and were addressed by Senator John Sherman and Judge L. S. Sherman. The Boys in Blue and Wide-Awakes, horse and foot, from the whole county, some four hundred in number, paraded this evening with six bands. We feel our political strength renewed, and our patriotism quickened.

An Important Statement by Prominent Business Men—Every Voter Should Study it Carefully.

To the People of the United States:

In 1865, Aug. 31, the national debt reached its maximum amount....	$2,756,431,591 43
Reduced June 30, 1876, to..........	2,099,439,344 99
A reduction during this period of eleven years since the war of.....	$656,992,246 44
For the past year, ending June 30, 1876..........	100,243,271 23
A reduction in the annual interest charge since 1866 of..........	$32,824,479 46
The annual expenditures of the Government in 1876, as compared with 1866, show a reduction of....	262,349,619 56
And in federal taxation more than..	300,000,000 00

Other great results of this financial policy have been that, despite an indebtedness of more than two thousand millions, and while diminishing taxation, the credit of the country has been raised to the unprecedented point that its four and a half per centum bonds, issued in redemption of the six per centums, have been selling rapidly, at home and abroad, above par in gold; and the Government has been enabled every year since 1866, not only to keep within its income, but to apply an average annual sum of $56,742,284 20 toward the payment of its indebtedness.

A careful consideration of these results of judicious management of the National Treasury during Republican administration of the Government, induces the undersigned to express their confident belief that a continuation of the same general policy which has so well sustained our commercial honor, and aided so powerfully in the preservation of the Union itself, would be best promoted by the election of General Rutherford B. Hayes and William A. Wheeler to the offices of President and Vice-President of the United States.

A CARD FROM MR. SMITH ELY, JR.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I notice in your columns to-day that you quote from the minutes of the Board of Supervisors of Dec. 27, 1869, some bills of Keyser, Miller, Ingersoll, Garvey, and others, aggregating $630,000, to which my name is affixed as having voted in the affirmative. I never voted for any such bill or bills, and thinking possibly that those who are strangers to me may desire something more than a simple denial, I affix hereto my affidavit. During the last four years of my service in that board I sat with Mr. Tweed without exchanging a word with him, and I have never spoken to him since. The minutes of the board were kept by the clerk on detached pieces of paper, which sometimes were not copied into a book until weeks or months after the meeting. My name was appended to the bills you quote either carelessly or by malicious design.

SMITH ELY, JR.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Smith Ely, Jr., of the City of New-York, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he did not vote for the bill or bills of Keyser, Garvey, Ingersoll, and others, as published in The New-York Times newspaper of this date, and deponent further says that he never during the said year, or during the year that preceded or followed it, voted for any bill of said contractors, but that he invariably voted against all such bills. And he further says that any record or minutes to the contrary are utterly and absolutely false, and without any foundation in truth.

SMITH ELY, JR.

CHAS. P. DALY,
Chief Justice of the New-York Common Pleas.

LAW REPORTS.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The following cases were heard:

No. 63.—Shaw vs. The United States.—Appeal from the Court of Claims.—This was an action to recover the value of the steamer Robert Campbell, impressed into the carrying service in 1863, and lost by fire when so employed. The original claim was for $70,000, but the award was for $57,000, less an insurance of $25,000. The balance of $32,000 was paid to the claimant. A subsequent claim to have the whole amount allowed was rejected by the Auditor. This action was brought to recover $38,000, the difference between the estimated value and the amount of the award, the claim being that the insurance was not for the benefit of the United States, and that it could not be deducted. The Court of Claims decided that the claimant could not recover the insurance, but that the companies might in his name. The Government pleaded the Statute of Limitations to the amended petition, and it is here insisted that it substituted a new action for the one with which the proceeding originated. The argument was concluded on Monday. Joseph Casey for appellant; Assistant Attorney General Smith for the Government.

Nos. 66 and 67.—Bank of Kentucky vs. Adams Express Company, and Planters' National Bank vs. Adams Express Company.—Error to the Circuit Court for the District of Kentucky.—The main question in these cases is whether the delivery of a bill of lading by the carrier and its acceptance by the shipper, without objection at the time of the delivery of the goods into the custody of the carrier, constitutes, in the absence of fraud or mistake, the contract between the parties. The Louisiana National Bank sent packages of money by the Southern Express Company to the plaintiff in error, but neglected to fill up certain blanks on the outside of the envelope, which would have notified the company that the matter was to be insured under its common law liability, and the money was lost while in the custody of the Adams Express Company, which undertook the transportation over its route. The question is whether, as the company was in the habit of charging more for express matter than for freight under the ordinary bill of lading, it is liable beyond the liability imposed by a bill of lading, in the absence of information that the packages contained express matter. The court held that the company was not liable as for express matter under the bill of lading as delivered. The case comes here, the plaintiff in error maintaining that, while the right of the carrier to contract for a reasonable limitation of his liability cannot be disputed, it is clear that his responsibility cannot be restricted or qualified unless the carrier expressly stipulates for the restriction; and that exemption cannot be made to depend upon implication or inference founded on such evidence as that urged in this case—the delivery without filling up the blanks referred to—but must be specific and certain, leaving no room for controversy on the subject. It is said that it is not only against the policy of the law, but a serious injury to commerce, to allow the carrier to say that the shipper of merchandise assents to the terms proposed in a notice, whether it be general to the public or special to a particular person, merely because he does not expressly dissent from them. John M. Harlan for plaintiffs in error; C. M. DaCosta and C. A. Seward for defendants.

No. 43.—Sherman vs. Buick.—Error to the Supreme Court of California.—This was an action of ejectment to recover a quarter section of land in township No. 5 south, of range No. 1 east, Mount Diablo meridian. The plaintiff in error relied upon a patent from the United States, issued in 1869, and the defendant relied upon a patent from the State of California, issued the same year. The Court excluded evidence offered by the plaintiff in error to show that at the time the State patent was issued the State had no title to the land in question, ruling that the patent could not be thus assailed collaterally in a court of law. It is here insisted that this was error, and such evidence can be admitted as well in law as in equity, and that it is only where merely the correctness of the method of action of the officers of the Government in issuing the patent is questioned that the party resisting a Government patent is driven to a court of equity. S. M. Wilson, P. Phillips, and G. A. Nourse for plaintiff in error; M. Blair for defendant.

On motion of W. H. Arnoux, J. Warren Coulston, of Philadelphia, Penn., was admitted to practice as an attorney and counselor of this court.

No. 48.—Horace B. Claflin, plaintiff in error, vs. Julius Houseman, Assignee, &c.—The argument of this cause was concluded by Mr. W. H. Arnoux, of counsel for plaintiff in error; submitted on printed briefs by Mr. B. F. Lee for the defendant in error.

No. 81.—James M. Barkley, plaintiff in error, vs. The Board of Levee Commissioners, Parishes of Madison and Carroll.—The argument of this cause was commenced by Mr. E. T. Merrick, of counsel for plaintiff in error, and continued by C. L. Walker for defendant in error. Adjourned until to-morrow.

A WARRANT FOR A REFEREE'S ARREST.

The suit of Buchman against McMullen and others was recently brought in the Supreme Court for the foreclosure of a mortgage of $3,000. Edward F. Hopke, of Hastings, was appointed by Judge Dykman as the Referee to sell the incumbered property. At the sale the defendant, McMullen, purchased the premises for $7,500, leaving a deficiency of $1,500. He paid the Referee $750—the usual ten per cent. of the purchase-money. The matter was to have been closed on Oct. 21; but McMullen having made arrangements for a loan, to cover up the $1,500 deficiency, desired to have it closed on Oct. 18; McMullen had also arranged to sell the property to a third party, subject to the new loan. Theodore Aub, the counsel for the plaintiff, applied to Hopke to settle the matter on Oct. 18, but Hopke refused to do it before the 21st. On the latter date Hopke did not make his appearance, but sent a messenger, who said that Hopke was sick. Hopke at the same time sent to Mr. Aub $550 of the $750 received by him. Mr. Aub, in an affidavit, alleges that he took this money, though he had no right to do so, because he feared his client would suffer loss in case he did not take it. A new time was then fixed for the Referee to settle the matter, but the latter again failed to put in an appearance. There was, however, $23 due for advertising, and Hopke sent to Mr. Aub to offer $102 for a receipt in full. This would leave Hopke $75 as his fees in the matter. Mr. Aub declined the offer, as Hopke had not signed the Referee's deed nor made a report showing the deficiency on the sale of the property. Mr. Aub then obtained from Judge Barrett, in Supreme Court, Chambers, an order directing Hopke to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt in not fulfilling his duties as Referee. This order was made returnable yesterday, and as Hopke did not appear, Judge Barrett issued an order for his arrest.

CHARLES R. BECKWITH CONVICTED.

The jury in the case of Charles R. Beckwith, lately cashier and book-keeper to Benjamin T. Babbit, the wealthy soap manufacturer, charged with forgery, were locked up in the jury-room of the Court of General Sessions on Tuesday evening, having failed to agree upon a verdict after having been eight hours in deliberation. At 11:30 A. M. yesterday, after having been kept together all night, they stood as they had on retiring—nine for conviction and three for acquittal. Nobody expected an agreement, but fifteen minutes afterward, strange to say, the jury sent word that they had agreed, and, on coming into court, rendered a verdict of guilty on the third and fourth counts of the indictment. Judge Fullerton asked that the jury be polled, which was done with the same result. Counsel then gave notice of a motion in arrest of judgment and the argument was set down for Monday next, the prisoner being meanwhile remanded to the Tombs. Beckwith heard the verdict with the most astonishing coolness; but his wife and mother completely broke down, and the former fainted away. The conviction of Beckwith is considered a brilliant legal victory for Assistant District Attorney Bell, as the defense having been prepared by Ex-Judge Fullerton, who was assisted by Mr. Frank J. Dupignac. Mr. Bell intends to try Beckwith on one of the twenty other indictments found against him in connection with his alleged embezzlement of $225,000 while in the employ of Mr. Babbitt.

SENTENCE OF A YOUTHFUL THIEF.

About a year ago a notorious young thief named John Nagle, aged sixteen, living at No. 12½ Washington street, known as "Jack Sheppard," was brought before Judge Sutherland, charged with picking a man's pocket of $7. The thief pleaded guilty, and having escaped from the House of Refuge, was sentenced by his Honor to one year in the Penitentiary, the lightest punishment in the power of the court to inflict. Some of the newspapers characterized this sentence as a piece of unnecessary cruelty on the part of Judge Sutherland, and he received a number of anonymous letters condemning his "tyranny." Yesterday this same Nagle, whose term in the Penitentiary has only just expired, was again brought before Judge Sutherland, in the Court of General Sessions, charged with snatching a watch and chain from Adolph Tippman, of No. 18 Greenwich street, on Oct. 22, and pleaded guilty. His Honor, addressing the young culprit, said, "Nagle, some time ago I sentenced you to one year in the Penitentiary on a plea of petit larceny from the person. Some of the newspapers took hold of it, and abused me shamefully for my 'cruelty.' I even received an anonymous letter calling me an 'old sinner,' and saying that I 'ought to have my throat cut from ear to ear.' The press did not consider that your crime was larceny from the person, and that I should have violated my oath of office had I not sent you to prison for the lowest period prescribed by law for the offense. You are a bad boy, and I now sentence you to two years in the State Prison at hard labor."

CONVICTED OF ILLEGAL REGISTRATION.

On Oct. 18, one of the days of registration, Neil McKenna, a laborer, having no home, presented himself at the registration place of the Twenty-sixth Election District of the Fourth Assembly District and attempted to register as a resident of No. 24 Jackson street. The inspector discovered that McKenna did not reside at the place in question, and had him arrested for violation of the Election law. On being called up by Assistant District Attorney Rollins in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions, McKenna admitted his guilt and attempted to justify his crime by stating that he was drunk at the time, and attempted to register from the address mentioned, where he resided two years ago. Judge Sutherland said there was no excuse for the crime committed, and sentenced him to one year in the State Prison.

COURT NOTES.

In Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, William Thomas, a negro, who stole four coats from the clothing store of Frederick Greenwood, No. 66 Bowery, on Oct. 23, was found guilty and sentenced to three years in the State Prison.

The will of Charles E. Carman, of New-Jersey, dated Dec. 33, 1874, was offered for probate yesterday in the Surrogate's office. The deceased left a large amount of personal property in this City, and a great deal of real estate in New-Jersey, all of which is left to members of his family.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, granted a writ of error, returnable at the January session of the Supreme Court, General Term, to review the proceedings in the case of Michael McGinn, recently convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to imprisonment for life.

James McKay, aged seventeen, of No. 166 Madison street, was arrested yesterday on the charge of picking pockets. The youth, with several confederates, jostled Mr. David T. Lincoln, of Massachusetts, in Nassau street, near John, and during the scuffle one of the party stole Mr. Lincoln's watch. The prisoner was held at the Tombs, and the Police are looking for his accomplices.

Argument was had before Judge Larremore, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on the motion to render permanent the injunction heretofore obtained against Sydney Rosenfeld restraining him from using the title Figaro as that of an illustrated weekly journal. Decision was reserved by the court. In the meantime, and for this week only, Mr. Rosenfeld's paper will be entitled the Hornet.

Contest has been begun in the Surrogate's Court relative to the will of the late Samuel Donn, formerly President of the American Meter Company of this City. The contest is brought by his wife, Elizabeth Donn, upon the grounds usual in such cases. The estate left is understood to be a very large one, and by the terms of the will, one-third of the rent of the real estate, and the household property in the hotel at Neversink is bequeathed to his wife, and the rest to members of his family. The will bears the date of February 1, 1871.

The trial of Capt. J. L. Grindle, of the ship St. Mark, indicted for alleged cruel and inhuman treatment, was continued yesterday in the United States Circuit Court, before Judge Benedict. Most of the day was occupied in the examination of Mary Blank, the nurse in Capt. Grindle's family, though the argument of both counsel was heard upon adjournment, Messrs. Fullerton and Knox appearing for the deceased, and Assistant United States Attorney B. B. Foster for the Government. Judge Benedict will charge the jury at 10 o'clock this morning.

Judge Barrett, in a decision yesterday in the case of the Rhode Island Horse Shoe Company against the Goodenough Horse Shoe Company, held that the transfer of a suit to the United States Courts is not completed by the filing with the County Clerk of a petition and bond such as is provided for by the United States Statutes. The law requires the bond to be filed in the Supreme Court, and Judge Barrett holds that the County Clerk's office is not the Court for such a purpose, since the inquiry into the sufficiency of the sureties to the bond is a duty imposed on the Court, which the Clerk cannot discharge.

The action of Bernard Sheridan against Stephen Jackson, to recover possession of about two hundred thousand dollars' worth of property at the junction of Grand and Lafayette avenues, Brooklyn, resulted in favor of Sheridan. Justice Gilbert yesterday issued a writ of assistance, which was put in the hands of Sheriff Hardy for execution. The location of the property is known as Jackson's Hollow, and is principally occupied by squatters. The Sheriff merely informed the residents of the change of titles, and warned them that they were hereafter to pay rent to Mr. Sheridan, and not to Mr. Jackson. The suit has been pending in the courts for the past twenty years.

Charles Cameron, who gave his residence as No. 687 Hudson street, was held in $3,000 bail yesterday by Justice Kasmire, on the charge of swindling a number of sewing-machine companies. He would call at the establishments, and, after examining a number of instruments, would select one and pay $5 in advance, the money to be refunded if the machine did not suit. The machines were sent to the address given by Cameron, and when the agent called next day Cameron and the machines had both disappeared. The suit was brought by the Singer Sewing-Machine Company, and J. E. Watson, R. T. Sperry, and J. C. Cowan testified that they had been duped in the same manner.

A motion for an additional allowance to defendants' counsel of $2,000 in the old suit of Aaron S. Bright against the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, was granted by Judge Lawrence in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday. The suit was begun in 1868, and then came before Judge Barnard, who appointed James M. Sweeny receiver of the property in controversy. The plaintiff, on the motion before Judge Lawrence, contended that the case had been removed to the United States Courts. Judge Lawrence held, however, that the plaintiff was too late in endeavoring to remove the cause from the Supreme Court after allowing a circuit of the court to pass by at which it might have been tried.

A BOGUS BARON SENTENCED.

On Sept. 18, a young German of apparent wealth and position put up at the Windsor Hotel, and registered as "Baron von Dieischroeder." Next day he gave the cashier a check for $500 on August Belmont & Co., bearing his own signature and rank, and obtained $25 on account. The check was duly presented to Belmont & Co., by whom it was honored, and the "Baron" received the money. Subsequently, however, it was ascertained that the check was bogus, whereupon the "Baron" was arrested and indicted for forgery. He was brought before Judge Gildersleeve, in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions, on Oct. 21, and pleaded guilty, but was remanded at the request of his counsel, in order that his history might be inquired into. It has since been discovered that the name of the prisoner is John Boddinghaus, aged 21, a native of Solingen, Prussia, and a member of a wealthy family. He has only been a short time in this country, and it was supposed by his friends that he had committed the offense charged in order to extricate him from his difficulties into which he had been drawn by youthful extravagance. Judge Gildersleeve took the circumstances of the case into consideration, and sentenced Boddinghaus to the lowest penalty for his offense—one year in the Penitentiary.

On the same day, Governor and other State officers will be chosen in twelve States, a Governor alone of State officers in one, and minor State officers in one. Members of the Forty-fifth Congress will also be elected in thirty-two States, which are entitled to 243 Representatives. Forty-two members—thirty Republicans and twelve Democrats, representing five States—have already been chosen. The five States are Colorado, Indiana, Maine, Ohio, and Vermont. New-Hampshire will not elect its three members until March next. In the following columns we give lists of the candidates for the various offices to be filled, with statistics of the previous votes of the several States. The following abbreviations are used: Proh.—Prohibition; Ind.—Independent; Grbk.—Greenback; Tam.—Tammany; A. T.—Anti-Tammany; s. t.—short term, (to fill a vacancy.)

THE PRESIDENCY.

For the Presidency there are three leading tickets in the field, composed as follows: Republican—For President, Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio; Vice President, William A. Wheeler, of New-York. Democratic—For President, Samuel J. Tilden, of New-York; Vice President, Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana. Greenback—For President, Peter Cooper, of New-York; Vice President, Samuel F. Cary, of Ohio. There is also a Prohibition ticket in the field, with Green Clay Smith, of Kentucky, for President, and Gideon T. Stewart, of Ohio, for Vice President; also, a Christian (anti-secret society) ticket, with James B. Walker, of Illinois, for President, and Donald Kirkpatrick, of New-York, for Vice President. In but few States have the two last Electoral tickets in the field, and they receive mention here only as matters of record. The following table shows the popular vote for President in all the States in 1872, compared with the result of the latest contested election in each State. The figures for Colorado, Georgia, and West Virginia are not complete, but are the nearest estimate we can make from the imperfect data attainable:

REBEL WAR CLAIMS.

LETTER FROM HON. EDWARD McPHERSON—SAFETY FOR THE PEOPLE TO BE FOUND ONLY IN THE ELECTION OF HAYES.

To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal:

Your favor of the 18th has reached me at this point. I have carefully read the remarks of Gov. Hendricks at the Democratic meeting in Indianapolis Oct. 17, and especially the portion relative to "Southern claims." They are, of course, misleading. The point between the two parties on this subject is not whether bona fide claims for supplies furnished, or even damages sustained, by men in the South who were loyal to the Union should be paid. The Republicans have paid many such, and been rather liberal than severe in applying to this class of claims the principles which have governed their settlement. But it is whether the claims of men in the South who were disloyal to the Union during the war shall be paid.

The alarm felt at the developments on this subject during the last session of Congress was at the various propositions made to repeal all the existing distinctions between the Union and the rebel classes in the South, and to open the Treasury equally to all having claims, no matter what their course during the rebellion.

This was shown not merely by the various bills proposed, but by the action of the Democratic majority of the Committee on War Claims, who repealed the Republican rule of that committee, requiring proof of loyalty from every claimant; but also by the report of the same committee in the Pickrell & Brooks case, of Virginia, (made by Mr. Cabell, of Virginia,) taking the ground that if the party came within the terms of either of President Johnson's proclamations that fact qualified him as a claimant. Under this doctrine all Southerners would be held to have been loyal citizens during the war, except the few persons specially excepted by him. It is true that very few claim bills were passed by the House. Gov. Hendricks forgets that the House did not sit last Winter for legislation, and that they did not pass one public law of any importance. The word went around, do as little as possible; postpone everything; avoid all record of purpose or principle, and especially stave off all appropriations till after the elections. There was little actually done. But there was much foreshadowed, and this it is which alarms.

The discussion of these claims has even alarmed Gov. Tilden, as I see by the morning's papers. He promises to resist these schemes, as Buchanan in 1856 promised to resist the same class in their raid against freedom in Kansas. And he will be as little able, if elected, to resist that united mass of determined, hungry, and aggressive men as was his predecessor to prevent the iniquities which led to the formation of the Lecompton Constitution. Men trained in the school of slavery and accustomed to command, and as accustomed to obedience from their Northern allies, will find some means—it cannot be doubted from their past history—to indemnify themselves at our cost. Gov. Tilden's letter admits that in proposing to demand pay for their claims, Southern Democrats are violating public pledges of the Democratic Party, made with their concurrence. But what care they for pledges? What have they ever cared when power could be had by breaking them? How much less care they now, when money for their purses will come with power for their people? There is on this question, as on all others pending between the parties, safety for the people only in the success of the Republican ticket. I am, very respectfully,

EDWARD McPHERSON.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 1—P. M.

On the Stock Exchange the day was a most disastrous one for the speculators on the bull side of the account, as prices after an early advance tumbled headlong, the late favorites, Lake Shore and Michigan Central, leading the downward turn. The immediate cause for the sharp decline was a report—this time apparently well authenticated—that the conference of railroad representatives had finally adjourned without arriving at any arrangement for the settlement of differences, and that, consequently, the railroad war was likely to be prolonged indefinitely. This intelligence, coupled with a report that lake freights had been reduced, caused a heavy selling movement, with the attendant result of a decline in prices ranging from ⅛ to 3¼ ℘ cent. At the period of the greatest depression the dealings were characterized by much excitement, and a feverish and uneasy feeling prevailed. Lake Shore, which was the most active stock, after advancing to 60⅛, fell off to 57¼, with a final rally to 57⅞. Michigan Central followed closely on the footsteps of Lake Shore, advancing to 49½, and subsequently declined to 46¼, closing at 46⅞. Western Union was weak, and after advancing to 72⅞ broke to 70¾, with closing sales at 71½@71⅝. New-York Central opened at 103⅛@103¼, the lowest price touched subsequently having been 101½. At the close a recovery of ½ ℘ cent ensued. Erie declined from 11¼ to 10⅞, North-west common from 37⅞ to 37¾, preferred from 60⅜ to 59⅛, Rock Island from 102 to 101½, and Pittsburg from 90½ to 90. Pacific Mail ranged between 24 and 24½, closing at 24¼. The St. Paul shares were firm in the early dealings, but later declined from 25⅛ to 24⅝ for the common and from 55⅝ to 54¾ for the preferred. Wabash advanced to 7⅞ and closed at 7½. Union Pacific sold at 62 and Delaware and Hudson Canal at 72½. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western closed at 74, after fluctuating frequently between 73½ and 74¼. New-Jersey Central was comparatively steady, selling at 36½@37, with final transactions at 36⅝. At the close of business prices in the general list showed a recovery from the lowest point of ¼@¾ ℘ cent. The sales for the day reached 174,710 shares, of which 63,200 were in Lake Shore, 40,700 in Western Union, and 27,000 in Michigan Central.

The money market was firmer to-day and call loans commanded higher rates. Business early in the day was at 3@4 ℘ cent., and in the afternoon transactions were made as high as 6 ℘ cent., the closing rate being 5. Discounts are unchanged. The national bank notes received at Washington for redemption to-day amounted to $670,000. The rates of domestic exchange at the interior cities on New-York to-day were: Savannah, buying, ⅜ off; selling, par to ¼; Charleston, scarce; buying, nominally 5-16; selling, ¼ to par; Cincinnati, dull; 100 discount; New Orleans, commercial, ⅜; bank, ¼; St. Louis, 150 to 200 discount, and Chicago, 25 discount.

The foreign advices were unimportant, the London Stock Exchange and most of the Continental Bourses, as usual on All-Saints' Day, having been closed. The sum of £66,000 sterling was withdrawn from the Bank of England. Bar silver at London was quoted at 53¼d. ℘ ounce. At Frankfort, United States new 5s were firm at 102⅜.

The sterling exchange market was firm, actual business being on the basis of $4 82@$4 82¼ for bankers' sixty-day bills, and at $4 84@$4 84¼ for demand. The nominal asking rates remain at $4 82½ and $4 84½, with the demand moderately active.

Speculation in the Gold Room was tame in the absence of the usual quotations from the foreign markets, which always exercise an important influence in shaping the course of affairs on this side. The price declined at the opening from 109⅞ to 109¾, and subsequently advanced to 110, the market closing firm at that figure. The public debt statement for October shows a decrease in the debt of $3,388,000. The Treasury disbursements for the past month, exclusive of the interest on the public debt, were $10,900,000. On gold loans to-day the rates ranged from flat to 3 ℘ cent. interest for carrying.

Government bonds were quiet and prices ruled steady throughout the day. New 5s, coupon, sold at 113@113⅛, and old 1865s, coupon, at 110⅛, ex interest. Sales of 1867s were made at 116@116⅛. Railroad bonds were fairly active, and prices in most cases well maintained. Union Pacific firsts sold at 105⅞@106⅛, and Central Pacific firsts at 110. New-York Central coupon firsts brought 120. Michigan Southern second sold at 102, Michigan Central 7s at 102½, Western Union Telegraph 7s, coupon, at 100¾, and New-Jersey Central convertible at 86¼, ex interest. New-Jersey Central firsts, new, declined to 109, and C., C. and I. C. firsts to 41. In State bonds the dealings were smaller than yesterday, and quotations were without essential change.

THE ANTI-TAMMANYITES.

EFFORTS TO FORM A COMBINATION ABANDONED.

THE SUBCOMMITTEES OF THE VARIOUS ORGANIZATIONS FINALLY ADJOURN—THE PARTY HEADED BY IRA SHAFER TO SUPPORT KELLY'S NOMINEES—ADDRESS OF THE INDEPENDENT CITIZENS' COMMITTEE TO MR. GREEN, AND HIS REPLY.

The Anti-Tammany, Independent Citizens,' and German-Americans' Independent Subcommittees had a final meeting, at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, at the Astor House, in reference to the possibility of placing an Anti-Tammany combination ticket in the field with any prospect of success. After a brief discussion, it was agreed that in view of the action of Anti-Tammany, in substantially indorsing the Tammany ticket, and of the Republicans, in nominating a straight ticket, it would not be prudent to form a combination ticket. As a last effort, the following ticket, which had been informally canvassed on Tuesday evening, was presented for consideration:

Mayor.—Andrew H. Green.
Surrogate.—Charles Craig.
Sheriff.—Dr. Feodore Mierson.
County Clerk.—Joseph Shannon.
Superior Court.—Henry E. Knox.
Marine Court.—Joseph Koch.
Coroners.—Dr. Charles E. Simmons, Edward Hogan, and Theodore F. Glaubenskiee.
Aldermen at Large.—Gershon Cohen, Herman Uhl, J. Graham Hyatt, and James Cunningham.

It was immediately apparent, however, that there was a general doubt of the expediency of forming a coalition ticket, and at 11:40 o'clock, on motion of Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer, the meeting of the joint subcommittees was adjourned sine die, leaving each organization represented to act as it should deem best in making nominations or indorsing or supporting candidates. The Anti-Tammany Subcommittee went to report to its main Committee, at Mr. Purser's office, in Nassau street, and the Independent Citizens' and German-Americans' Independent Subcommittees remained a short time longer at the Astor House. Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer, as Chairman of the Independent Citizens' Conference Committee, called his committee together, and Mr. Lewis M. Dorscher acted as Secretary of the meeting, the object of which was to take action in view of what had been done by the subcommittees. It was resolved that the Chairman and Secretary of the Committee should be requested to prepare a communication to Controller Green in reference to the difficulties which had prevented a coalition and the impolicy of running a ticket on account of these obstacles, and the fact that the Republicans had nominated a straight ticket. The meeting then adjourned, subject to the call of the Chair.

The German-Americans' Independent subcommittee reported to its main committee, which resolved to meet at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at No. 200 Third avenue, and Mr. Herman Uhl, Chairman of the County Convention of the organization, issued a call for the convention to meet this evening and take such action as may be deemed best, in view of the complications which have arisen. The Anti-Tammany subcommittee reported to its main committee at noon, Hon. Ira Shafer presiding at the meeting. Dr. Feodore Mierson, Adolph Sanger, Gershon Cohen, and most of the candidates presented on the ticket which had been referred to the Conference Committee, by the Anti-Tammany County Convention on Monday evening, withdrew their names, in order to leave the committee entirely free to act in reference to nominations. A resolution offered by Mr. John D. Coughlin, to the effect that, as Tammany Hall had nominated an acceptable candidate for Mayor, and as the balance of its County ticket was preferable to that of the Republicans, the Anti-Tammany County ticket should be withdrawn and the Tammany County ticket be supported by the Anti-Tammany organization, was unanimously adopted. A committee, composed of Hon. Emanuel B. Hart, Ira Shafer, George H. Purser, William P. Mitchell, and Thomas Mackellar, was appointed to wait upon Mr. Ely, and announce to him the result of the action of the Conference Committee. After a resolution had been adopted requesting the committee appointed to wait on Mr. Ely to draft an address to the Anti-Tammany Democracy, the Conference Committee adjourned sine die.

At five o'clock yesterday afternoon, the German-American Conference Committee met at Schmenger's Hall, No. 200 Third avenue, Coroner Ellinger presiding, and prepared their report to submit to their County Convention at Beethoven Hall this evening. Considerable dissatisfaction was expressed in relation to some of the candidates on the Kelly ticket, and especially in relation to Kelly's action in reference to not giving the Germans a fair representation on the County ticket, but it was agreed to report in favor of giving support to most of the nominees on Kelly's ticket. The committee appointed by the Anti-Tammany Conference Committee waited on Mr. Ely, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the corner of Union square and Fifteenth street, and presented him the following communication, which is intended as an address to the Anti-Tammany Democracy:

IRVING HALL, Nov. 1, 1876.

To the New-York County Democracy:

Last Fall, in the interest of good Municipal Government, we combined with the Republicans, the Germans, and all parties opposed to Tammany Hall, and achieved a victory over its candidates. This Fall, remembering the past, we sought to bring about the same result, through the same instrumentalities, but found it impossible without endangering the success of our National and State tickets. Under these circumstances we have determined to run no County ticket. We have determined to support Mr. Smith Ely, Jr., for Mayor, and rather than witness the spectacle of this Democratic City being ruled by Republicans, we have concluded not to vote for Republicans, but to support the remainder of the ticket headed by Mr. Ely, and recommend its adoption by you. Let us not be misunderstood. We do not disband our organization, but in the present exigency deem it wise to pursue the course suggested, as one best calculated to insure the election of the Democratic National and State tickets, the overthrow of the entire Republican County and Congressional tickets, and prevent the success of the Republican machine leaders in their intrigue to aid the election of their National and State tickets.

IRA SHAFER, Chairman.
EMANUEL B. HART,
THOMAS MACKELLAR,
GEORGE H. PURSER,
WILLIAM P. MITCHELL,
Committee.

MR. ELY'S REPLY.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 1.

To the Nominating Committee of the New-York County Democracy:

GENTLEMEN: I have received your communication of address of this date, tendering to me the nomination for the important and responsible position of Mayor of this City. I accept your nomination with very great pleasure and gratitude, the gratification being much increased by the magnanimous and patriotic suggestions with which you have accompanied its presentation. I believe that I fully appreciate the generous sacrifice you have made in the interest of the great party in whose ranks we are all fraternal co-workers; and I assure you that, if elected, I will endeavor to act so justly and impartially that you will never regret your action in this matter. Please accept the assurances of my sincere regard, and believe me to be,

Respectfully yours, SMITH ELY, JR.

Yesterday afternoon Messrs. Ottendorfer and Dorscher, the committee of the Independent Citizens' Party, called upon Mr. Green at the Controller's office and presented him the following communication, to which he last evening, at the head-quarters of the Independent Citizens' Party on Fifth avenue, made the reply which follows the communication:

ADDRESS OF THE INDEPENDENT CITIZENS COMMITTEE TO MR. GREEN.

Hon. Andrew H. Green:

SIR: At a mass-meeting of the citizens of New-York City, held at Cooper Institute Oct. 7, 1876, at which you were nominated for Mayor, the following resolution, among others, was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That a committee of twenty-five citizens be appointed by the President of this meeting, with power to fill all vacancies in their number, whose duty it shall be to cause this nomination to be tendered to Mr. Green, and, upon his acceptance thereof, to take, in their discretion, prompt and effective measures in the spirit of this meeting to promote his election.

Pursuant to that resolution, the committee of twenty-five was appointed, and after organizing, on the 12th day of October, 1876, formally tendered to you the nomination for the Mayoralty of the City. The full report of the proceedings of that day were published in the daily press of this City, and we will allude only to the portion of your reply in which you stated in substance "that you were not a candidate for the office of Mayor nor for any other office, but that if any considerable number of our citizens should desire to secure, in the office of Mayor, such experience in the management of our City affairs as you had, you would not feel at liberty to decline their call, and that it would be quite agreeable to you to see some competent person other than yourself elected that office."

The committee of twenty-five thereupon, in the discharge of what it deemed its plain duty, appointed the proper committees and proceeded to the work of endeavoring to unite the different organizations in the City that were, or professed to be, in sympathy with the purpose of securing an honest, capable, and independent City Government. Conferences were had with the German-American independent associations, the Anti-Tammany organization, and the Citizens' Committee appointed at the German Savings Bank, and all agreed with our committee in the purpose we desired to effect. Our committee, conjointly with the above-named organizations, communicated officially with the Republican County Convention. This communication was referred to their Nominating Committee, and on the 27th of October last received a reply stating that "if upon further deliberation they concluded that it is desirable to confer with you, you will be advised thereof at an early day."

This communication of the Republican Nominating Committee could not be construed otherwise than as a declination to co-operate with us; its meaning was so interpreted in the conference, and the proposition to give the representatives of the Republican Party further time to reconsider their action, which was a snare, or their professions of a desire to exert their influence for the protection of the interests of our City, found at first very little favor with a majority of the members of the conference. But in view of the fact that a very large number of influential members of the Republican Party, and among them the most respectable, sympathized with our movement, and deplored the indications that the men who controlled their organization seemed inclined to sacrifice our City for their party purposes; that the most influential Republican paper stated only a few days ago that the nomination of a straight Republican ticket for Municipal offices could mean nothing else but an indirect support of the Tammany candidates for the several offices, and would be the most unfortunate mistake the Republican Party could commit; that to raise such a grave accusation against the Republican Party as it would expose itself to by the adoption of such a course requires something more than suspicions and rumors, however well founded they may seem to be—in view of all this the conference resolved to hope, against all reasonable expectations, that the Republican organization would not stultify itself by making straight nominations, but that their convention would insist on a respectful consideration of our invitation.

The conference was well aware that by the procrastination caused thereby a great deal of valuable time, indispensable for an effective campaign, was lost; that our whole movement was in danger of becoming demoralized, as in fact a branch of our conference, the representatives of Anti-Tammany, lost partially the control of their organization, which to some extent became the prey of an ambitious and disappointed member; but we thought it wiser to await the final and official decision of the Republican party in reference to our Municipal ticket, so that if thereby our endeavors to secure the election of honest, capable, and independent candidates for the Municipal offices, to be filled at the coming election, should be frustrated, our citizens will at least know where the responsibility rests and who is to be blamed for it.

The Republican County Convention met last evening, and realized the hopes of the enemies and the fears of the friends of reform in our Municipal affairs, by nominating a straight Republican ticket.

By this, and by the disintegration of our movement, caused by the unwillingness of the Republican nominating Committee to consult with us, all possibility of uniting on a joint ticket in opposition to the Tammany Hall candidates is gone, and the conference thereupon resolved "that in consequence of the events of the last two days, no further efforts be made to nominate a joint ticket."

It seems our citizens have not learned enough by the experience of the past to compel their political organizations not to consider our City the foot-ball of their political schemes, and as long as our political parties see that the confidence of the people in them is not impaired by the sacrifice of the interests of our City to their ambition, they will no doubt continue the nefarious course they have adopted.

The greatest efforts of independent citizens will be of no avail, especially as long as our Municipal elections are held simultaneously with our State and national elections, and in years like the present, when the wave of political excitement submerges every other consideration. It would be unpardonable to ask you, who have spared no time, labor, and annoyance to protect our people against their worst enemies, to lead a forlorn hope, and therefore the Independent Citizens' Committee of twenty-five,

Resolved, That the Chairman and Secretary prepare an address requesting Mr. Green to allow his name to be withdrawn from the canvass, and giving the full reasons therefor.

For these reasons, and in compliance with that resolution, we request you to allow us to withdraw your name as candidate for the Mayoralty. Respectfully yours, OSWALD OTTENDORFER, Chairman.
LOUIS M. DOSCHER, Secretary.

CONTROLLER GREEN'S REPLY.

Hon. Oswald Ottendorfer, Chairman; Louis M. Doscher, Secretary:

GENTLEMEN: I have received your communication of this date, wherein you correctly state the terms of my candidacy for the Mayoralty. I am much obliged by your complimentary allusion to my modest public career, and being very well assured that your Committee have arrived at the conclusion to which you give expression, after a full consideration of the situation, I accede to their request to allow the withdrawal of my name as a candidate for the Mayoralty with quite as much alacrity as I gave consent to use it. Whatever regret I may feel on public grounds at the interruption of a movement which promised to unite good men, without distinction of party, in the effort to rescue the conduct of our Municipal affairs from the hands of venal politicians, is qualified by the confident assurance that this movement will, by the conspicuous circumstances surrounding its temporary check, gather fresh impulse and energy.

I find special reason for congratulation in the fact that this movement has not in the slightest degree impaired that entire independence of partisan affiliations which I have endeavored to maintain during the whole course of my connection with the public business of the City. No more flattering recognition of my success in vindicating the independence which Municipal administration ought to sustain to party politics could have been afforded than in the nomination for the office of Mayor tendered me by a committee comprising so many men of high standing in the community, who, honestly differing on questions of State and national politics, were thoroughly agreed as to the vital necessity of selecting Municipal officers solely on grounds of capacity, experience, and honesty.

The character of that committee, the character of the public assemblage whose representative it was, and the demands of those principles of Municipal reform to which I have devoted so many of the best years of my life, left me no alternative but to accede to the request for the use of my name as a candidate.

The obstacles in the way of making the nomination effective have been neither of your making nor mine. Your committee have confined themselves to honorable expedients to insure the success of what I think a majority of this community agree with them in judging to be a worthy end. Their efforts entitle them to the thanks of every honest citizen. The cause of non-partisan reform in local government has met with many rebuffs and reverses. Whether it be given to you and to me to participate in the triumph of the principle to which New-York owes all the progress it has made in Municipal administration during the last few years, this triumph will as certainly come as the triumph of right over wrong, of enlightenment and honesty over ignorance, prejudice, and rascality. Yours very respectfully,

ANDREW H. GREEN.

HOME WORK.

A vote taken yesterday in the office of a prominent insurance company gave the following result: Hayes, 40; Tilden, 20.

A meeting of colored Republicans of the east side was held at No. 96 Third avenue last night, and eloquent speeches were made by Mr. G. W. Dease and Hon. Pierre Barguet, of South Carolina.

The German Republicans of the Second Assembly District held a ratification meeting at No. 466 Pearl street last evening. Speeches were made by Messrs. Theodore Johnson, Ellmann Cantor, and others.

A vote on the Gubernatorial candidates was taken yesterday morning on a train of the New-York Central and Hudson River Railroad, between Yonkers and Sing Sing, with the following result: Morgan, 109; Robinson, 72.

The Independent Republican County Convention, at an adjourned meeting last night, adopted resolutions indorsing the nominees of the regular Republican County Convention, and pledging themselves to support the regular candidates.

The German Republican Hayes and Wheeler Club of the Seventeenth Assembly District ratified the Congressional, Assembly, and County nominations last evening. The Germans of this district will give a good account of their stewardship next Tuesday.

A grand Italian Republican rally was held last night at Masonic Hall. Mr. A. D'Anglo opened the meeting with a short and eloquent address, and speeches were made by Y. Vertin, C. Orsini, E. J. Jenny, G. W. McKee, John Nessi, A. Grissi, and others.

The Seventeenth Ward Hayes and Wheeler, Morgan and Rogers Campaign Club held a meeting last evening at No. 385 Bowery, Julius Harburger in the chair. Resolutions were read and adopted indorsing the nominations made by the Republican County Convention.

Joseph Pulitzer addressed a German Democratic meeting in Hoboken last night, and by his aspersions against Carl Schurz aroused the indignation of a large portion of his audience. The speech had the effect of driving many Democrats and Independents into the Republican ranks.

The clerks employed by Mr. Davenport were busily engaged all day yesterday in making transcripts of the naturalization records of the Superior Court for the present year. Mr. Davenport also furnished Mr. Jarvis, the Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, with the proper blank books in which the entries are to be made, and Mr. Jarvis detailed two of his clerks to make the necessary transcripts.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the Young Men's Republican Benevolent Association of the Eleventh and Fifteenth Assembly Districts was held at No. 390 Eighth avenue, last evening, the President, Mr. Ralph Scherick, in the chair. Resolutions were adopted, endorsing the City and County ticket and the nomination of Charles A. Peabody for member of Assembly. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Edward Pertrell and Mr. Charles Quigley.

James R. Angel is the Republican nominee for Assembly for the First District of Westchester. Mr. Angel is a well-known lawyer, a man of the highest integrity and first-rate ability, has been doing splendid service on the stump, and is President of the Twenty-third Ward Republican Association. His opponents are "Tony" Hartman and Ambrose H. Purdy. Mr. Angel's character, training, and popularity, should secure his election beyond peradventure.

To-morrow evening a grand Republican rally will take place at Yonkers. There will be a torchlight parade of the Boys in Blue of the city, and delegations from similar organizations in adjoining towns will also take part in the procession. A meeting will be held in Washburn Hall, which will be addressed by Hon. William Allen Butler, Hon. James R. Angel, and Gen. James W. Husted. Active preparations are in progress, and it is expected that the demonstration will be one of the largest which has taken place in Westchester County since the opening of the campaign.

REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

The Fourth District Republican Assembly Convention met last evening and nominated Augustus Schaffel for member from that District. Mr. Schaffel has voted the Republican ticket since 1856, and is esteemed for his past services rendered to the party. He has been a resident of the district for sixteen years.

The Republican Convention of the City of Elizabeth, N. J., made the following nominations last evening: Mayor, Robert W. Townley; Freeholders, John S. Wolf, Dr. J. S. Crane, S. B. Ryder, and F. T. Winans.

The Third District Republican Assembly Convention nominated John C. Brogan for member of Assembly last evening.

Mr. Samuel Eagel was nominated for member of Assembly by the Republican Convention of the Eighth District, last evening.

The Republicans of the Seventh New-Jersey Assembly District, Hudson County, have nominated Abram Barnett for member of Assembly.

The Republican Aldermanic Convention of the Fourth Senatorial District, met at No. 205 Grand street, last evening, and nominated Morris Friedsam. Mr. Friedsam is a school trustee of the Fourth Ward, and a real estate broker by occupation.

Ex-Judge Henry E. Howland was renominated Alderman by the Seventh Aldermanic District Republican Convention last evening.

The Republican Assembly Convention of the Eighteenth District met last evening, and nominated Christopher Pullman for member of Assembly.

Luther T. Hand has been renominated for Assembly by the Republicans of the First District of Elizabeth, N. J.

BROOKLYN CAMPAIGN NOTES.

The final mass-meeting of the colored citizens' Hayes and Wheeler Club, of Brooklyn, E. D., will be held this evening, at their head-quarters, on Fourth street.

Assemblyman Lyons, the Ring candidate in the Seventh Assembly District, against W. H. King, the Republican nominee, was a willing tool of the Brooklyn corruptionists in Albany last year. Lyons should be buried out of sight on election day.

The candidacy of Ripley Ropes for the office of Controller, is adding new strength each day to the national and State tickets. His name is a tower of strength with the tax-payers of Brooklyn. Beyond casual mention at ward meetings, poor Mr. Burrell is never heard of.

Mr. James Ridgeway, the Republican and Independent Democratic nominee for Justice in the Second District, is one of the most popular young lawyers in the city. Mr. Ridgeway's opponent on the Ring ticket is Wilson G. Bloome. On the night of his nomination Bloome was too full for utterance.

Ordinarily the Fifteenth Ward goes Republican, but an objectionable candidate would give it to the Democrats. Fortunately, Mr. John Davies, the present Republican nominee for Alderman, is not only a popular man in his party but is well known all over the ward, and respected by all its citizens. Mr. Davies will be elected by a good majority.

In the First Ward the Democrats have nominated Mr. Anderson to run against Alderman Burnett, who has been renominated by the Republicans. Anderson has been beaten several times when he ran for office, but he is an energetic man, and the Republicans of the ward should work hard to prevent even the slight possibility there is of his being elected.

The "Boss' man Barre" has got out thousands of Republican tickets with his name for Register on them. No Republican in Brooklyn worthy of the name will vote to increase McLaughlin's private income and power over the people by supporting his man Barre. The gallant Corp. Tanner, who lost both his legs fighting for the Union, will be the next Register of Brooklyn, despite the Boss and his man Barre, with all their Ring devices.

In a speech made last Fall "Boss" McLaughlin boasted that he had hired 300 rowdies at $2 each to break up a Republican meeting. The "Boss'" followers are pursuing the same course this year. A gang of rowdies broke up a Republican meeting which was being addressed by Mr. James McDermott in the Ninth Ward on Tuesday evening. The same evening a gang of rowdies attacked a torchlight procession of colored men with stones and brickbats.

The Ring nominee for County Clerk is circulating a printed document with signatures, designed to injure his opponent politically. It sets forth that when Mr. Berri was a member of Assembly he fought and defeated a bill permitting the sale of liquor on Sunday. Mr. Berri advocates temperance in all things, but it so happens that during his two terms in the Assembly no such bill as the one referred to was introduced. The circulation of the anonymous attack on the Republican and Independent Democratic nominee for County Clerk is a fair specimen of the underhand, infamous and cowardly methods of the Ring.

The Democratic Legislature of 1875 passed a bill, which Gov. Tilden signed, at the solicitation of the Brooklyn Ring, authorizing the Board of Aldermen to appropriate $500,000 for the completion of the Hempstead Reservoir—a work for which, although it is yet incomplete, Kingsley & Keeney, the Ring contractors, have made the people pay nearly a million and a half of dollars. Republicans, and particularly the Republicans of the Thirteenth and Twenty-fifth Wards, should remember that if the Ring Democrats secure a sufficient majority in the Board of Aldermen, that half million of dollars, which the Republican Board refused to appropriate, will surely find its way into the pockets of the public plunderers.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE GRAND PARADE.

The committee of bankers and business men appointed Tuesday evening to co-operate with the officers of the Boys in Blue in making arrangements for the torchlight parade of to-morrow night, met at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last evening. A subcommittee of six, consisting of Gen. Graham, Hon. B. F. Mainerre, J. T. Hale, H. S. Billings, H. B. Wells, and Capt. Shumway, was selected to wait upon Col. Emmons Clark, of the Seventh Regiment, to request him to act as Marshal of the procession. Col. Clark will be waited upon this morning, and if he consents to act as Marshal he will probably issue his orders for the parade this evening. In case he declines to act, the committee has power to extend an invitation to some other gentleman to act in his stead. The parade will in all probability be a grand success. The Boys in Blue will attend in full force from this City, Brooklyn, and Jersey City. Invitations have been extended the Boys in Blue in other places, and without doubt the invitations will be quite generally accepted. The bankers and business men will turn out at least a thousand strong, and probably more. Their numbers will depend largely upon the personal efforts of those who have already interested themselves in the matter, in soliciting the presence of their acquaintances. It is earnestly hoped by the committee that every man who desires the success of the Republican ticket next Tuesday will waive any objections he may entertain against joining in a public demonstration. To those who have any hesitancy on account of their dislike of carrying torches, the committee authorize it to be stated that only such persons as desire to carry torches need do so. Calcium lights will be provided for that portion of the procession that may not be lighted by torches. The remaining details of the arrangements will be made to-morrow evening.

REPUBLICAN RALLY IN JERSEY CITY.

The Republicans of Jersey City held their last great rally of the campaign in the Catholic Institute last night. The hall was packed to its utmost capacity, while the platform was crowded with many of the leading citizens of Jersey City. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed. John L. ?R. Jenne presided, and at his side, conspicuous on the platform, sat Mayor Seidler. Hon. William P. Frye, of Maine, was the principal speaker. He was received by the audience with a warmth of welcome seldom extended to political orators. He went over the currency question, showing how the inflation demanded by the Democracy would practically amount to repudiation. When the public exigency, during the existence of the rebellion demanded the issue of $150,000,000 of greenbacks the Democracy set up a howl that the issue was unconstitutional. To-day they are crying, with questionable consistency, for more greenbacks. He also made reference to the fact that immediately upon gaining power in the House, the rebel element from the South gained control of the party machinery. Seventy Southern Generals demanded Kerr for the Speaker. One hundred and ten Northern Democrats demanded Randall. The 110 deferred to the 70 and Kerr was chosen. He told some funny experiences connected with the investigations in the House into the Republican officials. Of these investigations he said eighty-four had been originated and but five had been heard of. The rest of course being failures. He held the attention of his audience for two hours, and elicited frequent bursts of laughter and applause.

GOING OVER TO THE REPUBLICANS.

The Tyrrell Association, a Democratic club composed of about one hundred men, met last evening at the Seventh Ward Republican Head-quarters, No. 184 East Broadway, and indorsed the Republican tickets, both national and State. Mr. McGauran presided, and introduced Mr. Tyrrell, who, in a stirring speech, stated why the club had gone over to the Republicans. Mr. George Law also made an effective speech, which was enthusiastically received. The meeting adjourned with cheers for the Republican nominees.

A MASS-MEETING IN WALL STREET.

Preparations are being made for a grand Republican mass-meeting to be held in Wall street, on Saturday next, at 1 o'clock P. M., under the auspices of the Republican Reform Club. Hon. Lot M. Morrill, Secretary of the Treasury, has announced his intention of attending and delivering an address on the issues of the campaign.

AN ATTORNEY'S LIEN FOR COSTS.

A decision was rendered by Chief Justice Curtis, in Superior Court, Special Term, yesterday, in the case of Richard D. Crotty against Duncan E. Mackenzie. It appears that the plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant for about $260, of which $160 was due as costs and counsel fees. The plaintiff, after recovering judgment, and without consulting his attorney, settled with the defendant. The attorney, hearing of this, issued execution on the judgment. He did this, as he claims, in order to secure the payment of the fees and costs to him. The defendant, not relishing this proceeding on the part of his opponent's lawyer, made a motion to set aside the execution. Chief Justice Curtis grants the motion, and holds, in his opinion, that an attorney has no lien on a judgment for costs as against the opposite side unless he has given the latter notice of his lien.

Obtaining assistance, the policeman entered the store and found that the water was flowing from a leak in the Croton pipe. Before the flow could be stopped, damage to the amount of $200 was done.

Louis Wolfert, alias "French Louis," a noted character, was seen by Detective Elder, of the Central Office, in Wall street yesterday, and was arrested. On searching him, two samples of fine black silk were found concealed in his hat. It is supposed that the pieces of silk are samples of stolen property. The prisoner was taken before Justice Kasmire at the Washington Place Police Court, and remanded to give the officer an opportunity to make inquiries in relation to his character.

Capt. Ashbury, of the brig Nellie Ware, which arrived at this port yesterday, reports that on Oct. 22, in latitude 28° 42', longitude 77° 33', he saw a dismasted vessel, which proved to be the schooner Kate P. Lunt, Capt. Lopey, of Tremont, from Brunswick, Ga., for St. Iago, with a cargo of pine wood. She had lost her deck load and was water-logged. One of the Captain's children was drowned in the cabin, and another was washed overboard. The survivors were brought on the Nellie Ware to New-York.

The Supply Committee of the Board of Supervisors has resolved to pay the bill of Mr. Mumford, the architect of the Hospital for Incurables, at Flatbush, amounting to $794 5?.

Casper Vangaswinkle was yesterday sentenced to four years in the Penitentiary, by Judge Moore, in the Court of Sessions, for an assault, with intent to kill, upon his landlord.

Patrick Teenan, who was convicted, in the Court of Sessions, of manslaughter in the fourth degree, for having caused the death of his wife by pulling her from her bed and throwing her upon the floor, was yesterday sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the Penitentiary.

The first rope for the temporary foot-bridge of the East River bridge was received yesterday morning at the Brooklyn Tower dock. This rope is two and five-eighths inches in diameter and weighs 46,000 pounds. The work of stretching this rope between the towers will probably be begun to-day.

James Wells, aged thirty-five years, of No. 20 Stanton street, New-York, and Peter Martin, of No. 271 Stanton street, were arrested at 2 o'clock yesterday morning by Sergeant Brennan and Officer Quinn, of the Fifth Precinct, while attempting to break into the dry-goods store of Charles Seward, No. 236 Broadway, E. D. The officers had been watching the men for some time, until they finally heard the sound of breaking glass, and saw the burglars walk to the corner to see if they were being watched, whereupon the officers pursued and arrested them.

NEW-JERSEY.

Rev. John S. Glendenning, having been deposed from the ministry by the Illinois Presbytery, has commenced the study of law in Jersey City.

Burglars attempted to rob the house of Benjamin G. Clarke on Grand street, Jersey City, Tuesday night. The burglar-alarm aroused Mrs. Clarke, whose call for an officer frightened the men away.

Gen. George B. McClellan is defending a suit in the Hudson County Circuit Court brought by Richard English. The plaintiff, who is a builder, erected a home for the General in South Orange, and the dispute is about an additional claim for services.

The real and personal property of Paul Heilbrant, the absconding Union Hill broker, was seized by Sheriff Laverty on Tuesday, at the suit of Henry Deigan, of Guttenberg, who is one of the heaviest creditors. Henry Eckert, an employe of the North Hudson County Railway stables, loses $1,100, the savings of many years of hard labor.

At the meeting of the Jersey City Police Board last evening, Commissioner Brigham, President of the board, notified the members that he had placed his resignation in the hands of Gov. Bedle, and made his farewell address. Mr. Brigham resigns to escape the Republican nomination for the Assembly in the Fifth District. It is understood that N. R. Fowler, ex-Chief of Police, will be appointed in his place.

The Synod of New Jersey has just expressed the judgment that the relations of Rev. Alexander McKelvey with the Westfield Church ought to cease entirely. Last night the friends of the late Pastor met in the church and passed resolutions, and expressed themselves freely, in a friendly way, concerning Mr. McKelvey, but very much the reverse concerning the Synod and General Assembly. Mr. McKelvey has preached elsewhere as a candidate, but still remains in Westfield. The troubles in the church have existed several years.

THE IMPRISONMENT OF SENOR DE MIER.

With regard to the imprisonment of Mr. Juan C. De Mier in Ludlow Street Jail, Las Novidades, the Spanish newspaper, in its issue yesterday, published the following:

"Mr. Mier was for some years engaged in business transactions with Obregon & Co., of Bogota, New-Grenada, and a current account existed between them. Some months ago Obregon & Co. ordered Mier to buy silver and send it to Bogota; but, as the order was not plainly given, Mr. Mier replied asking if it should be in bars or coin. Mr. Mier received no answer for a long time. Meanwhile Obregon & Co., seeing that a revolution was about taking place in the United States of Colombia, drew $12,000 on Mr. Mier, being the balance in their favor, per account current remaining in his hands. The drafts were presented for acceptance, but meanwhile Mier had become bankrupt, and Obregon & Co. became creditors of Mier's estate. Their claim was put into the hands of Señor Miguel Camacho Roldan. This gentleman put the matter in the hands of his lawyers, who caused Mier's incarceration. When Mr. Camacho Roldan heard that Mier had been put in jail he tried to cause the suit to be withdrawn, but the lawyers told him that he could not now interfere in the matter. Mier's counsel, Messrs. Coudert, state that exorbitant bail is demanded of Mier."

ADVENTURES OF NEWSPAPER "COPY."

About a month ago a package having the appearance of an ordinary folded newspaper arrived at this office from London, England, bearing a half-penny stamp, and the address, "Mr. Finch, Compositors' Department, Af. Times, M. S." As no one answering to that name applied for mail matter, the package remained on the foreman's desk until yesterday, when it was opened for the purpose of obtaining a clue to its origin. It was found to be the entire "copy" of an edition of the African Times, published at No. 121 Fleet street, London, and had evidently been sent from the editorial department of that journal to the composing-room, in some other street, through the mail. A close examination of the wrapper showed that the mark "M. S." had been mistaken for "U. S.," and hence the package was sent on board a New-York steamer, and in due time arrived at this office. The matter intended for "making up" the African Times, is a curiosity to those used to witnessing the enormous quantity of manuscript used in preparing the daily editions of the Metropolitan newspapers. The "market reports" covers a half sheet of ordinary note paper. The Standard receives a furious onslaught, in twenty lines, for publishing news "eight month's old" announcing the signing of peace articles between the Liberian Government and the Cape Palmas District. Then comes about two columns of "exchange" matter clipped from the London daily journals, and finally a sound editorial on "the old abomination, the desolating curse—slavery—in the British possessions on the western coast of Africa." Two "letters to the editor," complete the "copy" intended for publication in one edition of the African Times, whose readers have doubtless been deprived of their weekly literature, while the scene between the editorial department and the foreman of the composing-room upon the non-appearance of "copy" can readily be conjectured.

NOTICE TO INSPECTORS OF ELECTION.

Mr. D. B. Hasbrouck, Chief of the Bureau of Elections, requests that all Inspectors of Election or Poll Clerks, who may be taken sick, or from any other cause be prevented from performing their duties on election day, give immediate notice of such sickness or inability to perform duty, at the nearest Station-house, so that their places may be filled at once, and no delay occur on election day.

A PLAIN-SPOKEN SOUTHERN TILDENITE.

The Tuscumbia (Ala.) Times says: "It is a matter of surprise to see Southern politicians and Democrats of the North asserting that if Tilden and Hendricks are elected, the just claims due the Southern people will not be paid. We are disgusted with such moral cowardice as will lead those who should be friends of the South to thus show the white feather before the 'bloody shirt' banner of those who would rob the people of the South of their just and legal claims. We have always believed, insisted, that claims for private property taken from our people during the war and used by the Federal Army, or sold and the proceeds carried into the United States Treasury, should be paid; and we are satisfied that when prejudice and bitterness cease to control our rulers and legislators, every one of these claims will be paid. While a member of Congress, we voted to allow the claims of loyal citizens of the South for every cent of the value of property taken from them by the Federal army. We also voted to pay for school-houses, churches, and buildings belonging to charitable associations which were wantonly destroyed by the Federal Army. In thus voting we thought we were advocating what was just, fair, and in strict accord with established principle, believing that private property can not, in any case, be taken and used by the public or by the Government without being paid for; and we shall continue to insist that not only should the claims of loyal citizens against the Government for private property taken or destroyed during the war by the Federal Army be paid, but that in every case where private property was taken and used by or for the benefit of the Government, it should be paid for. It is high time that our people should insist upon simple justice being done them, at least by those they send to Congress to attend to their interests, and that no backing down from a determination to assert and insist upon our legal or equitable rights should be permitted. Let the candidates for Congress be interrogated as to their intentions as to such claims, and if either one is not in favor of demanding and working for our rights, let us vote for those who will."

GRAIN TRADE OF BUFFALO.

The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser of Oct. 31 says: "The total receipts of grain at Buffalo in October were 7,234,167 bushels. In the corresponding month last year there were 8,065,990 bushels, and 7,933,430 bushels in the year previous. With the exception of 1872 and 1873, when the eastward movement of grain was unusually large, the receipts in the month just closed compare favorably with those of previous years. The imports at Buffalo for the navigation season up to Nov. 1, aggregate 38,628,153 bushels; in 1875 there were 43,929,857 bushels. This shows a total decline of only 5,301,000 bushels in the grain receipts, which is not as great a loss as might have been anticipated from the terrible competition that the lake route has had to contend against all the season. The shipments to the East by canal show a somewhat greater falling-off than the movement by lake, as the canal has to meet the increased competition of the New-York Central and the Erie Railways at this port. The extent of this competition may be seen from the fact that these roads have taken out of this city since Jan. 1 over 11,000,000 bushels of grain that were received by water. The total shipments by canal for this season reach 24,478,030 bushels; in the corresponding period in 1875 they were 30,193,870 bushels."

FIVE CHILDREN LOST WITHIN A WEEK.

A Massachusetts paper says that a fatality almost unprecedented in the history of a single household occurred last week in the family of Peter Reeves, North Andover. One of his children died Monday of diphtheria; a second died Tuesday; Friday two others died, and, on Saturday, while the four who had previously died were lying unburied in the receiving tomb or at the house, the death of the fifth child occurred. The funeral service over the remains of all five of the children was held at the same time, and they were buried together at the cemetery. A sixth child, the only remaining one of the family, and the father and mother, are now ill with the disease. The cause is believed to be defective drainage.

SUSPENSIONS AT BROWN UNIVERSITY.

The Providence Journal of Wednesday says: "Four or five members of the Sophomore Class in the university have been suspended for misconduct, of which they will repent upon calm reflection and judicious advice from home. The class proposed to make common cause with the culprits, but the administration of the university wisely decided to treat such cases individually, as the circumstances shall demand. There is little doubt that wholesome discipline will be maintained, as the best interests of the institution demand."

A VERDICT OF MURDER

THE CONTEST IN NEW-YORK.

A STAMPEDE FROM TILDEN.

GREAT CHANGE TAKING PLACE IN PUBLIC SENTIMENT—WHOLESALE DESERTIONS FROM TILDEN—A BRILLIANT OUTLOOK FOR THE REPUBLICANS—THE PROSPECT IN WASHINGTON, ESSEX, FULTON AND HAMILTON, WARREN, AND SARATOGA COUNTIES.

From Our Special Correspondent.

WHITEHALL, Thursday, Nov. 2, 1876.

That a great change has taken place in the current of public sentiment on the Presidential question in the country districts within the last four or five days, is apparent to the most casual observer. All admit it, for it is so palpable that none can deny it. The Republicans show it in the increased buoyancy of their spirits, and the Democrats, unable to conceal it even from themselves, no longer indulge in the brag and bluster that everywhere marked their conduct of the canvass last week and the week before. While a few days ago they were ready, or professed to be ready, to bet odds on carrying this State for Tilden, they now, for the most part, studiously avoid that method of deciding an election, and can rarely be induced to stake even dollars on the result. And they have the best of reasons for this abatement of their confidence. They behold the best men of their party dropping out of the ranks by scores every day. There have been more conversions from the Tilden and Hendricks to the Hayes and Wheeler party in the last five days than during the whole previous period of the campaign. In this part of the State it threatens to become a stampede. Almost every hour brings reports of new accessions to the Republican Party—or rather of desertions from the Tilden and Hendricks Rebel War Claims Party—for most of the men who are coming over claim to be as stanch Democrats as they ever were. A prominent Republican in Saratoga County told me yesterday that within two hours before I met him, three life-long Democrats, substantial farmers and men of character, had called on him to say that they had made up their minds to vote for Hayes and Wheeler, and proffering their services in aid of the cause in any way he might suggest. The changes that are now taking place are not simply refusals to vote for Tilden, but open declarations in favor of Hayes. Personal dislike of Tilden, although it is almost universal among the better class of Democrats, has nothing to do with it. If he were ten times as popular as he is it would make no difference. It is the tendencies of the party he represents, the influences that are back of him, and the men who constitute the bulk of his followers, that cause the alarm. Recent events, and particularly the ill-judged correspondence between Tilden and Hewitt about the rebel war claims, with the stereotyped disclaimers that so quickly followed from the South, have probably done more to produce the change in public sentiment than anything else. The cunning device concocted by Tilden and Hewitt to allay suspicion only excited it. Instead of concealing the cloven foot it only exposed it. The defection among the prominent men of the party is rapidly demoralizing the rank and file. Even the Irishmen are getting disgusted with a candidate whom they have heard their leaders denounce as a "fraud" for the last two years, and were it not for the "barr'ls" that are expected to roll in for "Tilden and reform" on election-day, they too would join in the stampede.

Here in Washington County, where two weeks ago, the Republicans did not expect a majority for the electoral and State tickets of more than 1,600, they now give assurance of 2,500, and are not without hope of getting 3,000. The town of Whitehall, with its Democratic majority of three or four hundred, they expect to carry for Hayes and Wheeler, and will largely increase the Republican majorities in the surrounding towns. Martin I. Townsend, their candidate for Congress, will sweep the county by a majority equal to that for the electoral ticket, and all the Republican candidates for county officers will be elected as a matter of course. The Republicans were never better organized in this county than they are now, and at no time since 1860 have they felt the importance of bringing out their full vote. There is but one cause of discontent among them, and that is not likely to seriously affect the vote on the national or State tickets. The nomination of ex-Senator Baker for the Assembly in the Second District, comprising the northern portion of the county, was distasteful to a large portion of Republicans, who thought that Mr. Burleigh, who represented the district last year to the eminent satisfaction of his constituents, should have been renominated. So far as Mr. Burleigh is concerned, he does not want the office, and did not want it last year. He is a man of extensive business engagements, to whom the acceptance of office of any kind involves a sacrifice. But he has for twenty years been a conscientious and hard worker for the principles of the Republican Party, has spent his money freely for the cause—never asking, but always refusing office or other reward for his services—and it is manifest to any one who goes around this district that he is the first choice of a large majority of the Republicans for the Assembly. Mr. Baker, however, got the nomination, and it has not been deemed judicious to divide the party by nominating an independent candidate against him. The Democrats have taken advantage of the Republican disaffection and put their strongest candidate in the field against Mr. Baker. He is an ex-Supervisor of this town, named George Brett, is very popular with both parties, and many think he will be able to win the district for the Democrats. There are two factions of the Democracy here, however, and it is said that one faction, headed by the bogus canal reformer, Emerson E. Davis, and his bosom friends, "Barnett and Nash," whom Tilden denounced in his Message as thieving canal contractors, is working for Baker. It is no particular credit to Baker to be the recipient of their aid, but he hopes to be able, through them, to offset the disaffected Republican votes that will be cast against him. So long as there is no trading of votes calculated to injure the Republican State or national tickets, the quarrel is of no special interest to Republicans outside of the district, and both sides give the assurance that the vote for Hayes and Wheeler or for Morgan and Rogers will not suffer from it. It is certain that Mr. Burleigh is working just as hard for Republican success as though he were a candidate for a much higher office than Assemblyman, and if Mr. Baker is doing his best, as he claims to be, the result cannot be very damaging to the Electoral or State ticket. In the First Assembly District of this county the Republicans have renominated Hon. Townsend J. Potter, their excellent representative of last year, whose election by a large majority is conceded.

ESSEX COUNTY.

The Republican prospects in this county have brightened rapidly within the last week, as they have in all the other rural counties. The people are aroused and in earnest, and a full vote of the party will be out on election day. The best judges are confident of an increased Republican majority even over the last Presidential election, and a very large increase over any year since that time. They now estimate their majority as high as 1,600. Last year it was only 800. Mr. B. D. Clapp, their candidate for the Assembly, will be elected without difficulty, and they will give their full quota of votes for Andrew Williams, the candidate for Congress from the Clinton, Warren, and Essex District, whose election is equally certain.

WARREN COUNTY.

The Republicans of Warren County estimate an increase of their majority over last year of not less than 600. The majority in the whole county was then a trifle less than 400. The increase will be mainly from the stay-at-home Republicans, who, since 1872, have rarely taken the trouble to go to the polls. The majority for Grant in the last Presidential election was nearly 1,100, and it will not vary much this year from that figure for Hayes and Wheeler. Glen's Falls, the largest town in the county will give a good majority for the Republican ticket, and all the other towns promise an increased Republican vote. There is more life and activity in the party than has been witnessed for many years, and everything inspires confidence in a favorable result next Tuesday. Robert Waddell, last year's member of the Assembly from this county, has been renominated by the Republicans, and will be reelected by an increased majority.

FULTON AND HAMILTON.

The average Republican majority in these two counties is 500. That was the figure last year, and it did not differ much from it four years ago. It will not be less this year, and the Republicans expect to make a gain of 200 or more. Last year the Democrats elected the Assemblyman by a small plurality, the Prohibitionists having run a candidate who drew off many Republican votes. This year the Republicans have nominated George W. Fay, a candidate who is said to be acceptable to all, and there is little doubt of his election, which will be a Republican gain.

SARATOGA COUNTY.

The Republicans are apprehensive of losing their Assemblyman from the First District of this county, which, if it should so turn out, will be a gain of one for the Democrats. The candidate who for the last four years has so acceptably represented the First District, Hon. George West, declined to run again, and the Republicans have nominated in his place Mr. Jehiel W. Himes, who is not much known to the majority of the voters, and, being opposed by a popular Democrat, will have rather a hard race. There is also danger of losing the County Judge, owing to the Republicans having made a weak nomination. With these exceptions, neither of which is likely to seriously affect the State or electoral ticket, the outlook for the Republicans in Saratoga County is good. The majority for Hayes and Wheeler will not fall below 1,500, and is very likely to exceed that figure. Last year the majority for Seward for Secretary of State was about 1,300. The Democratic vote in the county last year was almost exactly the same as in 1872, showing that there had been no increase of their strength since that time; whereas the Republican vote was 922 less last year than it was in 1872. A similar state of facts is shown in almost every county in the State outside of New-York, and, in estimating the Republican majorities next Tuesday, everything depends on the question whether the full Republican vote is to be brought out this year. The indications everywhere are that it will be, and if so, the Republican majorities of 1872, and of the previous Presidential elections may be safely relied on, unless it can be shown that there has been a change of political sentiment among the people, or a change in the character of the population.

There have been no changes, or next to none, in their county from the Republican to the Democratic Party, while the changes from Tilden to Hayes have been very numerous, particularly within the last week, to say nothing of the scores of Democrats to be found in this county who will not vote for Tilden under any circumstances, even if they do not vote for Hayes. There is quite a large floating vote in Saratoga and Ballston which cannot be counted on with any certainty by either party, but among the substantial citizens who have a local habitation, and whose opinions are known, nearly all the changes have been in favor of the Republican ticket. Changes are still taking place every day, and it would not be surprising if the majority for the Republican Electoral ticket in this county should be 2,000.

The Republicans will elect their candidate for the Assembly in the Second District, Hon. Isaac Noyes, Jr., who has been renominated. The leading men of the party are actively at work here; meetings are held nightly in all parts of the county, and everything promises an old-fashioned Republican victory.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

OGDENSBURG, Nov. 2.—Hon. John A. Kasson, of Iowa, addressed the closing Republican meeting of the campaign in Ogdensburg this evening. He addressed himself mainly to the laboring and business men of the community, in a powerful speech, and with great effect. About one hundred and twenty-five meetings have been held in St. Lawrence County, and the party is thoroughly aroused. Our working Republicans estimate their majority at 7,000, and hope to make it more.

ANOTHER GRAND RALLY IN PLATTSBURG—FREE BALLOTS AND FREE SCHOOLS.

PLATTSBURG, Nov. 2.—The Republicans of this place had another grand rally last night, though it rained heavily. The Court-house was filled to overflowing. Hon. L. Bradford Prince made a vigorous and eloquent speech. He predicted sure success under the banners of free ballot and free schools, thus creating much enthusiasm. Clinton County is thoroughly aroused.

HON. WILLIAM M. EVARTS SERENADED IN SCHENECTADY.

SCHENECTADY, Nov. 2.—Hon. William M. Evarts responded to a serenade tendered him by the Republicans this evening at Given's Hotel, in this city. He was received with immense enthusiasm, and held the vast assemblage spellbound for a half-hour.

MR. BLAINE'S TOUR FOR HAYES.

A ROUSING DEMONSTRATION AT POUGHKEEPSIE—MR. BLAINE ENTHUSIASTICALLY RECEIVED—HE SPEAKS TO TEN THOUSAND PEOPLE.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Thursday, Nov. 2, 1876.

Not since the early days of the war have the people of Poughkeepsie been so enthusiastic as to-day, the occasion being the reception of Hon. James G. Blaine, of Maine. People commenced to arrive in town as early as last night, and at daybreak this morning all the roads leading to the city, and the steam-boats and cars, were crowded. At 9 A. M. our city presented a holiday appearance, and the sidewalks of Main street were thronged with human beings. At the head-quarters of the Republican Committee, men reported on horseback by the scores, and were assigned positions in the procession. Delegations arrived hourly from country towns in two and four horse wagons, carrying flags and banners, and reported in columns to the General Committee. At 10 A. M. the procession formed on Mill street, the right resting on Washington, Grand Marshal Gen. George Parker being in command. At the appointed time it moved through Washington street to Main, and then down Main to the Hudson River Railroad, where it formed in open order and awaited the arrival of the train which was to bring Speaker Blaine. In the meantime the Morgan Legion of Wappingers' Falls, the Hayes and Wheeler Artillery Club of Cold Spring, the Stanfordville Gun Squad, and the Poughkeepsie Hayes and Wheeler Gun Squad, dragged their guns to a high eminence close to the depot, and as soon as the whistle of the train was heard, battery after battery fired salutes. Shortly after 10 A. M. the St. Louis express, having Mr. Blaine on board, glided into the station. Mr. Blaine made his appearance from the rear of the train, and as soon as he was noticed the air was rent with cheers, and again the guns of the batteries belched forth fire and smoke. After breakfasting in the depot restaurant Mr. Blaine, in charge of the committee, passed out of the dining-room and through an immense crowd to a barouche, drawn by four horses. Hon. B. Platt Carpenter, Hon. H. G. Eastman, and Benson J. Lossing accompanied him, and the distinguished party were driven to the head of the line. The scene at this time was grand. Immense crowds of people surged to and fro along the sidewalks and in the streets and blocked the carriageways. A cavalcade of 400 horsemen lined the roadway in open order, and through them passed Mr. Blaine's barouche and thirty other carriages, containing many leading men of this city and the river counties, including Hon. Hamilton Fish, Jr. The line of march was up Main street to Hamilton, through Hamilton street to Mansion square, around Mansion square to Clinton street, through Clinton street to Montgomery, and down Montgomery street to the Soldiers' Fountain, opposite the entrance to Eastman Park.

When the procession arrived at Fountain square, Montgomery street, Market street, and South avenue were packed with people. Eastman Park, close by, was magnificently decorated with bunting. An immense platform had been erected and was densely crowded, while around and about it fully ten thousand people stood packed like sardines in a box awaiting the formal opening of the monster mass-meeting. When order had been secured Mr. S. H. Le Roy, President of the Poughkeepsie Republican Club, appeared at the front of the platform and announced Hon. B. Platt Carpenter as President of the meeting. Mr. Carpenter came forward amid enthusiastic cheers, and made a brief but eloquent address full of earnest thought and patriotic utterances, and closed by introducing Hon. James G. Blaine. When Mr. Blaine appeared the gathering surged to and fro and the cheers and shouts were deafening, and mingled with them were salvos of artillery from batteries in Eastman Park. Mr. Blaine's speech was about one hour in length. He discussed every point at issue in the most forcible manner, clinching every argument as he went along. He particularly warned the loyal people of the North against the danger of allowing the South to adjudicate its own war claims, showing that if they got control of the Government through Samuel J. Tilden they would substantially control that matter. He paid a glowing tribute to the integrity and worth of Gen. John H. Ketcham, the candidate for Congress in this district. While Mr. Blaine was speaking the Hayes and Wheeler Club of Newburg, headed by Moscow's Band, and numbering 400 men, arrived upon the scene, having come up on the Daniel Drew. They, too, were received with tremendous cheers and salvos of artillery, and Mr. Blaine paid them a high compliment. Their ranks were filled with many of the best citizens of Newburg, and their rear was flanked by a club of colored men from Newburg, numbering forty. When Mr. Blaine concluded his speech the President of the meeting introduced Silas B. Dutcher, who spoke for an hour upon all the vital issues at stake, handling them without gloves, and eliciting at times the greatest applause. One or two other speeches were made, when the monstrous meeting adjourned. It was the largest political meeting that has been held here for years

THE SENATOR FROM MAINE IN TROY—A SPLENDID RECEPTION—MR. BLAINE UNABLE TO SPEAK.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TROY, Nov. 2.—Mr. Blaine had a magnificent reception here to-night. No hall, in Troy, was large enough to hold those desirous of hearing him. Gilbert Bush & Co.'s immense store room on Green Island, on the other side of the Hudson, was selected. It is 300 feet long and 100 feet wide. Crowds gathered at 6 o'clock, and, though the meeting was announced for 8, the place was jammed at 7, from 15,000 to 20,000 people crowding into and outside the building. Ex-Mayor Gilbert presided. Mr. Blaine's voice failed him, and Chauncey M. Depew spoke eloquently for over an hour. Shouts for Mr. Blaine called him out again, and another ovation followed. His thirty-minutes' speech thrilled his auditors, and thousands tarried after the meeting to shake hands with him. The demonstration surpassed all expectations, people flocking in from all over the county. The Senator is the guest of Hon. John M. Francis.

AN IMMENSE MASS-MEETING AT GOSHEN—SPEECH BY EX-GOV. JEWELL, OF CONNECTICUT—ORANGE COUNTY REPUBLICANS ON THE ALERT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

GOSHEN, Nov. 2.—A Republican mass-meeting of immense proportions was held here to-day. The meeting opened at 2 P. M., and was addressed by ex-Gov. Jewell, of Connecticut, and the veteran jurist Hon. D. F. Gedney, of this place. Representatives were present in large numbers from different parts of the county. The addresses were of the most sound and convincing character. Many leading Democrats were present, and listened, evidently, with profound interest. Gov. Jewell's intimate relations with the South during his administration in the postal service at Washington added much to the force and pertinancy of his well-chosen words. The applause was frequent and hearty. In the evening the display was very fine and encouraging in the extreme. Deputations of torch-bearers were present in large numbers from neighboring towns, in all about fifteen hundred strong, besides 200 mounted men. The village was beautifully illuminated with all sorts of pleasing and patriotic devices. At 8 o'clock an address was made from the music stand in the church park by Hon. Isaac I. Hayes. The audience was a perfect sea of heads, completely filling the entire square. This occasion has proved to us that the Republicans of Orange County are still as vigilant as in years past, and that with the consciousness and power of right they mean to vanquish the foes of American prosperity in their own county limits on Tuesday next, by a well-merited and time-honored Republican majority.

GEN. SICKLES AT IRVING HALL.

A LARGE MEETING OF THE SIXTEENTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT REPUBLICANS—ELOQUENT ADDRESSES BY GEN. DANIEL E. SICKLES AND HON. CHARLES H. TREAT.

The Republicans of the Sixteenth Assembly District met last evening at Irving Hall to hear addresses by Gen. Sickles and Hon. Charles H. Treat, of Maine, on the issues at present before the people. The meeting was held under the Presidency of Col. Frank E. Howe, and was largely attended. The galleries and private boxes were occupied by ladies, among whom were Mrs. Morgan and Mrs. Dix, who were accompanied by their respective families. Now and then the sounds of the Tammany demonstration outside penetrated to the hall, and Gen. Sickles in allusion to the circumstance gained great applause by observing that they were under the fire of the enemy. The band of the Twenty-second Regiment furnished music, and some excellent Republican campaign songs were sung by a well-trained glee club. Col. Howe introduced Gen. Sickles in a few appropriate remarks.

Gen. Sickles, on presenting himself, was received with enthusiastic applause. He came there, he said, to speak to them as Americans, whether native or adopted, who loved their country and felt the deepest interest in its prosperity and the perpetuation of its institutions. They might be Republicans or Democrats, but there were times when partisanship should be hushed in the presence of other interests and issues. When the preservation of the Union was involved, when the public tranquillity was disturbed, when the public credit was menaced, when the public prosperity was jeopardized, when the dignity of the chief magistracy was in danger of being compromised, it became them to meet and take counsel together as Americans. But why, he asked, was the great uprising of the people which they had witnessed within a few days? Few of them had supposed it possible. Was it that the vigilant nation contemplated the possibility of restoring the power of the old Democratic leaders? They had evidence, at all events, that by force in the South, fraud in the North, and brag everywhere, there was danger that such a calamity might happen. It was for this reason that the solid men of New-York, the loyal men of the North, arose against the solid treason of the South. The time and the gravity of the occasion justified all this movement. They could well understand what the restoration of the Democratic power would imply. By their experience in this City of New York they could comprehend what would be the result if they were to send a graduate of Tammany Hall to the White House. They remembered the time when the imbecile Buchanan sent the message to Congress not to hold the States to their allegiance. That was the policy of Mr. Tilden to-day. Jefferson Davis had conducted the administration for ten States from 1861 to 1865, and properly speaking, he ought to be regarded as the last President of the Democratic Party. The constituencies, Congress, Cabinet, and all the belongings of that administration were Democratic, and all the survivors of it were to-day supporters of Mr. Tilden. If the people were content to place Mr. Tilden in the Presidential chair, they might as well place Jefferson Davis himself there. Identical in all views of the principle that controlled the Government—associated in all the policy of the Democratic Party—Tilden had been intrusted with the charge of the left wing of the army—the copperheads of the North. Tilden to-day was more responsible for the rebellion and its consequences than Davis himself, for the reason that Davis in the South would never have ventured upon secession, if Tilden and his associates in the North had not told him that the Democratic party in the North agreed that they had a right to secede, and would do nothing to prevent secession becoming an accomplished fact. He asked their permission to recall to their attention the record of Mr. Tilden and of the Democratic party. His first appearance in public life was at the Buffalo Convention in 1848, when it was declared that slavery should not extend into the territories, but should be confined to those in which it already existed. He did not, however, said the speaker, adhere long to that declaration, but, on the contrary, associated himself with those who held that slavery should make its way into the free territories. When Lincoln was brought forward by the Republican Party on the platform that free territories were to be respected, nowhere was found a more persevering foe than Tilden. The South went in that contest for the Presidency and failed, but one month after the election of Lincoln, the whole South was in arms, and they were broken up and destroyed as a nation, so far as it was in the power of conspirators to do it. He charged that long before the election there was an organized conspiracy in the South, with all the means at hand, and all the resources ready, to consummate the act of secession and of revolution. Otherwise, it was impossible to have the organized South in the one vast camp that fulminated a declaration of war against the Government. Well, the war was fought out for four years, and the Union conquered. The South professed to accept the situation; but how did they accept it? By declaring with the Democratic Party that the reconstruction acts of Congress were revolutionary, null, and void. As in 1860, they failed again in 1868, and again they professed to accept the situation.

Passing on to 1872 they saw that, despairing of effecting their purpose by organized revolution, the Democrats changed their tactics altogether. They nominated Mr. Greeley, and secured the co-operation of Mr. Sumner, hoping thereby to obtain the Republican vote, and especially the colored vote of the South. But they failed again, because no threats and no promises could separate the colored voters of the South from that party which had given them freedom and manhood. What he asked, did they see to-day? A new rebellion: eighteen thousand men in arms in South Carolina organized in companies and in regiments to march over the State during this canvass, to break up Republican meetings and to drive Republican voters from the polls. A Presidential election thus conducted was revolution, and the success of the candidate would be usurpation. Revolution in this form was infinitely worse than the rebellion of 1861. If the rebellion had then been successful, they of the North would at least have had a free Government by themselves; but if they could, by driving the Republicans from the polls, seize the reins of power, then the liberties of the country would be lost. He asked if the fourteenth amendment, so far as the suffrage of the colored man was concerned, was not annulled to-day by the force of arms? It remained to be seen whether the loyal people of the North would not restore it by bayonets sent to South Carolina, and by their ballots at the polls. But if these bayonets would not maintain tranquillity, if they failed to respect the voice of the North expressed through the ballot box, let the call come for as many more battalions to go down there the next week and begin the battle. [Great applause.] How idle it was to suppose, that the South, if it regained power, would hesitate for an instant to set aside the fourteenth amendment. Therefore, he counseled, let them keep the control in the hands of the loyal North where it would work no evil. [Applause.]

When Gen. Sickles had concluded his address, the Chairman, in a few words, paid a graceful compliment to the ladies present for their attendance, and reminded the audience of the services which the ladies of the Union had rendered during the war. He then introduced Hon. Charles H. Treat, of Maine, who, he said, had been a life-long Democrat, but who had left his party because he could no longer abide by its principles. Mr. Treat, in his address, argued that the great fruitage of the war should be preserved intact, and urged his hearers to labor assiduously to that end.

HOME WORK.

The Cuban Republican Club will meet at the rooms of the Lincoln Club to participate in the parade to-night.

The Boys in Blue of the Eighth Senatorial District will make a good appearance in the line of the Republican procession to-night.

The Boys in Blue of the Seventh Assembly District will turn out at least 1,000 men in the grand Republican parade to take place to-night.

Many Republicans who have not carried torches since the days of the "Wide Awakes," before the war of the rebellion, will turn out to-night.

The Morgan and Rogers Campaign Club of the First Ward met last evening at No. 64 Exchange place, and indorsed the Republican County ticket.

It is believed that the Republican torch-light procession to-night will eclipse the Tammany parade in appearance and discipline, if it does not in numbers.

A Republican demonstration will take place at Central Hall, Melrose, Westchester County, on Saturday evening. Speeches will be made by Gen. D. E. Sickles and others.

The German Republican Hayes and Wheeler Campaign Club of the Ninth Assembly District, had an enthusiastic meeting on Wednesday evening, at their headquarters in Bedford street. The proceedings were opened by Gerhard Meyer, and speeches were made by Hons. W. H. Corsa, S. Yeuman, John Morris, and John De Vries.

The German Republican Campaign Club of the First Assembly District met at No. 321 Greenwich street last night. Speeches were delivered eulogizing the candidates nominated by the County Convention.

The Republicans of the Twenty-fourth Ward had a rally at Ittner's Hall, Tremont, Westchester County, on Wednesday evening, when addresses were made by Hons. William Herring and James R. Angel. Several companies of Boys in Blue paraded on the same evening, and the meeting broke up at a late hour.

THE COLORED REPUBLICANS.

ENTHUSIASTIC MASS-MEETING AT COOPER INSTITUTE—ADDRESS BY PROF. JOHN M. LANGSTON, OF WASHINGTON—WHAT A "SOLID SOUTH" MEANS.

Nearly two thousand colored ladies and gentlemen assembled in the large hall of Cooper Union last evening, the occasion of their gathering being the ratification of the Republican national, State, and local tickets by the colored citizens of New-York. The meeting was without doubt the largest as well as the most enthusiastic colored demonstration held in the City during the present campaign. It was organized by the election of Rev. Dr. Henry H. Garnet as Chairman. In responding to the compliment, Dr. Garnet delivered a brief address, in which he reviewed some of the prominent issues of the campaign. At the conclusion of his remarks he introduced to the audience, as the speaker of the evening, Prof. John M. Langston, who delivered an eloquent address, which was frequently interrupted by prolonged applause.

In 1861, when Abraham Lincoln was elected President, he said, the Democratic Party went out of power, because it had shown itself false to the Union and to liberty. And because it thus proved false to liberty—the liberty of the white man and the black man—the people arose in their intelligence and their might and consigned it to a political grave. When they banished it, they wrote upon its sides the words, "Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin"—weighed in the balance and found wanting. The grave it was buried in was broad and deep, and because it was consigned to it for its treachery, the American people will be slow to resurrect it or return it to power. As American citizens, we love our Union, and to maintain it have pledged our lives, honor, and property; and next to this Union we love our liberty—liberty distinguished from mere license; liberty to the white man and the black, regulated and protected by the law. In both these, as I have said, the Democratic Party has been, and is, false. When South Carolina said she was insulted and wronged by the election of Abraham Lincoln, and proposed to bid farewell to the Union and secede, she was acting upon the opinion expressed by James Buchanan, that there was no law to compel a State to stay in the Union. They tell me that Tilden is a learned, astute, sincere, and great man, particularly great as a lawyer. Because he is such a lawyer I fear him more than any other man. His law is not the grand, old, and patriotic law of Jackson, but law that follows in the wake of that of Hayne, Calhoun, and Buchanan, and is, in effect, the same law that acknowledged the right of a State to secede. Now, if by some untoward circumstance this "great" lawyer should be elected, is inaugurated, and takes his seat in the White House, will his course not be to obey the mandates of the solid South? Where is the Democrat to whom you can trust the government of a South which proposes to do in the forum what it failed to do in the field? But not only has Mr. Tilden bad law but he is himself disloyal. You talk of his keeping back a few dollars of his tax. I can forgive him for that, but I cannot forgive any man, be he white or black, who, when his country and its Government were in danger, would refuse to give it assistance. Mr. Tilden in those dark days we so well remember gave his country neither assistance nor sympathy, nor anything that would help it to tide over the momentous crisis of its affairs. Such a man, I say, is not only not fit to be a citizen, but he is a traitor in his actions and in his heart. This same man now comes to us and asks us to give him those suffrages which will elevate him to the highest position in the land, in preference to that noble patriot, Rutherford B. Hayes. Is he not an admitted swindler and a proved perjurer? Here to-night, I tell him that those four millions of our citizens, among whom no traitor exists, will not vote for a man whose honor and integrity is questionable. The Solid South means a compact with combined States to elect Mr. Tilden to the office he is seeking, in consideration of his promise to obey their orders and crush out negro supremacy. What does the South propose to do if it shall succeed in fulfilling its part of the compact and elect Samuel J. Tilden? Let me read to you the words of Hon. John Fawitt, who speaks through his paper in the name and by the authority of "a solid South." "The grave question to be settled, at any cost, is, what is to be done to get rid of the negro as a voter." That's a very plain question, I suppose if they cannot make him vote, as they made him serve, by the lash, they will use other methods to nullify his influence. "Sooner or later, with more or less dispatch, he will be disfranchised and thrust out of politics." We had no right to get in, the Democrats think. "White men of all parties, and every grade of religious conviction, may as well come to the consideration of the question how to get the negro out with the least confusion and cost." O, they think there will be some confusion and some cost in such an attempt. The only question is, how to do it with the least of both? Well, I am of the opinion that they will find the cost greater than they supposed, for we are citizens of the United States, and the army, and the navy, and the Government will protect us and our lives, property and legal rights. When they get us out with this defence it will be with some confusion and cost. But I will read further: "He must go out, and there is no profit in standing long on the order of his going." That's Democratic reform. "The question of suffrages belongs to the States respectively, and when the reorganized Democracy of 1876 go into office, each State will be allowed to settle this and all other questions in its own way, and time, without any interference from the General Government." My friends, in view of that policy, if you still wish to stay in politics, to preserve your citizenship, and use your franchise, and be men, you will vote for Hayes and Wheeler. The speaker closed with a minute dissection of the Democratic watchword of "Reform."

THE CAMPAIGN IN NEW-JERSEY.

GREAT MEETING IN KEYPORT—ELOQUENT SPEECH BY GEN. CONWAY—THE IGNORANCE OF THE SOUTH.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

KEYPORT, Nov. 2.—One of the greatest Republican meetings ever held here occurred this afternoon. Farmers, merchants, mechanics, clerks, laborers, women, and school-children, from all towns in this section, turned out to hear Gen. Thomas W. Conway, late Superintendent of Public Instruction in Louisiana. For two hours he held the attention of his audience. He made a very eloquent plea on behalf of saving the South from herself—from her lawless, murderous, illiterate, and vicious elements. He cited all the murders, riots, burning of school-houses, and instances of assassination of Republicans, since 1868, of which he was witness, to prove that nothing could be so dangerous to national peace, nothing so detrimental to Southern interests, so damaging to public education, where forty-five per cent. of the population are unable to read or write, as the success of the Democrats in the pending struggle. His speech had unusual force and effect because of his personal knowledge of the facts stated, and was so eloquent, forcible, and witty as to succeed in the conversion of many hesitating Democrats.

AN ORANGE, N. J., DEMOCRAT SPEAKING FOR HAYES AND WHEELER.

The Republicans of Orange, N. J., held a large ratification meeting at their head-quarters last evening. The main attraction of the evening was the address by Hon. George S. Ferry, who had been a lifelong Democrat, but who left the party when it became known that Gov. Tilden had been placed at the head of the Presidential ticket. Mr. Ferry has no respect for Mr. Tilden as a man, and believes him to be a designing politician only. He believes that the Governor's war record indicates that he will submit his will entirely to the dictation of the rebel element of the South. Mr. Ferry is prominently identified with the Methodist Church, and the treatment which the missionaries sent by that church among the negroes of the South received at the hands of the former masters has made him particularly averse to anything which may tend to restore the ascendancy of the Southern Democrats in the counsels of the nation. He explained his views last evening eloquently and forcibly. The meeting was largely attended by Democrats of the City with whom Mr. Ferry's opinions have much weight. Mr. Ferry was once elected Mayor of Orange on the Democratic ticket. When it became known that Mr. Teese would decline a renomination to Congress, Mr. Ferry, was much talked of as his successor, but when the convention which awarded the nomination met Mr. Ferry was actively supporting Hayes and Wheeler.

THE PARADE TO-NIGHT.

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND PERSONS TO BE IN LINE—INVITATION TO BUSINESS MEN TO PARTICIPATE IN THE GOOD WORK—AIDS TO THE GRAND MARSHAL—GENERAL ORDER RESPECTING THE ROUTE OF THE BOYS IN BLUE.

The preparations for the grand Republican procession to take place this evening were completed last night. It will undoubtedly be the finest display of its character ever witnessed in this City. About five thousand Boys in Blue will be in line, while the district associations, and the business men unattached to political organizations, who feel that the success of the Republican Party is necessary for the welfare of the country, will swell the number of the processionists to about twenty-five thousand. The committee of bankers and merchants met again last night at the head-quarters of the Boys in Blue, in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, to complete the plans for the representation of business men in the procession. It was reported that many of the most prominent merchants of the City have signified their intention to take part in the parade. As Col. Emmens Clark was unable to accept the post of Marshal of the mercantile division, which had been proffered him, Gen. Charles K. Graham was appointed to the position. The following address was presented and adopted:

NEW-YORK CITY, Nov. 2, 1876.

To the Merchants, Bankers, Professional Men, and Business Men of New-York generally:

You are invited, together with your employes, to join in the parade of citizens to-morrow, Friday. It is requested that all who join the procession shall be attired in dark clothes, and parade without banners or transparencies. This body of citizens will be led by Gilmore's full band, and will march in the rear of the torchlight procession of the Boys in Blue, and be followed by the regular Republican organizations of the several wards of the City. This parade of citizens is intended to show to the people of the country that the business men of this City are alive to the danger which threatens all the business interests of the country through the efforts of the Democratic Party, and to give expression to their determination to rebuke the efforts of those unscrupulous leaders who are seeking to obtain control of the Government, simply that they may plunder it. Let every citizen who feels that the election of Samuel J. Tilden to the Presidency would be a national calamity join in this parade. Already thousands have signified their intention to turn out on this occasion, and it is hoped that one and all will feel it their duty to do so. Citizens will form in marching order on Washington Parade Ground, the right resting on Fifth avenue, at 8 o'clock. Officers of organizations desiring to participate in the parade will report to Col. Clifford Thomson, Adjutant, at the Brevoort House, at 7:30 o'clock P. M.

THE HOLLANDERS OF NEW-JERSEY.

MEETING OF REPUBLICAN HOLLANDERS IN PASSAIC—SEVERAL EXCELLENT SPEECHES MADE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PASSAIC, Nov. 2.—According to announcement in THE NEW-YORK TIMES, the Republican Hollanders gathered—over one hundred strong—in Speer's Hall to-day to listen to addresses on the issues of the hour. The President of the Holland Republican Club, Abraham Kramenburg, opened the meeting with a stirring review of the inflation ideas, income tax fraud, Tweed steal, and free trade aspects of the Democratic Party, declaring it the enemy of the honest working man. He started with the Democratic Party during Buchanan's Administration, its stealing the arms from the forts and money from the Treasury to send South; the hoisting of the stars and stripes on the Guardian Office, in Paterson, union down, upon the death of Mr. Lincoln; the falsity of their promises of protection to the manufacturing interests, and showed them unworthy of trust, whether in national or local offices. Mr. M. Everett, who spoke in English, then referred to Tilden's claim as reformer and said, "but for THE NEW-YORK TIMES Tilden would have let Tweed go on till he had stolen the whole State of New-York and had put Tilden and the Democratic Party in his pocket. Beware of fraudulent tickets and vote early," said he in conclusion. Mr. G. Rietmulder, of Passaic, and Mr. Pickard, of Illinois, followed with earnest counsel, the latter saying Illinois was sure for 21,000 majority for Hayes and Wheeler. The meeting closed with a song by all present, and three times three cheers for the Republican ticket. There are 4,000 Hollanders in Paterson, and 150 here, nearly all of them sure for Hayes and Wheeler.

PRELIMINARY VOTING.

Voting in the largest drug store in the United States resulted in 46 for Hayes and 24 for Tilden.

A vote on the New-York Central Railroad near Troy yesterday gave Hayes 58 and Tilden 37.

Yesterday afternoon a vote was taken in one of the Broadway banks on the issues of the campaign, and resulted as follows: Hayes, 45; Tilden, 15; Cooper, 5.

Votes of customers in a Ninth Ward drug store give the following result: Monday—Hayes, 29; Tilden, 28. Tuesday—Hayes, 33; Tilden, 19. Wednesday—Hayes, 39; Tilden, 23.

On the 6:25 train from Poughkeepsie on the New-York Central and Hudson River Railroad yesterday afternoon a vote was taken up by one of the passengers on the Presidential candidates, the result being that Gov. Hayes received 126 votes to 22 cast for Tilden.

A vote taken one day last week on the Erie Railway gave Hayes 52, Tilden 9; yesterday on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western—Hayes, 103; Tilden, 30; and on the Albany day-boat 168 for Hayes and 56 for Tilden.

THE WALL STREET RALLY.

ADDRESS OF THE REFORM CLUB.

THE PEOPLE CALLED UPON TO ASSEMBLE AT THE SUB-TREASURY STEPS TO-MORROW AFTERNOON—THE DUTY OF VOTERS CLEARLY POINTED OUT—ADDRESSES TO BE DELIVERED BY HON. LOT M. MORRILL AND OTHERS.

The following address has been issued to the people of this City by the Republican Reform Club, which has in charge the arrangements for the great Republican mass-meeting, to come off in Wall street to-morrow afternoon at 1 o'clock. At this meeting Hon. Lot M. Morrill, Secretary of the Treasury, and other eminent speakers, will make addresses on the issues of the canvass.

To the People of the City of New-York:

The Republican Reform Club of the City of New York invite their fellow-citizens to assemble at the Sub-Treasury steps in Wall street at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of Saturday, Nov. 4, to consider the political situation.

At the beginning of this Presidential campaign, relying upon the assurances of the Democratic National Convention of 1872 and of subsequent State conventions of that party, it was our hope that the question of national integrity was settled and sealed, that no political party ever would dare again to disturb it, and that the chief discussions of the canvass would relate to the resumption of specie payments and the reform of the civil service. In this hope we addressed the Republican National Convention at Cincinnati, demanding that it should give assurance by its nominations:

1. That the sacred pledge of the honor of the United States to redeem and pay its legal tender promises on the 1st of January, 1879, shall be followed by all the legislation needful to fulfil it, and never shall be repealed or modified without the substitution of an earlier and better method of specie resumption.

2. That all the powers of appointment to office which are entrusted to the Executive by the Constitution and the laws shall be faithfully executed; that fixed methods shall be established for the selection of persons for appointment, which shall protect merit against mere influence and favoritism; that the Legislature never shall incroach upon the Executive in this department of authority, and executive and legislative powers shall not be confused by the delegation of the power of appointment by the President or any other executive officer to members of Congress in order to conciliate their support or promote their ambition; and

3. That the tenure of all the offices of the Federal Government whose faithful execution does not depend upon the political opinions of their holders shall be independent of those opinions, and honesty, capacity and fidelity shall become the conditions of obtaining and retaining every Federal office.

The Cincinnati Convention replied to this demand, and to others of a similar character, by proposing to the people Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, and William A. Wheeler, of New-York, for President and Vice President of the United States—candidates whose lives afford a more trustworthy pledge than the resolutions of any convention that they will spare no effort to resume specie payments at the earliest day, and to emancipate the civil service from purely political control. It is superfluous to add anything on these questions to their satisfactory letters of acceptance, but it is not inappropriate for us to state to our fellow-citizens that upon the presentment of our address to Gov. Hayes the day following his nomination, and several weeks before his letter was framed, he responded to the three propositions which we have repeated by declaring, "To these I say amen with all my heart." Of the perfect sincerity, spotless honor, and unimpeachable patriotism of these candidates it also is superfluous to speak, since they have withstood the fiery debates of a canvass unexampled for its personal impeachments.

We claim that public discussion has made manifest that the success of the Republican Party in this Presidential election will secure the resumption of specie payments on or before the 1st of January, 1879, and the active exercise of Executive power to conduct the civil service on the same principles which insure honesty, capacity and fidelity in private business; while the success of the Democratic Party, which is at discord within itself concerning a financial policy, and has no desire or intention to reform the civil service, will result in the confusion of business and in a new instance of those needless, cruel and disastrous revolutions in the subordinate offices of Government, of which that party made the original precedent, and which are a disgrace to civilization. But if these were the only, or even the chief danger of a restoration of the Democratic Party to national power, it would be fortunate for the country. We have seen with increasing alarm since the Presidential nominations, the development of influences in that party which threaten the national integrity less openly and immediately, but no less effectively, than it was threatened in the civil war. The course of the Democratic canvass shows that if Samuel J. Tilden and Thomas A. Hendricks are elected President and Vice President of the United States, they will owe their places to the electoral votes of States which were recently in rebellion, conferred by majorities composed almost exclusively of the former rebels. It is without any lack of fraternal feeling toward those majorities, formerly our enemies but always our fellow-citizens, and now relieved from the penalties of rebellion by the magnanimity of the Republican Party, that we declare our unwillingness to intrust them with supreme control of the Federal Government—the Army, Navy, and Treasury—and our regret that they should seek it. A Federal Administration which owes its existence to such a source cannot avoid submission to the power which created it. Nor is there anything in the public record of either Mr. Tilden or Mr. Hendricks which suggests a doubt that their submission would not be willing and complete.

When it is plain that more than a million voters who recently strove to dissolve the Union by fire and sword are now unanimous in striving to elect to its government candidates who, at their best sat with folded hands during the struggle, it is weakness and folly for patriots to be blind to the possibilities which will attend the success of the Democratic Party. In the presence of such a peril we adopt for our guidance the noble words of a generous and gallant commander of the Army of the Potomac. "I have never," says Gen. Burnside, "given my countenance or support in any way, either personal or political, to any man who faltered in the hour of danger, and I never will support any man who did not stand up to the mark all the time during the great struggle, and who did not say that the Government must be sustained at all hazards."

It is with reference to these considerations and this peril that we ask the loyal people of this City to meet at the time and place named. Hon. Lot M. Morrill, Secretary of the Treasury, and other speakers specially representing the interests and welfare of New-York, have accepted our invitation to address them on that occasion.

THE PEACE IN GEORGIA.

HOW IT IS MAINTAINED BY THE DEMOCRATS.

MEN WHO HAVE THEIR OWN WAY, AND ARE SATISFIED—THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN MINORITIES — FRAUDS IN THE LAST ELECTION—HOW THE STATE IS TO BE CARRIED FOR "TILDEN AND REFORM."

From Our Special Correspondent.

ATLANTA, Sunday, Oct. 29, 1876.

Gen. Wade Hampton, the shot-gun leader of the South Carolina Democracy, in nearly every speech delivered during the present political campaign has argued that his party should be intrusted with power because all those Southern States which are under Democratic rule are at peace, and all those controlled by Republicans are disturbed and troubled by race conflicts and political riots. To use Gen. Hampton's own words, "Democracy in the South means peace." He might just as well have said, with Napoleon, "The Empire is peace," and yet it cannot be denied that his statement has a great deal of truth in it. At the same time, however, it must be admitted that his argument, confined to its logical limits, is identical with that upon which the acts of secession were based. It is true that Democratic rule in the Southern States means peace; but it is also true that the peace results from the fact that the Republicans, when defeated at the ballot-box, either fairly or by the practice of frauds which they were unable to prevent, submit quietly to such arbitration, and peacefully allow the victors or apparent victors to rule. The Democrats of the South, on the other hand, do not submit to the verdict of the ballot-box. They are not law-abiding citizens and when they cannot legally obtain power they seek it by terrorism and murder. Republican South Carolina is, or has been, almost in a state of war, while Democratic Georgia enjoys profound peace and quiet. The reason for this is, that the Democratic minority in the State first named will not allow the majority to rule, and seeks by violence and bloodshed to overcome that majority. On the other hand in Georgia, the Republicans, who appear to be in the minority, and are certainly defeated at the ballot-box, submit quietly and allow the Democratic majority to rule in peace.

WHAT DEMOCRATIC PEACE MEANS.

And just here it may be well to state what "Peace in Georgia" means. In the first place, it means that the negroes, the freedmen, who were guaranteed the right of suffrage by the result of the war, are just as far from the ballot-box as they were in the days of slavery. Politically they are slaves to-day, for they are not allowed to use the right of voting according to their own wishes and inclination. They must either vote the Democratic ticket or they must stay away from the polls. This is generally understood by the black men in all parts of Georgia. I have traveled all over the State, and have been unable to find a district where the negroes dared to vote the Republican ticket openly. In the remote country districts, and in Augusta and other places on the South Carolina line, they are kept away from the polls by violence; not by organized violence, it will be remembered, but by that sneaking midnight intimidation which the Southern chivalry knows so well how to practice upon unarmed and defenseless black men. In those places to which I refer, just before the last election the negroes were quietly but firmly assured that if they attempted to vote anything but the Democratic ticket, they would be whipped or killed. In several instances these threats were carried into execution by "some wild young men," whose crimes, as usual, were "deeply deplored by the respectable men of the party." In Augusta, a few days since, I saw a negro, a poor old man, just tottering into the grave, who had been beaten by some of these "young men." His back was cut and slashed in every direction. It looks to-day as if a red-hot gridiron had been repeatedly stamped upon it. I do not give his name, because he would be killed if it were known that he had shown the bloody scars which bear testimony to Democratic crime. To my question, "Why did they beat you?" his simple answer was:

"Wal, Sir, for bein' a 'Publican man, I 'specta."

"You had done nothing wrong?" I asked.

"No, Sir," he said, "noffin, but tell my two boys to vote de 'Publican ticket, and 'clarin' dat I'd never vote de Dimocrat ticket so long I have bref in my body."

This old man's case is only one in a score. There were dozens of black citizens of Richmond County, Georgia, beaten for their Republicanism. Of course, this system of violence and intimidation cannot be carried on in the cities and thickly-populated districts, and in them the Democrats carried the last election by bribery and fraud. In addition to an illegal use of the power given them under the partisan State Election law, they secured their majority by bribing black voters and by a wide-spread system of proscription and preference, similar to that which is now being so successfully practiced in South Carolina. I am assured upon the best authority that at least ten thousand votes were bought outright by the Democrats, and over ten thousand more secured by threats. There are thousands of negro mechanics, draymen, and others in Atlanta, Augusta, Macon, and Columbus who did not vote at the last election, and who will not go near the polls on the 7th of November. They are all Republicans, and desire to exercise their rights, but they know that they would lose their employment five minutes after they voted the Republican ticket.

DEMOCRATIC ELECTION TRICKS.

Many of the tricks invented by the Democrats to keep the negroes from voting are exceedingly ingenious. One, practiced for the first time during the last election, and which will be again used next month, is to approach a colored man who comes to the polls to vote the Republican ticket and ask him all sorts of questions, legal and illegal, as to his age, his occupation, the place of his birth, as to his property, if he has any, if he has paid his taxes, if he is a resident of the district, &c. All the questions occupy time, of course, and crowds of colored people were delayed by them until after the polls were closed, and it was too late to deposit their ballots. Of course "the challengers," so called, were all white. They only challenged negroes, while men of their own color were allowed to vote freely and without question. The trick has proved to be exceedingly effective, particularly since the passage of the law abolishing voting precincts. By this thoroughly Democratic enactment, the negroes are obliged in many instances to travel from six to ten miles to get to the polls. For instance, in the County of Chatham, one of the largest in the State, and containing the City of Savannah, there is only one ballot-box. There are 35,000 people in the county, and more than six thousand voters. In the City of Atlanta, too, with a voting population of at least five thousand, there is only one polling-place, and at the last election it was entirely controlled by the Democrats. Not one in five colored men who desired to vote was allowed to do so. There is no doubt that all these tricks will be again practiced by the Democrats in the approaching election. They will carry the State for Tilden and reform, and cheat the Republicans out of at least two Congressmen. They will have their own way in everything, and of course, there will be "Peace in Georgia." H. C.

THE AMERICAN ORIENTAL SOCIETY.

A TWO DAYS' SESSION AT NEW HAVEN—PAPERS ON THE KOORDMANJEE, PHENICIAN AND OTHER LANGUAGES.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

NEW-HAVEN, Thursday, Nov. 2, 1876.

The American Oriental Society is the oldest of our learned societies, but its position has been somewhat changed by the rise of the American Philological Society, which has a more popular basis, and has withdrawn somewhat the classical strength from the Orientalists, as also the students of our American languages. Educators are drawn to the Philological Society, while the Oriental retains the Sanscrit, Shemitic and Chinese and Japanese students. The large body of our missionaries, who are scholars of languages little known, bring their valuable contributions to the Oriental Society. There were examples of this in the meeting of Wednesday and Thursday at New-Haven. Among those present were the missionaries Mr. Wheeler, of Harpoot, Eastern Turkey; Dr. Chamberlain, a very accomplished scholar in the aboriginal languages of India, and the representative of the Reformed Church in the translation of the Bible into Teloogoo, and Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, of Constantinople. The two former had interesting papers to present. After the opening of the meeting by its President, Prof. C. E. Salisbury, of New-Haven, and the election of Mr. Addison Van Name as Secretary, the Corresponding Secretary read the correspondence of the past year. He stated that an excellent manuscript of the Atharva Veda had been discovered in Cashmere, written on birch bark. He exhibited specimens of the birch bark used, which were undistinguishable from that gathered by tourists in the White Mountains. It is prepared so that two thin layers of bark shall cohere, and the writing is on both sides. A letter from Dr. Seyfforth proposed that the society should prepare fonts of Coptic and hieroglyphic type, to read in the direction contrary to that in ordinary use. Prof. Whitney reported that the society had about seven hundred dollars reserved for the purchase of Chinese type. The first paper was by Rev. C. H. Wheeler, of Eastern Turkey, in "The Language and Character of Koordmanjee Koords." They occupy a district to the south-east of Harpoot, as shown in a series of wall maps exhibited by Mr. Wheeler. They are of several varieties of Koords, of whom the Los Koords to the north-west of Harpoot were, he said, the worst men under heaven. Their territory is yet unmapped, and it is almost certain death to try to penetrate it. The Yezidees have the reputation of being very bad, but Mr. Wheeler would rather trust these devil-worshipers than some Christians he met. The Koordmanjee and the Zaza Koords are in places intermixed, but generally are as distinct as their languages. The Koordmanjee language is meagre, and an Armenian Pastor in Harpoot says that he knows the Koordmanjee more thoroughly than he does his own Koordish, inasmuch as he knows every word in the language, which he cannot say of Armenian. The Harpoot missionaries have reduced the Koordmanjee to writing, using the Armenian character, but reversing some letters to distinguish varieties of articulation not found in Armenia. The speaker exhibited specimens of books in this language. In reply to questions, Mr. Wheeler said that he did not anticipate any disturbance, in the case of war with Russia. The Turkish authorities are extremely friendly, and never fail to grant cheerfully what is asked of them. Dr. Hamlin said that he always got what he asked.

Prof. Whitney, of New-Haven, then read a paper making some criticisms on the argument of De Rongé, to prove that the Phenician alphabet is derived from the Egyptian hieratic characters. He commended the general methods of De Rongé, but showed that he seemed to be selecting arbitrarily the Hieratic characters which he made to correspond with the Phenician. Thus, there are in Egyptian quite a number of characters to represent "k," and there is no known reason in the sound of the characters why they should be assigned to the three different "k" sounds of Phenician. Prof. Whitney took up the several characters, and showed by a chart how imaginary appeared to be the relationship between the forms of the Phenician letters and the Egyptian Hieratic characters given by De Rongé as their origin. He also criticised De Rongé's treatment of the Aleph, or smooth breathing, and characterized this as no sound but a mere fiction. His conclusion was that, while De Rongé had made the Egyptian origin of the Phenician more probable, he had not by any means demonstrated it. Dr. W. H. Ward, of New-York, remarked, in reply to a question by the President, that since this work of De Rongé was written in 1859, though not printed until 1874, there had been, he thought, a general acceptance of the Egyptian source of the Phenician alphabet; that Brugsch, Schrader, Schröder, Ebers, and Levermann had all taken that ground. He also pointed out that the characters for Kesh and Daleth are in Phenician so near alike as to be easily confounded, and that these two characters are equally alike in the Hieratic and very similar in the two alphabets; also that Lamed, Nun, and Shin are very much alike in the two alphabets. The Phenician we know first full grown, and having no Phenician hieroglyphic from which it could have originated, it must therefore have had its origin either in the Egyptian, the Assyrian, or the Hittite (Hanath) hieroglyphics, and of these sources the Egyptian is much the most probable.

A paper by Prof. John Avery, of Iowa College, on "The Influence of the Aryans on the Aborigines of India," was then read by the Corresponding Secretary. Prof. Avery gathered together the accessible information on the ante-Aryan tribes, of which their are two branches. The oldest the hill tribes and the other the Dravidian. The bulk of the paper was devoted to the enumeration and classification of the tribes and showed how each had been affected by the later conquering Aryan migration. The relation of Sanskrit to the aboriginal words in these languages is about that of Latin to Anglo-Saxon in the English tongue. The languages of the black tribes giving the grammar, the pronouns the numerals and the words of common life, while the Sankrit gives the words of civilization and abstract terms. Dr. Chamberlain being called on, said that the paper was one of very great interest and excellence. He, however, made some criticisms on the classification of the tribes, among which he had taken extensive tours, and in several cases would distinguish their languages as Dravidian or hill tribe, differently from Prof. Avery.

On Wednesday evening the society was invited to a social entertainment at the house of Prof. Salisbury. On Thursday morning a paper was read by Dr. Chamberlain on "The Lelooqoo Language," and another by Mr. Taintor on "Chinese Lexicography." The audience was not large. Among others who were present, but who took no part, were President Woolsey and Dr. Bacon, of New-Haven; Prof. Gardiner, of Middletown; and Prof. Lanman and Librarian Tyler, of Johns Hopkins University. Two new members were elected—Rev. Henry Ferguson, of Exeter, N. H., and Rev. T. W. Chambers, D.D., of New-York.

POLITICAL NOTES.

In Kentucky the election of Presidential Electors is viva voce.

The business men of Hartford are to hold a grand meeting to-morrow evening. Hon. Edward W. Stoughton, of this City, is to make the address.

According to the Utica Herald a prominent Democrat of that city said on Wednesday: "Let Republicans hold their ranks steady and the Democrats will defeat Tilden."

The Democrats of the Twenty-fourth District have lassooed another candidate for Congress, and now name Orzo M. Bond, of Oswego. It is to hoped he will stay caught.

The Yale boys will vote for President of the United States to-day, the college catalogue being used as the registration list and every student being entitled to one vote.

New-Jersey Democrats are running for Congress and for their State Senate men who were indicted in 1874 for conspiracy to defraud their creditors. They are "reformers" now.

Mr. W. P. Robinson has declined the Prohibition nomination for District Attorney in Cortland County, and says: "Regarding the election this Fall as a crisis in the political history of the nation, I am and shall be the earnest supporter of our noble standard-bearers Hayes and Wheeler Morgan and Rogers."

One of the Vice Presidents at a late Tilden meeting in Iowa was a man who, during the war, was a rabid Copperhead, and named one of his boys Jefferson Davis. At least he tried to. He brought the unfortunate infant to church to be baptized by Rev. Dr. Reed. When informed that the name of the child was "Jeff Davis," Elder Reed indignantly refused to perform the ceremony.

Hon. John Wentworth declines the nomination for the Illinois State Board of Equalization. He says that all the other nominees of the district have also declined, and that he sincerely "hopes, if there is one citizen better qualified than another to prevent the outrage that year after year has been perpetrated upon Cook County, that he may be able to present himself to the next board backed by the unanimous voice of its people."

TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION IN NORWICH.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORWICH, Conn., Nov. 2.—The largest Republican parade since 1860 was made here to-night. Over 3,000 men were in line. The city, generally, was illuminated, and great enthusiasm prevailed.

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

THE BROADWAY BURGLARY.

THE PROPERTY STOLEN FROM ABRAHAM BESTHOFF'S STORE ON SUNDAY, RECOVERED.

Detectives King, Lyon, and Selleck, of the Central Office, succeeded yesterday in recovering nearly all the valuable property stolen on Sunday night last from the fancy goods store of Abraham Besthoff, at the corner of Broadway and Twentieth street. It will be remembered that the goods stolen, consisting of silk umbrellas, gold-headed canes, jewelry, and leather fancy goods, amounted in value to over nine thousand dollars. The detectives named have been at work on the case since last Monday when the case was reported to Superintendent Walling. It was discovered that the burglars had been unable to dispose of the goods, and were endeavoring to baffle the Police by removing them from place to place in a large trunk. The detectives followed the clues obtained very closely, and in one instance reached a house within ten minutes after the goods had been carted away. Yesterday they discovered that two men had hired a furnished room in the tenement-house, No. 90 Hester street, on Wednesday, and during the night had taken a large trunk into the room. The house was closely watched until late yesterday afternoon, but the men who hired the room failed to appear, and, becoming convinced that the burglars had received warning of their presence in the neighborhood, the detectives entered the room and seized the trunk, which, when opened, was found to contain nearly all the property stolen from Mr. Besthoff's store. The trunk was removed to Police Head-quarters and Mr. Besthoff notified. On examining the goods Mr. Petthoff found that all the articles stolen from him, with the exception of five umbrellas and two gold-headed canes, had been recovered. The detectives have also obtained a clue to one of the burglars, as a gentleman who passed the store Sunday night has given them the description of a man who was seen to take a bunch of keys from his pocket and unlock the padlocks on the front door. The gentleman paid very little attention to the matter at the time, as he supposed the man was the proprietor of the store; but when he heard of the robbery he notified the Police of what he had seen. Through this information the detectives expect to arrest the burglars.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

RESOLUTIONS IN FAVOR OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS RESPECTING THE CANALS AND STATE PRISONS—HALLETT'S POINT REEF.

The monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held yesterday, President S. D. Babcock in the chair. The following new members were elected: Christopher H. Garden, A. S. Malcomson, Alonzo A. Plant, D. H. Wallace, and William Whiteside. Mr. Ruggles offered the following resolutions, which, after some debate, were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The Legislature of the State of New-York, in view of the heavy expense and serious mismanagement of its canals and state prisons, has in the manner provided by the Constitution, passed by large and very nearly unanimous majorities of the members representing the two great political parties in the State, at two successive sessions of the Legislature, the necessary resolutions proposing two separate amendments of the Constitution, one committing the management of the canals to a Superintendent of Public Works, and the other committing the management of the state prisons to a Superintendent, said Superintendents to be appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate; and

Whereas, The amendments thus proposed are to be submitted to the electors of this State, for their consideration and consent at the annual election in the present month of November, now, therefore, it is

Resolved, By the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New-York that it continues as heretofore to regard the amendments thus proposed as conducive in the highest degree to the welfare of the people of the City and State of New-York, and that the members of the Chamber exert their best efforts to secure the adoption of the said amendments by the electors of the City and State.

Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the Chamber be empowered to request the respective State Committees of the two great political organizations in the State to furnish in due season a sufficient supply of ballots in respect to the proposed amendments for the use of the electors of the State in its different counties.

Capt. Ambrose Snow reported that the committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce at its last meeting to ascertain the effects of the explosion at Hallett's Reef, had conferred with Gen. Newton, and he had shown them charts exhibiting the depth of water before and after the explosion. These charts were submitted, and the report of the committee was accepted. Another blast was made yesterday, and Mr. Blunt said there would be twenty-four feet of water over the reef before December.

KINGSLEY & KEENEY'S SUITS.

The hearing before the Referees Judge Lott, George H. Fisher, and Thomas H. Rodman, in the suit of Messrs. Kingsley & Keeney against the City of Brooklyn, to recover $178,000 for work and materials furnished to the Hempstead Reservoir, was resumed at 11 o'clock yesterday morning in the Brooklyn Common Council Chamber. The plaintiffs were represented by Gen. B. F. Tracy and Joshua Van Cott, and the defendant by the Corporation Counsel and John E. Parsons. Col. Julius W. Adams, Chief Engineer of the Board of City Works, testified that in the execution of the contract the conduit around the reservoir was done under his direction; the iron work shown in the plans was to be furnished by the City, and was not included in the contract; there was the original profile of the reservoir made by Kirkwood and Bergen in his office at the time of the execution of the contract; this profile is without date, and is what is called a working profile; there was also a contour map, showing the ground by curves, in the office at the time of the letting of the contract, but not previous; this map was never transmitted by him to the Water Board. The contour map shows the height of the ground at places two feet apart; the flow line on the map was adopted immediately after the execution of the contract; the change from thirty-two to twenty-nine feet was made in the flow line on account of the prejudices and objections of the day; it was held that they couldn't hold thirty-two feet of water in that dam, and that they could not gather that amount into it; Mayor Kalbfleisch objected strongly to it on this ground; so far as he could recollect he had now produced all the plans which were in his office at the date of the contract. A map of the land plan with a piece torn off the corner was shown witness, and he continued: I do not know who tore off this piece nor do I know whether there was any indorsement on the part torn off; I have not seen that map since 1870; it was put away with other maps which were of no use.

Examined by Mr. Parsons—To determine the water surface and the exterior lines which inclosed the water surface of the reservoir, the ground was laid off in cross sections, which determined the height at certain points; the lines would be changed as the depth of the water changed; to establish the flow lines I directed to be made the different measurements which also determined the surface of the valley; the preparation of the map began at the lower end, and the figures were put on as the measurements and cross-sections were made; the moment we got control of the grounds the cross-sectioning and clearing away of timber was commenced; that work proceeded right along except where the mill-ponds were, and there it was suspended until the water was drawn off; immediately upon the acquiring of the land the laying down of lines and cross-sections outside the mill-ponds was commenced; there was no surveying work done outside the ponds until the ponds were cleared.

The reference was adjourned at this point until this morning at 10 o'clock.

RESCUED FROM A LIFE OF SHAME.

Late on Wednesday night, Lottie Austin, a young girl, arrived at the Grand Central Depot from Bennington, Vt., in search of an aunt, who resides in this City, but whose exact address she does not know. While wandering about the depot she was accosted by a well-dressed, genteel-appearing young man, to whom she related her story. He expressed great sympathy for her, and offered to take her to the house of a friend, where she could remain for the night. He took her to a hotel in East Forty-third street, near Fourth avenue, and endeavored to engage a room there for himself and his companion, but the proprietor suspecting his intention, refused to accommodate him. He then left and the proprietors of the hotel informed Sergt. Ferris, of the Nineteenth Sub-Precinct, who took charge of the young girl and yesterday took her to Head-quarters where she was placed in charge of Mrs. Webb, the matron. The girl is very pretty and of very engaging manners. She states that she has neither father nor mother, and about two years ago was sent with her brother to the Bennington Home, of Bennington, Vt. After remaining there a short time she was taken into the family of Dr. Potter, of Bennington, who was her maternal uncle, but the illtreatment received at the hands of Mrs. Potter drove her from the house, and with $3 dollars which she had saved during her sojourn with her uncle, she started for New-York in search of an aunt named Mrs. Louisa Comstock. Her relatives will be communicated with, and in the meantime she will remain in charge of the Police.

THE COMING ELECTION.

GENERAL ORDER OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE—INSTRUCTIONS TO THE CAPTAINS OF THE VARIOUS PRECINCTS.

The following general order in reference to the duties of the Police on election day was promulgated by acting Superintendent Dilks yesterday and forwarded to the Captain of each precinct:

NEW-YORK, Nov. 2, 1876.

Tuesday, the 7th day of November inst., is assigned for holding an election in the City of New-York. The polls of election are required by law to be opened at 6 A. M. and closed at 4 P. M. On that day you will order the whole of your command on duty. Except those who are specially detailed by the Superintendent for that day, excuse no member of your command who is able to do patrol duty. You will detail two members of your force to do duty at each of the polling-places from 6 o'clock A. M. until the completion of the canvassing of votes at evening, with such tours of duty and relief as you shall deem proper. You will instruct the members of your force to keep order in the streets, and especially in the vicinity of the polls and about the election booths or boxes; to promptly arrest all persons violating the provisions of the Election law, and charge them with the offense committed: to enforce the observance of the provisions of the Excise law, prohibiting the "selling or giving away of intoxicating liquors," on the day "when any election is held," within a quarter of a mile of the place where the election is held. You will see that your telegraph instrument is in order and in charge of a Sergeant fully competent to work it from 6 A. M. until the completion of the canvass.

In case you require assistance on election day, call on the adjoining precincts for their reserve, and furnish the required aid when called on by adjoining precincts, if you can spare the force; and if the disorder assumes a serious aspect, telegraph to this office. You will see that the ballot-boxes, locks, and keys are in order, the ballot-boxes marked or labeled as required, and properly distributed to the several polling places in your precinct, and delivered to the inspectors of election at 6 o'clock on the morning of election day. You will notify this office promptly of the absence of Inspectors of Election or Poll Clerks from the polling places in your precinct. You will instruct the members of your force to protect all persons who may be legally acting in an orderly manner as challengers at any poll of election within your precinct, and to prevent the erection of, and to remove if erected, any box, booth, or structure for distributing ballots within 150 feet of any polling place.

Your attention is particularly called to Section 47 of the Election laws of 1872, which provides, that: "Each candidate for any office to be filled at the election, may, by certificate in writing, signed by him, designate one person for each election district in which he is a candidate, to be present at the canvass of the ballots containing the names of the persons designated for that office. The Inspectors of Election and the Police or other officers attending at such election district specified in said certificate, shall make a passage for such person to the said Inspectors, and the said Inspectors shall permit him to be present at the canvass of all the ballots in the box containing the ballots for the office specified in the said certificate, and so near to them that he can see that such canvass and the statement required of the votes found in each box, are correctly made. And no Inspector of Election or Board of Inspectors, or Police, or other officer, shall allow such person to be molested or removed during the canvass of such ballots, or until such statement has been made, completed and signed, unless he shall be personally guilty of fraudulent or disorderly conduct."

Inspectors of Election are now by law, canvassers of the votes cast at elections. You will therefore, under all circumstances, protect them in the undisturbed possession of the ballot-boxes, and repress all improper interference with them while canvassing the votes and completing the canvass. The United States Supervisors of Election have also the (section 5) right to be present at all times after the polls are opened until the canvass be wholly completed and the proper returns made; and to personally scrutinize, count, and canvass each and every ballot cast in his or their respective election districts for Representatives in Congress, whatever may be the indorsement on said ballot, or in whatever box it may have been placed or be found, "to the end (as the act of Congress declares) that each candidate for the office of Representative in Congress shall obtain the benefit of every vote for him cast."

When the canvass has been completed, you will take charge of the ballot-boxes and keys, and return them to the Station-house.

This order to be read from the desk at each platoon muster for three successive days.

FRAUDULENT NATURALIZATION.

Martin Ballinger and Martin Powers were arrested at Yonkers late on Wednesday evening by Deputy Marshals Newcome and J. Harris, assisted by Roundsman McLaughlin, of the Yonkers Police, on charges of fraudulent naturalization. They were each held in $5,000 bail by United States Commissioner Davenport, which was furnished. A third arrest was made at the same time, but this person proving that a mistake had been made as to his identity, he was discharged.

TAMMANY'S LAST PARADE.

A DEMONSTRATION FOR TILDEN.

ONE OF THE OLD TWEED PAGEANTS PARTIALLY REVIVED—THE PROCESSION WITH A LITTLE ARMY OF BOYS—MEETINGS AT AND AROUND TAMMANY HALL—JOHN KELLY'S COUNTY TICKET INDORSED.

The Tammany demonstration last night in the interest of Samuel J. Tilden presented a fair reminder of the peculiar pageants which greeted her candidates in the days of the Ring. Its main feature was a procession, which was organized by an army of candidates for office who have just received the "regular" nominations. With a keen eye to their prospects they had banners and transparencies bearing their names painted by local artists, and their supporters marched behind them, apparently unmindful of the devotional duty they owed to "Uncle" Samuel. Every district organization founded by a politician had his name blazoned on canvas, and the object of his choice for some office inscribed on the other side. There was a very large number of boys in the procession, a fact which Mr. Tilden himself noticed while reviewing the ranks as they passed before him from the stand opposite the Everett House. At one time a full battalion of lads—some of them ragged—marched in the wake of the Twenty-third Ward Club, and the Governor noticed them. They were followed by the First Assembly District Association, some of whose members carried small transparencies, bearing the inscription, "Nick Muller" on deck, while others bore miniature banners with the words, "We are all voters." Immediately behind the latter, a number of boys marched, and cheered Mr. Tilden. The Governor looked at them, but did not return their salute. In a word, the procession was identical with those which marked the Tweed ones in 1869 and 1870, except so far as numbers—in which the latter was greatly superior. The same features marked it. The boats, goddesses of liberty, the memorial anvils, the mounted ward leaders and general politicians, the clubs, the factions—all that made up Tweed's famous processions—formed the elements of the one last night in honor of Tilden. Some incidents of a significant, if not ludicrous, character occurred on the stand assigned to Mr. Tilden. Near him stood ex-Judge James C. Spencer, a well-known candidate for office. Mr. Spencer, as each organization passed, waved a handsome baton before them, in token of his pleasure, before they had reached the point where Mr. Tilden stood, thus obtaining a marked advantage over the Governor, who bowed occasionally in vain.

Mr. Spencer also addressed himself several times to Mr. Tilden, and passed eulogistic comments on the procession, but the Governor apparently either did not hear or heed him.

The principal meeting, which was held in Tammany Hall, was addressed by Senator Doolittle, of Wisconsin. The procession and the meetings are described below.

THE PROCESSION.

The second Tammany procession took place last evening. There were in the neighborhood of twelve thousand men in line, and the procession occupied nearly three hours in passing the reviewing stand in Union square. The formation took place in Fifth avenue, and the several streets crossing that thoroughfare, from Eighth to Twenty-fourth streets. Commissioner Thomas Brennan was the Grand Marshal and Col. E. L. Gaul acted as chief of staff. At 8:30 o'clock the head of the procession started from Washington square, and took up a route through Fifth avenue to Twenty-third street, thence to Second avenue, down to Fourteenth street, and through Fourth avenue to the plaza, where the reviewing stand had been erected. Upon the stand were Gov. Tilden, Lieut. Gov. Dorsheimer, President Lewis, of the Board of Aldermen, and many others. Capt. Williams had charge of the Police, and the latter performed their arduous duties of keeping back several thousand people very well. Capt. Williams, however, exhibited a characteristic amount of impertinence in flatly refusing to allow a TIMES reporter admittance to the grand stand. Through the courtesy of Gen. Smith, however, the reporter was enabled to review the procession from the "Cottage," on the opposite side. The procession commenced passing the reviewing stand at 9:30 o'clock. The Grand Marshal and staff of thirty assistants, all mounted, led the way, followed by the various delegations from the First Assembly District, in white capes and red shakos. This was followed by a large delegation from Jersey City in blue uniforms, carrying torches, after which came the organizations from the several districts, although not in numerical order. The band of each organization wheeled out opposite the reviewing stand, and remained playing until the organization to which it was attached had passed, when it resumed its place in line, according to the United States army tactics. It was amusing to notice that nearly every band played the sterling air, "Hold the Fort," as it reached the reviewing stand, and thus there was an odor of piety thrown over the ceremony, strangely at variance with the usual programme of the Tammany Democracy. The time consumed in the passage was much longer than was necessary, for several reasons: the principal one being, that there seemed to have been a previous understanding that each carriage containing politicians, should halt opposite the reviewing stand. And that this might appear to be purely accidental, in each case, the organization immediately preceding the distinguished Tammanyites, invariably become entangled at the precise moment necessary. Then, some of the associations, notably those of the First Assembly District, were strung out to an unnecessary length, marching in columns of ten and fifteen, when a good square body might have been formed by equalizing in military order, with twenty files front. Some of the features of the procession were very pretty, and others were decidedly ludicrous. Several ships were in line, manned with sailors in the traditional costumes, while the coxswain of one of the boats was a well-known ward politician, who was engaged in distributing tracts from the Liberty street bureau along the line. A black-smith's shop with forge in full operation; a cooper's shop; several lager beer wagons: three independent fire companies, and a steam engine on wheels, drawn by the William Long Association. The wagon bore the legend, "One more pull and the Custom-house is ours." Among the transparencies was one bearing on one side, "Tilden's Gibraltar," on the other "Delano C. Calvin for Surrogate." Wagons in feeble imitation of Barnum's coaches bore goddesses of Liberty and other characters only known to the Democracy, in its processions. A staunch Republican, carrying a broom reversed, was one of the amusing features of the procession. He followed one of the bands, and drew forth great applause all along the line. The broom was subsequently presented to the City department of THE TIMES.

THE MEETING AT TAMMANY HALL.

In point of numbers the mass-meeting within Tammany Hall was a failure. Up to the time of the opening the gallery presented a beggarly array of empty benches, and the floor was comparatively empty. The applause which greeted John Kelly as he called the meeting to order attracted quite a large number of persons from the street, and quite a large audience was present during Senator Doolittle's remarks, but the hall was again almost emptied as the approaching procession was heard, and continued so until the close. In calling the meeting to order, Mr. Kelly congratulated those present upon the great success attending the celebration of the evening, strong evidence that old Tammany was ever true to her principles as a Democratic organization. He said he wished at once to banish an erroneous idea that seemed prevalent that this organization would not be true to the nominee of the party. Tammany Hall had never been known to prove treacherous to the Democratic Party, and would not now. He concluded with calling attention to the nominees of the party, and claiming that the demonstration of the evening gave proof that the City would give a majority of 55,000 to 60,000 for them. He then introduced Augustus Schell, as Chairman of the meeting, who followed in a few remarks of congratulation. After the reading of a long list of Vice Presidents and Secretaries, Major William H. Quincy read the declaration of the meeting, ratifying the nominations and the platform, added to which was a protest against the order sending troops to the Southern States, denouncing it as a treasonable crime against our own Government.

Following the adoption of this declaration, Senator James R. Doolittle, of Wisconsin, was introduced. He said he always felt a pride in addressing the citizens of New-York, but never to such an extent as when his voice was raised to plead for Union in the great Democratic Party, in order to bring once more peace, union, and constitutional liberty to this country. He said the foremost question in this campaign was whether we should have peace in substance as well as in name between the North and South; whether friendship or enmity; or whether they are to remain forever in the relative position of the conqueror to the vanquished. What with military despotism, carpet-bag robbery, sectional hate and vassalage everywhere prevalent, to a stranger it would readily seem doubtful whether the sections were at peace or at war. Another question in the canvass was what causes and what could cure the hard times pressing on the American people. First among the causes was the impoverishment of the South, not only during the war, but during the eleven long years of pretended peace, for during this latter time, owing to sectional hate and robbery, they have been unable to turn to advantage the rich commodities of that section. Another occasion of the hard times was that the ordinary net expenditures of the Federal Government were enough to consume the net average earnings of the people of the country, not including the extraordinary expenditures. Experiments had been tried in Massachusetts, where labor was looked upon as well paid for, and figures showed that the great mass of our people were growing poorer. The tax upon them was not a direct one, but the Government taxed them on their consumption. The tax was hid in the price, and thus every merchant was a tax-gatherer. The people in this country were as much taxed as the people of England after the war with Napoleon. When they took possession of the Presidential chair next March, as they surely would, President Tilden would enforce retrenchment and reform as he had pledged himself, and notwithstanding the Senate might be against him, they would not dare to resist the judgment of the American people, which was for reform. He next spoke of the manner in which Gov. Tilden had gained prominence in the eyes of the people, and spoke confidently of his election to the Presidential chair.

Among the other speakers of the evening were Hon. Mr. Sayler, member of Congress from Ohio; Hon. Daniel B. Lucas, of West Virginia; Congressman O'Brien, of Maryland, and Congressman Rogers, of Tennessee.

AT THE BROADWAY STAND.

At the stand in front of Lafayette's statue between three and four hundred persons assembled to listen to the speaking, the great mass who congregated in that vicinity preferring to stand aloof and view the procession. No enthusiasm whatever was displayed among the listeners, and Mr. Algernon S. Sullivan's constant appeals to the speakers alongside of whom he stood (he presided at this stand,) to "wake 'em up," and "make them shout," were of no avail. Several times cheers for Tilden and Hendricks were called for, and Mr. Sullivan waved his hat high in the air and yelled "hip!" "hip!" but it was the feeblest possible kind of a cheer that answered him. The first speaker was Mr. Sullivan himself. He had carefully prepared his remarks beforehand, and had them printed for distribution among the members of the press, but he did not like to read them off, and as his memory seemed somewhat treacherous, he failed to "speak his piece" properly. He however called upon the soldiers in South Carolina to pause before it was too late—to keep away from the ballot box and thus allow the "Shot-gun and Rifle Clubs to vote with the colored people for Hampton and Tilden." After his speech he requested three cheers for the rebel cavalry General, who is now asking the ballots of South Carolinians, and it must be admitted that the cheers then given were the most hearty of any heard during the evening. The speakers who followed Mr. Sullivan were a Mr. O'Farrell, who spoke partly in Spanish, although there was not a Spaniard within hearing of his voice, William McClelland, who spoke in French to a audience composed almost exclusively of sons of the Emerald Isle, and most of whom turned to look at the procession until he had concluded, Charles H. Winfield, Mr. Wheaton, Mr. Donnelly, and two or three others. Early in the evening the reporters were "buttonholed" by one or more of those who intended to speak, and urgently requested to "take a few points" of what it was proposed to say, and, thereupon, the speakers proceeded to gesticulate in the wildest manner imaginable, and some of them waxed exceedingly eloquent—especially with their arms—before the terrified reporters could escape. This was a lesson to the scribes, not one of whom dared to exhibit a note-book or pencil again during the evening, for fear of exciting another whirlwind of "eloquent arms and legs," during which they feared, and not without reason, that they would be talked to death.

AT STAND NO. 1.

E. M. Plum called the meeting to order at Stand No. 1, at Irving place, and nominated Menzo Diefendorf as Chairman, who introduced Littleton G. Garrittson as a gentleman competent to discuss the issues of the campaign. Mr. Garrittson said that reform was the shibboleth of the Democratic Party. The people required a purer form of government, an impartial administration of the laws, and equal rights to all. Corruption, it was predicted, would undermine the foundations of the Republic; but he, the speaker, had no such apprehensions. He had faith in the intelligence and patriotism of the people. American citizens would assert their rights next Tuesday, and would place in power the Democratic Party. Citizens of the Empire State should extend the hand of fellowship and love to their fellow-citizens of the South. They should pledge themselves in the cause of the Union, and the Constitution—bury forever the bloody shirt, and over its grave plant the olive branch of peace. Party passion and sectional hate should not enter into the canvass, but rather love and charity should characterize their deliberations, until Tilden and Hendricks were triumphantly elected. Dr. P. J. Hamilton Williams, Capt. Hugh Coleman, William C. Grover, and William Law also addressed the assembly, and used about the same arguments to prove that the country was on the brink of destruction and would assuredly be destroyed if Mr. Tilden was not elected President.

THE GERMAN AND CUBAN STANDS.

A platform was erected on the vacant piece of ground opposite Tammany Hall, and from it a large crowd was addressed in German by Messrs. F. B. Eureng (President), Germain Hanschel, Julius Korn, Meyer Betzel, Dr. Birkman, Dr. Frich, and others. The Cubans connected with Tammany held a meeting opposite Irving place, and, among others, the following gentlemen addressed the crowd: Gen. M'Mahon, A. S. Sullivan, Dr. Galves, Dr. Agramonte, and M. P. Desvernine. The stand was plastered over with stirring mottoes like these: "Tammany's Welcome to Cuba," "Samuel J. Tilden stands where he always stood for the freedom of Cuba," "The Democracy stands where it always stood, for the freedom of Cuba." It was a funny sight, that of a dozen stalwart Irishmen complacently smoking clay pipes and reviewing the procession from this platform. The bystanders jeered at this and said they were "Cork and Limerick Cubans."

LOSSES BY FIRE.

A large warehouse in the rear of the drug store of A. A. Millier, No. 711 Washington avenue, St. Louis, containing oils and varnish, caught fire between 4 and 5 o'clock last evening, and was totally destroyed. The stock and building, valued at $25,000, were insured for $18,000, as follows: Atlas, of Hartford, $1,000; Globe, of Boston, $1,000; St. Joseph Fire and Marine, of St. Joseph, Mo., $1,000; Mississippi Valley of Memphis, $1,000; Richmond Fire Association, $1,250; Reading, Pennsylvania, $1,250; Boatman's, of Pennsylvania, $2,500; Pennsylvania, of Pennsylvania, $1,250; Insurance Company of the State of Tennessee, $1,250; Trade, of New-Jersey, $1,250; German, of Buffalo, $1,250; Howard, of New-York, $1,500; Fame, of Pennsylvania, $2,500.

The fire at Grenada, Miss., Wednesday morning, originated in the grocery store of L. Myersberg, on Green street. There was a strong wind blowing at the time, causing the flames to spread over a row of small frame buildings, and destroying in their course Miss Huffington's millinery store, N. C. Snyder's bank, and George Gulloday's grocery store, after which it crossed the street and consumed the marble corner, W. C. McLean's law office and residence, and the Republican newspaper office. The total loss will exceed $35,000, with only about $1,500 insurance.

The barns and outbuildings belonging to C. W. Pierce, of Boston, at Sunnyside, Vt., were destroyed by fire yesterday, together with 400 tons of hay, oats, &c. The loss is over $30,000, partially insured. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

The glove factory of H. D. Simpson, of Chatham Village, N. Y., was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The amount of the loss has not yet been ascertained. The building was insured for $500, and the stock and machinery for $15,000.

Shortly before 8 o'clock last evening a fire occurred on the fourth floor of the five-story and attic building, Nos. 80 and 82 Greene street, occupied by Marks Brothers, cap manufacturers, resulting in $2,000 damage to building and contents.

Three ice-houses belonging to George Lay, and several stables and outbuildings, were destroyed by fire in Carondelet, Mo., yesterday afternoon. The loss is estimated at $20,000; insurance, $4,000, in a local company.

CANAL-BOAT LITIGATION.

The case of John G. White et al. against the Swift-Sure Transportation Company, which was commenced in the Circuit Court yesterday, is of considerable importance and interest. The facts alleged show that the plaintiffs were owners of the canal-boat Theodore Irwin, which, on the 3d of July, 1874, was loaded with a cargo of barley-malt consigned to the firm of John G. White & Co., of Philadelphia. The defendants were the owners of the propeller Anthracite, and on the day mentioned, as the plaintiffs charge, wrongfully, carelessly, and negligently ran said propeller against the canal boat, at or near Bound Brook, causing the canal boat to sink, destroying a large portion of the barley-malt and damaging the canal-boat. The firm of John G. White & Co., of Philadelphia, have assigned all of their right and title to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs claim damages in the sum of $15,839 74, with interest from Sept. 1, 1874, besides the costs of the action. The defense is substantially a general denial and an allegation of negligence on the part of the plaintiffs.

A GUNPOWDER PLOT.

RONDOUT, Nov. 2.—The entire front of the residence of Augustus Luppies in this city was blown out this morning at 3 o'clock by a charge of powder which had been placed in a window by some malicious person. A fuse was found leading to the sidewalk, the same having been employed to fire the charge. The building was shattered and furniture damaged. Mr. Luppies, his wife, and three daughters were sleeping in the upper part of the house. Luppies made complaint against a house of ill-fame, and suspicions point in that direction, the motive of the act seemingly having been revenge, with the intention to destroy the entire family; but happily the house only was damaged. The inmates of the bawdy house have been arrested, but the proprietor, named Keyser, is away from town.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

COACHING, with Anecdotes of the Road. By LORD WILLIAM PITT LENNOX, author of "Celebrities I Have Known," &c. Dedicated to his Grace the Duke of Beaufort, V. C. President, and the other members of the Coaching Club. London: HURST & BLACKETT. New-York: BRENTANO, Union square. 1876.

The coaching clubs of London and New-York are essentially different in their origin and uses. Those of London are a vestige of an old system, and they exist only for the recreation of their members and their friends. That of New-York is an imitation of its prototype, but with a higher mission. It serves, like the others, to gratify the pleasures of those immediately interested in it, but, if used aright, it should also serve as a model in the art of driving. Any one who will take the trouble to notice the drivers of horses in carriages—private as well as public—in this City, will soon discern the extreme scarcity of coachmen who drive even moderately well. Some years ago the London Punch caricatured the Frenchmen's style of driving. That was when Paris first began its initiation into Le Sport, and when the great ambition of a fashionable Parisian was to imitate as far as possible the sporting world of England. But the style which Punch ridiculed was almost exactly that which prevails here now; and which the members of the coaching club must seek to abolish if artistic and scientific driving, as well as a due regard for the horses' mouths, are any part of their ambition.

It is necessary to allude to this lest readers should be disappointed in the book under notice, for it is written purely from an English point of view; yet although it does not touch upon some of those peculiarities which an American writer upon the same subject should refer to, it is a work of great interest, very readable, very amusing, and one which nobody can fail to enjoy.

Persons who carry their memories back even forty years, and who were familiar with England at that time, can remember when the old stage-coach system was in full operation. But the author of this volume is able to go back to the beginning of the century. His reminiscences, therefore, must be of no ordinary kind. Lord Lennox is the son of the fourth Duke of Richmond. His life began in the last century. He is a godson of William Pitt. He served on the staff of Wellington during the war against Napoleon, and retired from the Army after a period of arduous service, before the generation which has now passed the middle age of life was born. Nor are his literary experience and abilities inferior in any degree to the opportunites which so long a career has afforded; and we find him not only telling anecdotes of incidents which occurred half a century and more ago, but telling them with all the vigor of a practiced and accomplished writer.

He takes a comprehensive survey of his subject, beginning with the earliest periods of coaching, going back for a moment even to Pelops and Hippolytus. Modern coaching began about three hundred years back, when coaches were probably first introduced into England by Fitz Allan, Earl of Arundel. Near the end of the seventeenth century, however, there were only six stage-coaches in the country, and these and the new system were looked upon with so much alarm that a pamphlet was published urging their suppression, on the ground that they induced men to go to London when there was no absolute necessity, and that they operated as temptations also to their wives to visit the Metropolis and to get into all sorts of extravagances, besides leading them into habits of idleness and love of pleasure, which unsettled them ever after. But at that time roads were little better than beaten tracks. A coach for passengers was established between Glasgow and Edinburgh, which, drawn by six horses, accomplished the journey to and fro in nothing less than six days. And when, at a later period, it was proposed to establish what was called a flying coach, to perform the journey between London and Oxford, a distance of about fifty-four miles, between sunrise and sunset, the project was regarded as "a daring innovation." Among the arguments used against the scheme are some that are not a little curious. It was urged that it would be fatal to the breed of horses, and to "the noble art of horsemanship;" that the Thames, which had been a nursery for seamen, would be superseded as a highway of traffic; that saddlers and farriers would be ruined, and that many inns would be deserted. It was likewise argued that the coaches would be too hot in Summer and too cold in Winter; that passengers would be annoyed by invalids and children; that they would sometimes reach their destination too late for supper, and that they would start at an hour when it would be impossible to get breakfast. Petitions against them were presented to the King in Council by several of the London companies, and also from provincial towns and County Justices, and it was urged that if they could not be abolished, they should not be allowed to start oftener than once a week, nor go more than thirty miles a day, nor be drawn by more than four horses.

It appears not to be known when the modern stage-coach first made its appearance. Within the recollection of Lord Lennox it was considered dangerous to mount the top of one. But says our author:

"None except those who have been the victims to the misery of inside baths can imagine the wretchedness of them—a coach licensed to carry six inside,—for so small was the space, so low was the roof, that the legs of the inmates were cramped and their backs doubled up. Then the atmosphere was most oppressive—forty, sometimes fifty stone of human beings huddled together, with both windows up. Again, the occupants occasionally a fat nurse and a squalling baby; a farmer, rude in health and manners; a painted old Jezebel, redolent of macassar-oil and patchwork; a fledgling dandy, strong of musk; a bloated publican, on the verge of delirium tremens; a snuffy old maid, whose nasal organ was so supplied with 'lundy-foot' that it set her companions sneezing immediately. Then the inside passengers were to be fed, and a strong odor of cheese, apples, oranges, cakes, brandy, rum, gin, and beer, prevailed everywhere."

Experiences of a like kind are still to be had in America, though they are fast passing away or becoming modified, and in England they are to be found no longer. But there the slowness of traveling in olden days must have added to the miseries of the inside passengers. Lord Lennox remembers the time when coaches left London for Brighthelmstone, now called Brighton, three times a week only, and took two days for the journey. Now it is done in an hour and thirteen minutes. Eighty years ago the stage between London and Glasgow was furnished with six broad wheels for safety, and was three weeks on the road. But improvement was rapid, and from 1825 to the introduction of railroads was the brightest period of coaching travel. With better coaches and fast horses, often thoroughbred, the roads were improved, and, although not presenting the hard and level surfaces to be met with everywhere in England now, they were very well suited to the needs of the time. In 1833 the distance between London and Shrewsbury, (154 miles,) Exeter, (171 miles,) and Manchester, (187 miles,) was done in a day, and twelve miles an hour, including stoppages, was a common rate of travel. The number of horses to each coach was about one to every mile of road, at an average price in those times of £23, which is about one-half of the present price for the same kind of animal. The average period of each horse's service was four years.

Lord Lennox devotes considerable space to recounting the danger, and mentioning the details of several accidents, from coaching in those days, when danger was very far greater than it is in travelling by steam. Some of these descriptions are very remarkable, but we must pass them over, with one exception. Many well-meaning people nowadays decry all kinds of manly sport, where either physical exertion or danger of any kind is an element. Fox-hunting has been condemned by these amiable people, on account not only of the unpleasant circumstances with which it possibly surrounds the fox, but also because it "is cruel to that noblest of animals, the horse." Fox-hunters know better than this. No man has for any length of time hunted with an English pack of hounds without becoming a witness to the spirit and enjoyment with which a good horse enters into the sport. Casual fox-hunters who look more after gates and bridges than after the hounds, we do not take into consideration. But as the amiable people referred to never believe the testimony of a fox-hunter in this particular, and never examine the subject for themselves, we may commend to them the following:

"In the month of February, 1807, as the Liverpool mail coach was changing horses at the inn at Monk's Heath, between Coryleton and Newcastle-under-Lyne, the horses which had performed the stage from Coryleton having just been taken off and separated, hearing Sir Peter Warburton's fox hounds in full cry, immediately started after them with their harness on, and kept up the chase to the last. One of them, a blood mare, kept the track with the whipper-in, and gallantly followed him for about two hours, over every leap he took, until the fox, who was a cowardly rogue, had led them round in a ring fence and ran to ground. The sportsmen who witnessed the feats of this gallant animal were Sir Harry Mainwaring, Messrs. Cholmondeley, Layford, Brooke, Edwin Corbett, Davenport, Townsend, Pickford, &c. These spirited horses were led back to the inn at Monk's Heath, and performed their stage back to Coryleton the same evening, apparently in higher spirits for having had a gallop with the hounds."

The fact is, there is more cruelty in setting a couple of poor animals to drag a loaded street car six or eight miles, than there is in the hunting field in a whole season; but this, the amiable people aforesaid, being car-riders and not fox-hunters, cannot perceive.

Out of the rich resources at the disposal of the author of this volume, we wish he had given us more of his own Irish experiences, instead of quoting from Mrs. S. C. Hall, in the amusing chapter on Irish travel. We wish, too, he had described, as he so well knows how, and as so few now can do, the scenes which forty years ago were to be witnessed every evening at such places as the Angel and Peacock Inns at Islington, the rendezvous for all the coaches by the great North Road; or the Elephant and Castle on the Surrey side, and other similar places. The arrival and departure of the mail and other coaches at the old Peacock was a sight almost unique even then, and one which never can be seen again, besides, so far as we know, never having been adequately described. But he has sketched, with vivid truthfulness, the scene at the "White Horse Cellar" Piccadilly, which, although different in many respects from the other, and wanting in some of the most exciting effects, is nevertheless worth preserving here:

"What a confusion—what a babel of tongues! The tumult, the noise, was worth the pen of a Boz, or the pencil of a Cruikshank. People hurrying hither and thither, some who had come too soon; others too late. There were carriages, hackney coaches, vans, carts, and barrows; porters jostling, touters swearing, cads elbowing, coachmen wrangling, passengers grumbling, men pushing, women scolding. Trunks, portmanteaus, hat-boxes, band-boxes, strewed the pavement; orange merchants, cigar merchants, umbrella merchants, dog merchants, sponge merchants, proclaiming the superiority of their various wares; pocket knives with ten blades, a cork screw, button hook, punch, picker, lancet, gimlet, jimscrew and saw; trouser straps, four pair a shilling; silver watch-guards, cheap, cheap, very cheap; patent pens and (o) ever-pointed pencils, twelve a shilling; bandana handkerchiefs, that had never seen foreign parts, 'to be given away for an old hat;' London sparrows, as the coachmakers would say, 'yellow bodies,' were passed off as canaries; ill-shaven curs painted, powdered, and decked with blue ribbons assumed the form of French poodles, which did everything but speak; member of the Society for the Diffusion of Knowledge hawking literature at the lowest rate imaginable—'H'annuals at the small charge of one shilling; the h'engravings, to h'any h'amateur worth double the money; the 'Prophetic Almanac,' neatly bound, one penny; a yard and a half of songs for a halfpenny, and Larks in London, pictorially illustrated, one shilling.

"The remainder of the group consisted of perambulating piemen, coachmen out of place, country clods, town cads—gaping, talking, wondering; the din occasionally interrupted by a street serenade, the tramping of cattle or the music of a guard's horn."

But all these scenes are past and can never return. There are still several four-horse coaches out of London, and the number is annually on the increase. The old "White Horse Cellar," too, is still a starting-place, but the excitement of former times has ceased, and coaching as it was will never be resuscitated. Lord Lennox tells us that it was in 1830 that he first saw a steam coach in the streets of London, and it was perfectly successful in every respect. There is much reason for wonder why this system has not been adopted. Steam for street cars on tramways, too, has been introduced successfully both in England and Belgium, and probably the next half century may witness as great a change in street travel in this particular as the last has witnessed in other directions. One thing is certain that we in this country when we note what has been done in Europe in this way, cannot forego the idea that we are not yet up to the level of the time.

We do not pretend to notice anything like a full proportion of the varied and interesting items to be found in this volume. It not only overflows with anecdotes, descriptions, reminiscences, and historical data, but contains notes of advice in matters upon which the author is entitled to speak with authority; and all is rendered in that genial style which marks at once the polished gentleman, the man of the world, and the writer whose heart is with his subject. The reader finds himself at the outset in the presence of a jovial as well as a clever companion, and if he do not accompany him to the end of his journey he must be a difficult reader to please.

We have not space to do justice to the book or to notice all the points that we have marked; but there is one which cannot well be passed by—the bearing-rein has been a subject among horsemen for many years. Many of our best horsemen in England have given up both bearing-rein and blinkers; or "check-rein" and "blinders," as some people absurdly call them. Lord Lennox does not approve of the abolition of the bearing-rein, and he strangely attributes the proposal for its abolition to this country. If he would come to New-York, and see the way in which horses' heads are tied up here, he would have to confess that he never saw anything like it in his own country. The fashion which he condemns is not an American fashion; and while we do not agree with him in all the views he expresses on the subject, it will be admitted that some of his reasons for a discretionary use of the bearing-rein are sound. The plan he proposes is the adoption of a bearing-rein with an elastic end to it, so that horses that do not require having their heads held well up would not be deprived of the ornament of such a rein, while with horses that do require it, if the elastic be sufficiently strong, "it would aid them in the ease of a trip or stumble." In these last words, however, which we quote, lies much of the gist of the question, many horsemen averring not only that the bearing-rein is a cruel infliction, but that in case of a stumble it is an obstacle to the animal's recovery rather than an assistance. With much good reason, Lord Lennox condemns the custom prevalent with some drivers—though not now, we believe, with men who know their business—of driving with wheel-reins home. What he would say to the equally barbarous fashion of looped reins can only be surmised.

At present there are two driving clubs in London, the Coaching Club and the Four-in-Hand Club, successors to the "Whip Club," another driving club of sixty or seventy years ago. The most notable changes that have taken place are in the costume of the members and the form of the coaches. The rules of the Whip Club where, as in its rival, barouche-landaus were used, required that the bodies of the carriages should be yellow and the cattle bright bay, with silver ornaments on the harness and rosettes to the ears. The costume of the drivers consisted of a light drab cloth coat, single breasted, with three tiers of pockets, the skirts reaching to the ankles, and with mother-of-pearl buttons each of the size of a crown piece; waistcoat, blue and yellow stripe, each stripe an inch in depth; corded silk plush breeches, and rosettes at each knee; the boots very short, and finished with broad straps which hung over the tops and down to the ankle; hats three inches and a half deep in the crown only, and the same depth in the brim. Each driver also wore a large bouquet of flowers at the breast. Why did not the members of the New-York Coaching Club give us an exhibition of their prowess this year in a costume of this kind as their tribute to Centennialism? If not picturesque, it would at least have been instructive to the rising generation, and as it does not appear that the rule requiring the horses to be four bright bays was always strictly enforced, the only cost would have been for the costume, which would still have been useful as a legacy to the next Centennial celebration.

But, as Lord Lennox observes, "gentlemen no longer ape the manners or costumes of their coachmen and grooms, but appear as gentlemen should appear." The heavy box-coat has given place to a light-colored dust-coat; the hat is no longer preposterously low; "a neat cut-away olive-brown or blue coat, with club buttons, supersedes the over-pocketed drab coat; web-cut trowsers from Poole's, with varnished boots, take the place of the cord 'inexpressibles' and brown tops; the striped livery-looking waistcoat and gaudy 'bird's-eye' neckcloth are replaced by a plain waistcoat and simple necktie."

Then there is an improvement in coaches, horses, and harness. Showy colors no longer prevail, nor are the "drags" emblazoned with arms like the Lord Mayor's carriage. The horses, too, are thoroughbred, and the harness neat and plain. Perfection in all the appointments is now the aim, and show and glitter are abandoned.

But we must here resist the temptation, and stop. The man who does not read any of this book for himself will miss a pleasant treat, and he who, reading, does not enjoy it, must be incapable of appreciating a good thing.

—Pure and high-toned criticism will be materially advanced by the republication of Richard Holt Hutton's Literary Essays, brought out in England in 1871, and now issued here by J. H. Coates & Co. Mr. Hutton, as editor of the Spectator, is one of the strongest and most thoughtful writers connected with the English press. His only rivals in the field of philosophical and literary criticism are John Morley and Leslie Stephen, and he is only different from, if not superior to, either of them in the rightness of tone which he always imparts to his literary work.

—Lockwood, Brooks & Co. have in press and will publish about Dec. 1 a volume of sermons by the late Rev. E. H. Sears, D. D., author of The Heart of Christ, and known as the best hymn writer in America. The book will contain discourses on "Elijah," "David," "Pilate," and "Tibni and Omri."

—Hurd & Houghton issue this week from their Riverside Press at Cambridge, De Quincey's Literary Reminiscences, Scott's Old Mortality, Black Dwarf, and Legends of Montrose, and Dickens' Oliver Twist and Christmas Books. The two latter have felicitous introductions by Mr. E. P. Whipple, and will be sure of a large sale during the holiday season.

—The publication of the Social Science papers read at Saratoga, in September, says The Churchman, is soon to be begun. About one-fourth of all that was read is going through the press. The other papers will not be published, excepting magazines and pamphlets, until some time after the annual meeting of the Social Science Association in Boston next January.

—In accordance with the express wishes of the late Dr. Strauss, his friend and co-laborer, Dr. Edward Zeller, of Berlin, has undertaken the task of collecting and re-editing his works, the first volume of which, including his best known writings, has already appeared. His purely literary remains will be first printed, and his older and strictly theological writings will follow.

—The Life of Peace, by Rev. R. C. L. Brown, just published by J. Masters, London, is spoken of as a gem worthy to be ranked with the Imitation of Thomas à Kempis and the Christian Year of John Keble. The latter pages of the book are the last the author ever wrote. Before the proof-sheets had passed through his hands he had himself entered upon the life of peace which he had attempted to describe.

—Two Chinese gentlemen, Li-Hsiao-Chi and Chin-Che-Henen, respectively official writer and interpreter for the Chinese Government, and sent out to make the Governmental report on the Centennial Fair and its wonders, have made a careful study of every department in detail. The result is said to be a very creditable book which they intend to publish in China and scatter broadcast through the Empire.

—Sometimes American news travels to England before it reaches the press in this country. We do not remember to have seen the statement, which is given in the Athenæum of Oct. 14, that the Memoirs of an American Lady, by Mrs. Grant, of Laggan, long out of print, has been reprinted here, with a number of biographical and illustrative notes, and a memoir of Mrs. Grant, by Gen. J. Grant Wilson. Who publishes it?

—The Revue des Deux Mondes for September 1 contains another paper by M. Vacherot on "Modern Science and Final Causes," which sets forth a rather original view of the First Cause as infinite in power, wisdom, and goodness, but not therefore perfect, because perfection is only intelligible in relation to human ideals, which are never realized, and always surpassed as the continued progress of the world compels us to review them.

—Mr. Nathan Appleton, a frequent contributor to the Boston Globe, is engaged, says that paper, on a literary work—a society novel—which has been in his mind for some time. The scene is laid in Colorado, New-York, and Europe. As Mr. Appleton has traveled much, been a keen observer of life and character, and as he wields an easy pen, there is every reason to expect an attractive production. The book, we understand, will be published some time during the Winter.

—Macmillan & Co. will publish shortly a book on The Californians, by Mr. W. M. Fisher, who assisted Mr. H. H. Bancroft for several years in collecting materials for his Native Races of the Pacific States. The volume is divided into ten chapters, dealing respectively with the country, its pioneers, its Spanish inhabitants, its Chinese, its reprobates, its women, its men, its politicians, and its writers. The best chapter is an ardent protest against the religious quackery which is gaining ground in California.

—There has been recently added to the Boston Public Library, says the Advertiser, a document of considerable interest as illustrative of the political history of the city. It is the manuscript of the original call for the famous Faneuil Hall meeting for the preservation of the Union, held Nov. 26, 1850, at which the principal speakers were the late Judge Curtis and Rufus Choate. Appended are 3,856 signatures of citizens of Boston and its vicinity. The roll, which is some six inches thick, was sent to Mr. Webster at Washington, and accompanying it is a letter from him with reference to the meeting.

—G. W Carleton & Co. publish this week Lion Jack; or, How Menageries Are Made, by Mr. P. T. Barnum, the great showman. It gives an insight into the methods used by him in gathering together his wonderful curiosities in natural history. Mr. Barnum estimates that 82,464,000 have entered his different museums, circuses, menageries, and shows of various sorts in this country and in Europe, and the man who has done this is entitled to the privilege of explaining the secret of his success. Mr. Frank Lee Benedict's last novel, 'Twixt Hammer and Anvil, published by the same house, has reached a sixth edition, and a new work from his pen, entitled Madame, is now in press. Mr. Benedict is at present in Spain.

—Mr. Paterson, of Edinburg, makes the important announcement of a library edition of the Works of Robert Burns, in six volumes, uniform with Mr. Van Laun's translation of Molière. The poems and songs, says the Athenæum, will occupy three volumes arranged chronologically; the letters and other prose productions the remaining three. Each piece will be accompanied by a note, stating what is known of the circumstances under which it was written and of the persons and events to which it refers. The original place of publication and some account of the manuscript will be given, and the author's variations will be recorded. Mr. W. Scott Douglass is the editor, and Prof. Nichol, of Glasgow, furnishes an essay on the poet's life, character, and influence. The poet's autobiography contained in his famous letter to Dr. Moore will, in this edition, for the first time be printed in extenso from the original manuscript.

—Hurd & Houghton have in press and will publish in November The Life and Times of William Samuel Johnson, L.L. D., by Rev. Dr. E. E Beardsley, of New-Haven, author of The History of the Episcopal Church in Connecticut and The Life and Correspondence of Dr. Samuel Johnson, the first President of Columbia College. The studies of the life of the father have admirably fitted Dr. Beardsley to write the life of the son, who lived in critical times and had an important share in the formation of our Government. He was a member of the Congress of 1765, convened at New-York to remonstrate against the Stamp Act, and counseled and corresponded with James Otis touching the measures of that body. He was also a member of the convention which framed the Federal Constitution, was first Senator in Congress from Connecticut, and President of Columbia College, New-York; and his life, prepared as this has been, from original documents, is full of interest.

—The writer of a very interesting article on "Philip Gilbert Hammerton," in the November International Review, says that "his general appearance is singularly attractive. In person he is well formed and athletic, with a noble head, regular features, a clear and penetrating eye, and a fine beard, which is worn full. The type of his features is decidedly American rather than English, and his countenance is strongly suggestive of that of George Macdonald, if indeed it cannot be said to resemble the latter." His habits of life are spoken of as "quiet and regular in the extreme. He generally employs the early hours of the morning in literary composition, and reserves several of the best and lightest hours of the day clear for practical art. Toward evening he has another literary sitting, after which he dines with his family. He has wisely given up all literary work at night. Once in a while, for the sake of recreation, he takes a run to Paris, or London, or Switzerland, but even these visits are turned to good account, and amid exercise he picks up a good many grains of knowledge. His Republican sympathies are very strong, and he has watched the political events of Europe and America with profound interest, and a strong faith in the growth of liberal principles and institutions." He is now engaged in writing a Life of Turner, which will be published early next year.

THE REBEL CLAIMS.

VARIOUS ASPECTS OF THE SUBJECT.

SPEECH OF SENATOR JOHN A. LOGAN—THE LOOPHOLE IN GOV. TILDEN'S LETTER.

Gen. John A. Logan addressed a large meeting in Lebanon, Ill., on Friday last, and, speaking of the Southern men in Congress, said:

"They introduced bills in the House for the payment of claims held by traitors to the Government, amounting to $472,000,000, and they introduced general bills declaring that these things should be adjusted by the War Department without the action of Congress, which, if it had passed, would have amounted to upward of two billions dollars. The bills didn't pass, except a few of them. A few were passed to test the Senate. There they fell through. What do they mean by that? We have a law in our statute books authorizing the adjustment of claims for things furnished to the Army by loyal men where they were supplies furnished the Army, or damages done that the laws of nations might allow they are entitled to receive. We have paid a great many of them, some in Kentucky, some in Ohio, to men who were loyal and whose lives were already given for the benefit of the Government. And because we have done this, these rebels claim we would pay such claims as these traitors present. We make a distinction between loyal men and traitors. So far only honest and just claims have been paid. I say that a man that sets his house on fire has no right to be paid for it, and so these traitors have no right to claim pay for the destruction of the property of disloyal men. Why, the Riddell bill and the Merriam bill, as introduced, would have cost the Government almost as much as the whole expense of the war if it had been passed. I have one bill of this kind in my pocket. A man by the name of Sykes presented to the Court of Claims a charge of $3,500 per annum for the rental of ground where the bones of the poor men who were shot and starved to death in Andersonville Prison were buried. And not only that, but he charges for 300,000 feet of lumber, 250,000 brick, and 3,000 cords of wood, the whole amounting to $52,100. The Quartermaster of the Army asserts that the lumber never was used; that the brick never was used, the wood never was used. What, then, is this charge for? It is for the lumber, for the brick, for the wood—the lumber that fenced in our boys when they were starved to death, the bricks that kept them warm, and for nothing else was it used. If these gentlemen don't expect to get these claims passed, why do they present them? Now, do you know how they answer these charges? I presume you do. Gov. Palmer, who was recently—though I have not heard from him for three days, but I guess he is still a Democrat, and one J. L. D. Morrison, in this county; and Gov. Hendricks, in Indiana, took it upon himself, too—they answer these charges in this way. They say Logan introduced a bill once himself. This man Morrison has told that everywhere; this man that you all know, as I do—the less the country knows of him the better the country is off—for the man well knows, when he makes the statement that I introduced a rebel bill in Congress, that he says that which is false in every word and in every way. [Cries of 'Good,' and applause.] What is this bill they talk about? Milton J. Best was a Union man, a loyal man, and an honest man, living at Paducah, Ky. I knew him before the war, through the war, and know him now. We destroyed, during a battle there, all of his property, and forced him to take refuge in our lines to keep from being hanged. The bill was brought up on a report made by Judge Harris, of Wisconsin, supported by John Pratt, of Indiana, because Best was a loyal and honest man, and we had destroyed his property. That is the answer to these charges that they make that the bill was a rebel bill, when they know they tell a falsehood every time they say anything about it. Now then, the day before yesterday a very singular thing occurred in this country. I believe I have never heard of a candidate for Presidency proclaiming to the world what he would veto or what he would not veto until the recent Democratic candidate. [Laughter.] Now, while the Democrats have been asking that their claims be paid, why is it that their candidate for President comes out saying he is opposed to them? Why do they have to do that? If they are not afraid they will pass, why does this man Tilden write a public letter saying he will veto any bills for rebel claims? [Applause.] Well, there is one little piece of information that I would like to give the Democracy. I don't want to dispute with Mr Tilden as to what he will or will not do. I don't know. But I am certain of one thing; I don't think he will ever have the opportunity. [Laughter and applause.] But he fails to say anything in his letter about the character of the man he will appoint on the Court of Claims. There is a Court organized to allow claims for damage done by the Army, called the Court of Claims. One of that court is very old and decrepit, and sufficiently so to authorize his relievement. Who will Mr. Tilden put in his place? The court now stands two Northern and two Southern men. Will he put a Democrat there or a Republican? ['Well put,' and applause.] Now that court can pass upon thousands of claims. Then he fails to say that if a general bill should pass authorizing these claims to be referred to the Secretary of War, that he would veto that. This Riddle claim don't say a word about damage, so far as payment is concerned. It only authorizes the Secretary of War to adjust and pay claims, and that of citizens loyal or disloyal. Now, that bill don't come within the purview of this letter, though it will affect all bills for claims. It is a bill to authorize and organize a department for adjustment of claims, and is a very clever dodge where Mr. Tilden leaves a loop-hole to crawl out. Take it for granted he is honest, doesn't it show a woeful state of facts about the party? If I am right the Democratic Party is all wrong, and you cannot trust them. If I am wrong, how can you trust Mr. Tilden if he becomes President?"

STARTLING PRESENTATION OF LAWS AND DECISIONS—LETTER FROM HON. H. BOARDMAN SMITH.

To the Editor of the Elmira Advertiser:

It can hardly be denied that the Dred Scott decision of the United States Supreme Court (though it be conceded good law) was the serpent's egg out of which was hatched the war of the rebellion. I do not think it is commonly known outside of the legal profession that the present Supreme Court has taken position with reference to rebel claims against the Government hardly less startling and far-reaching in its probable consequences than the Dred Scott decision. That such a position is taken by a Republican Court ought to admonish the people of the North of the difficulties which environ the question of rebel claims, and of the watchfulness which befits their purpose, that these claims shall never be paid. In the pending discussion of this question by the press I have seen no reference to these decisions. Mind, I am not assailing them as unsound law. I am calling the attention of thoughtful men to them. Our impending perils cannot be fully apprehended if they are overlooked.

Section 2 of Article 2 of the Constitution of the United States vests in the President exclusively the power "to grant reprieves and pardon for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment."

After the first election of President Grant, and on the 25th of December, 1868, President Johnson published his fourth proclamation of amnesty and pardon, in these words,—in part:

"Now, therefore, be it known, that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, by virtue of the power and authority in me vested by the Constitution, and, in the name of the sovereign people of the United States, do hereby proclaim and declare, unconditionally and without reservation, to all and to every person, who directly or indirectly participated in the late insurrection or rebellion, a full pardon and amnesty for the offense of treason against the United States, or for adhering to their enemies during the late civil war, with restoration of all rights, privileges and immunities under the Constitution and the laws which have been made in pursuance thereof."

The Court of Claims has no jurisdiction of claims against the United States for property "taken" in the Southern States for the use of the army, unless taken by "contract" with the owner. But it has jurisdiction under the "Captured and Abandoned Property act" for captured and abandoned cotton, &c. Now, by four separate acts of Congress, it has been explicitly enacted that before the claimant can recover he must prove he "has never given any aid or comfort to the present rebellion." [See section 12 of the act of March 3, 1863, Statutes at Large, vol. 12, page 765; section 3 act of March 12, 1863, Statutes at Large, vol. 12, page 820; section 3 act of June 25, 1868, Statutes at Large, vol. 15, page 75; section 1 act of July 12, 1870, Statutes at Large, vol. 16, page 235.]

The provision of these acts requiring proof of loyalty was repealed by the Democratic House last Winter, (so far as the House alone could repeal it,) as the newspapers stated. The act last cited provides, in so many words, that "no pardon or amnesty granted by the President" shall dispense with the required proof of loyalty.

The Court of Claims, in repeated decisions, obeyed this expressed will of Congress. Appeals were taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, which reversed the judgments of the Court of Claims four times in succession, thus opening the vaults of the Treasury to rebel claimants. [See United States vs. Padelford, 9 Wall, 531; United States vs. Klein, 13 Wall, 128; Armstrong vs. The United States, 13 Wall, 154; Pargoud vs. The United States, 13 Wall, 156.]

These decisions settle the question forevermore that there is not, since Johnson's proclamation, a man in this country who, in law, ever was a rebel.

In ex-parte Garland, 4 Wall. 330, the court says (speaking of President Johnson's Proclamation of Amnesty) that "in the eye of the law the offender is as innocent as if he never committed the offense."

The opinions in these cases were written and pronounced in nearly all the cases, if not in every instance, by Chief Justice Chase. Whether they had anything to do with his narrow escape from the Democratic nomination for the Presidency, it does not lie in my way to inquire. The principle decided was resisted, stoutly and with strong logic, by Justices Miller and Bradley. [See 13 Wall, 148.]

Now, as a single specimen brick of what the practical result of these decisions has been, one Andrew Lowe has recovered in the Court of Claims against the United States for cotton stored at Savannah, for running the blockade, $474,685, though it was proved in court that he was commissioner of the Confederate States to negotiate the $15,000,000 Confederate loan—and he has gotten his money. This is one case out of hundreds—perhaps out of a thousand. Are not these things a little startling to men, even who have been accustomed to pooh-pooh the mere suggestion of danger of the payment of rebel claims?

Nor is it necessary that a Democratic Congress should pass bills to allow rebel claims. Laws are already enacted, and now in force, which, construed and administered by Democratic officers, would, under the decisions of the Supreme Court, pass a great part, if not the greater part, of the pending rebel claims.

Let us see: The Court of Claims has jurisdiction of claims arising on contract and under the Captured and Abandoned Property act. The Southern Claims Commission have jurisdiction of claims "for stores or supplies, taken, or furnished during the rebellion, for the use of the army of the United States, in States proclaimed in insurrection against the United States, including the use and loss of vessels or boats while employed in the military service of the United States."

But the Commissioners of Southern claims are required to be satisfied by proof "of the loyalty of the claimant," during the war. Just so, the Court of Claims was required to have proof of the loyalty of the claimant. But the Supreme Court decided that, since President Johnson's proclamation of amnesty, a rebel claimant is a loyal claimant, that "in the eye of the law the offender is as innocent as if he never committed the offense." The Southern Claims Commission, presided over by Judge Aldis, of Vermont, has stood out with inflexible courage against the decisions of the Supreme Court, and allowed no rebel claims. This has been possible only from the fact that no appeal lies from their tribunal, as from the Court of Claims, to the Supreme Court.

Now these Commissioners of Southern Claims are appointed by the President. Let their places be filled with Democrats, who might say, (and with great reason,) "We are bound by the law, as held by the Supreme Court, just as much as if an appeal lay directly from us to that court," and the vaults of the National Treasury are actually in possession of a myriad swarm of rebel claimants. It is poor consolation to say that an award by the Southern Claims Commission, in favor of a rebel claimant, could not be paid without an appropriation by Congress. A refusal to make the appropriation would be rebellion against the Supreme Court. The Southern Claims Commission was not established as a permanent court. It has been continued by several acts of Congress since it was originated in 1871, I think. I have no information that it has been discontinued by the present Congress.

There is a great deal that can be said, in some cases, in favor of paying disloyal claimants, for instance, penniless widows whose crops and last pig were eaten up by the Union Armies. For a generous man to set his face like a flint against all such claims, requires a most stubborn and unbending resolution, and a public opinion, at home, whose utterance has no uncertain sound. Add to the honorable instincts and impulses of a generous heart consideration of the mutual and reciprocal help which members expect from one another, in passing pet measures; the friendly ties of political affiliation; and to all the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the people may have some faint appreciation of the perils which environ them.

Oliver Cromwell made war upon the English courts. The American conscience rebelled against the Dred Scott decision of the Supreme Court. The people of this country will that the suffering Unionists of the South, "faithful amid the faithless found," shall be compensated for property taken for use of our armies. The Supreme Court holds that no distinction can be made between claimants. If the people propose to make a stand against this doctrine of the Supreme Court, they have, like Abraham Lincoln, "a big job on hand." They can't afford to make a mistake just now. To my mind one thing is very clear. Let the Democratic Party win in this fight, and for property taken during the war, Southern Unionists and rebels will both be paid, or neither. Perhaps this is the meaning of Gov. Tilden, who says: "The danger to the National Treasury is not from claims of persons who aided the rebellion, but from claims of persons who were, or pretended to be, loyal," &c. There is no mistaking the thought lying back of that utterance. "Roses for the blue and lilies for the gray." The appropriation bills will be open to both or neither. The people who pay their money will take their choice. H. B. S.

A CURIOUS CASE OF BIGAMY IN FRANCE.

A curious case of bigamy is exercising the minds of men (and women) in the Faubourg St. Denis. The facts are these: Some twelve years ago, a M. Albert P—— set up as a vendor of lemonade at Sens, and soon did a thriving business, with which he might have found it wise to remain content. M. Albert, however, thought that if a pretty woman presided at his counter, he might obtain even more customers than he had already. With this view he married a Mlle. Bertha M——, who had all the necessary qualifications. The plan succeeded admirably; indeed, more than admirably, as M. Albert soon began to think. One bright morning, accordingly, after a stormy interview with his wife, he disappeared, not forgetting to take the cash-box with him. Next day, on the banks of the Yonne, a fisherman found a man's clothes and an empty bottle, together with a letter in which one "Albert P——" declared that he was weary of life. The clothes were identified as those worn by Mme. Bertha's husband, and his disconsolate wife lamented him as lost. After waiting ten long years she married a worthy tradesman of the Faubourg St. Denis, and it was with mingled feelings that she saw her first husband enter the shop a few days since. By way of simplifying matters, the lady shrieked. Number one did likewise, and was soon engaged in a fight, more Gallico, with number two. While they were plucking out each other's hair by handfuls, a posse of guardians of the peace made their appearance, and marched them both off to the police-station. Explanations followed, when the ex-consort avowed that he had shammed suicide. French justice has so far contented itself with drawing up a report on the case.

MOTHER AND CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.

The Iowa City Press, of Oct. 26, says: "Yesterday morning, about 10 o'clock, the house of Silvester Starkweather, of North English, Hinkletown, English Township, Iowa County, was burned. He was at work in the fields a mile and a half from the house, and Mrs. Starkweather was at work in the yard a short distance from the house, when she saw flames breaking forth from the upper windows. Realizing that her children, two little girls, three and five years old, were in the upper rooms, she rushed to the house, and made her way up the narrow stairs, through the stifling smoke and flame. At the head of the stairs she was overcome by the fire and forced back from the children, then in the agonies of a horrible death. Her clothing was burned from her person, even to the shoes on her feet, and she was left almost unrecognizable. Of the bodies of the children the only distinct remains left were the charred fragments of the backbone, about eighteen inches in length. The origin of the fire is not known, but it is supposed to have been caused by the children playing with matches. The unfortunate father and husband bereft of children, wife, property, and almost reason, commands the deepest sympathy and aid of every one. He is a poor, hard-working man who by labor and economy had gathered about him the comforts of a little home. With the house were burned the barn, outbuildings, hay, corn bins, granary, in a word everything he possessed. The loss in money is not learned, nor as to insurance, yet these though severe are nothing to the poor man in comparison with the dreadful taking away of all that made labor easy and life dear to him."

GOV. HARTRANFT'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Oct. 31.

In the name and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, I, John F. Hartranft, Governor of the said Commonwealth:

Notwithstanding the present depression of business and the accompanying distress, the people of the country continue to enjoy manifold blessings, and the more especially in the preservation of their institutions and liberties through the vicissitudes of a century, and in the steadfast faith that the light of God's favor is only temporarily dimmed by the clouds that darken the country; now, therefore, I, John F. Hartranft, Governor of Pennsylvania, do recommend that the good people of this Commonwealth, laying aside all secular occupations, assemble together in their respective places of worship on Thursday, the 30th day of November, 1876, being the same day set apart therefor by the President of the United States, to give thanks to Almighty God for his continued kindness and to merit, by prayer and thankfulness, the fulfillment of all reasonable hopes and the gratification of all just desires.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State at Harrisburg, this 31st day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, and of the Commonwealth the one hundred and first. J. F. HARTRANFT.

By the Governor:
M. S. QUAY, Secretary of the Commonwealth.

DECONSECRATION OF A LONDON CHURCH.

What is called a "deconsecration" service was held in Allhallows Church, Bread street, recently, by order of the Bishop of London, preliminary to the removal of the edifice. This church is one of a large number in the city which were rebuilt after the fire of London by Sir Christopher Wren, and its history is noteworthy from the fact that its Rector in 1555, Rev. Lawrence Saunders, was burned at Coventry for preaching in defense of the doctrines of the Reformation, and that Milton was baptized here in December, 1608. There was a crowded congregation at the service, the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs attending in state, accompanied by one or two aldermen and common councilmen. Bishop Claughton preached the sermon, choosing for a text St. Luke ix. 59: "Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead, but go thou and preach the kingdom of God." While the bishop was ascending the pulpit an elderly person in the aisle near the door called out in a loud tone, "I protest against this service in God's name," but had scarcely finished the sentence ere one of the guardians of the peace appeared on the scene and promptly escorted him to the street.

POOL SELLING FORBIDDEN.

The Baltimore Police Board Tuesday notified Barton & Co., who on Tuesday night sold pools at Barnum's on the Presidential election, that such procedure was contrary to law. Article 35 of the public general laws, title, "Elections," sub-title, "Betting on Elections," sections 46, 47, and 48 say no person shall make any bet or wager on the result of any election to take place in this or any other State, under a penalty of not less than $50 nor more than $500, to be paid to the State for the use of the school fund. Every deposit of money on a wager shall be forfeited to the County Commissioners of a county, or the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore. The pool sellers stated to Marshal Frey that they had no intention of violating the law. No pools were sold Tuesday night.

TILDEN'S PERJURY.

THE GUILTY MAN NOT FIT TO BE A CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

From the Toledo (Ohio) Blade.

Mr. Meyer's—rather, Mr. Tilden's—denial of the legal right of the Government to examine the books of the company might do very well as the technical shift of a sharp attorney, on trial in court, but as argument before the high court of the nation and the jury of seven millions of electors it will not answer. The case now on hearing is, not whether Samuel J. Tilden shall be compelled to make good the amount wrongfully and by fraud withheld from the Government, but whether a man capable of such fraud shall be placed at the head of the Government. The issue is one too grave and far-reaching in its bearings for resort to the petty quibbles and dodges employed by practiced pettifoggers in criminal courts, and whoever employs such shows a consciousness of guilt too plain to need further proof.

From the Albany Times, (Dem.).

Mr. Tilden seems to have been quite in earnest in his desire for "change" from 1863 down to 1872, and later still, if reports speak truthfully; and he having been so swift in the matter of Southern claims to break over his theory as to the futility of "self-imposed restrictions," we do not see how he can safely avoid declaring to the public whether he paid his whole income tax to the Government. To be longer considered as a "reformer" he must at least do this. It is a duty which he owes to the Government that is about to prosecute him, which he owes to his party, and to a great many men in either party who may have desired to vote for him—for a change. As the case now stands, a great many voters are seriously considering the question in connection with his candidacy, and he can set all doubts at rest by a stroke of his pen—above an affidavit of two or three lines.

From the Syracuse Journal.

The burden of proof, unanswered and unanswerable, has been cumulating from the day of Mr. Tilden's nomination until now, to show that in the qualification upon which he based his own claims to the confidence of the American people he is personally utterly deficient, and that his own example and record are the strongest reasons why he should be defeated upon the only issue he was willing to recognize in this campaign.

From the Lancaster (Penn.) Express.

We submit that a man who is thus clearly proved to be guilty of cheating the Government is not a fit person to be intrusted with the administration of that Government. To so intrust him would be setting a dangerous precedent, which we are greatly mistaken if the American people are yet willing to do.

From the Providence Journal.

The members of that class of voters which means to exercise the right of suffrage upon an intelligent and conscientious basis, who have not been hurried away from the serious questions involved by the clamor and diffusion of argument of the campaign, will not fail to recollect that the charge of deliberate fraud upon the Government by Samuel J. Tilden in the matter of return of his income tax has never been satisfactorily answered—answered to the satisfaction, that is to say, of men who were looking simply for the truth, and judging upon ascertained facts in a judicial manner. But the charge is a vital one. Not even the most heated partisan will pretend to say in private conversation, or before a public audience, that a man really guilty of defrauding the Government is a fit man for the Presidential chair.

From the Detroit Post.

We submit, in view of these developments, to all candid voters, whether Samuel J. Tilden is a man fit to be voted for. Would it not be a most discreditable scandal if the people of the United States, after all the talk of the last few years about reform and purity in office, should elect, or even come near electing, a man for President who should be immediately after the election tried and convicted for defrauding the Government, through perjury, and should vote for him in the very face of indisputable proofs of his guilt? At least, let us have an honest man for the high office of President. If this country deliberately votes for, and comes anywhere near electing, a dishonest man for the very highest office there is, what will be thought and said of the loud professions of "reform," and the loud demands for honesty and purity in the Government, with which the ears of the world have been well-nigh deafened of late years?

ENGLISH SEAMANSHIP DEGENERATING.

From the London News.

The Autumn and Winter of 1874-5 were distinguished by an almost unprecedented continuance of heavy gales, and the number of ships lost or damaged in some way within the British seas was 3,590, an increase of 1,787 on the preceding twelve months. These were the casualties which took place within a line which when drawn all round the United Kingdom would pass ten miles outside every headland. The increase in the figures is in a considerable degree due to the stricter record kept of every accident; so that they come nearer to the probable average of loss than the smaller figures of 1873-4. The lives lost in these casualties were 926; an increase of 420 on those of the preceding year. But one exceptional disaster, the wreck of the German steamship, the Schiller, on the Kentish Knock sand, off the Essex coast, accounts for 331 of these lives, while 21 more are due to the loss of vessels which, though supposed to be lost in the previous year, were never heard of, and were reported as missing during the twelve months covered by the return. These 926 lives were sacrificed in 155 ships. Of these ships, 121 were totally lost, and the remaining 34 sustained partial damage. Outside the British seas the wrecks involving loss of life were 258, and the lives thus sacrificed were 2,828. This total embraces one of the most terrible calamities which ever occurred at sea, the burning of the emigrant ship Cospatrick, when 470 people, men, women, and children, who were emigrating in whole families, perished. In the previous year the lives lost in wrecks abroad were 4,034; but this number included the Indus and the Asia, ships engaged in the coolie traffic, in which two vessels 1,241 persons went down. No fewer than 1,450 of the lives lost in 1874-5 were those of persons whose fate is still uncertain. They were the crews and passengers of 137 ships which were never heard of again after they had sailed or been spoken at sea. Commenting on this same subject the Echo says: "Is it that English seamanship is degenerating, that our ship-builders are becoming more unscrupulous, or that the weather of the sea is changing, to account for the fact that the wrecks of 1875 were beyond parallel or precedent? We lost, during the past year, within the limits of our own waters, between four and five thousand vessels, with cargoes of great value, and an inappreciable aggregate of human life, with its supplement of family suffering. The question may well be asked, then, Why is all this? We have improvement in the building of ships; new provisions have been made for the rescue of endangered mariners; light-houses flash their flames of warning around our coast, and yet the Register is more dark than ever, and the surf is hoarse with the cries of drowning men."

DISEASE IN THE LAUNDRESS' BASKET.

From the Pall-Mall Gazette.

The panic which has been created by the new outbreak of small-pox, has led to attention being directed to what are termed "centres of infection," and there is a natural desire to root out these "centres," or at least reduce their number to the utmost extent possible. There is probably no more active engine for the dissemination of disease than the laundry. Indeed, under existing arrangements, there is reason to fear that cleanliness is often more deadly than dirt. When, as is the case in ninety-nine households out of a hundred, the washing is "put out," the owners of the articles sent to the laundry are, as a rule, utterly reckless as to the consequences of the general mingling of the linen belonging to several families, which takes place when the laundress is engaged in active business. Nor do they care to ascertain whether, as is often the case, there is infectious disease in the very house to which their garments and bed furniture are sent. It is not surprising under these circumstances that small-pox and fever often make their appearance mysteriously in households, where they are as unexpected as unwelcome. The most perfect drainage arrangements, the most admirable system of ventilation, are of no avail to prevent the disease that is introduced into the house by means of the laundress's basket.

A LION ESCAPES FROM HIS CAGE.

Barnum afforded a genuine sensation to the patrons of his great Hippodrome Wednesday afternoon. While one of the keepers was in the act of cleaning out the lions' cages one of them flew at the keeper, knocked him down, and bounded through the open door of his cage. Fortunately for the spectators Barnum's wild animals are not a happy family, and as a feud had been brewing for some time between the self-liberated lion and another king of the forest whose cage was opposite, he took the first opportunity to avenge his fancied wrongs, and fastened himself to the side of his antagonist's cage, and a fierce battle followed between the bars. At last the beast was brought to subjection, and safely placed under lock and key without injury to the horrified spectators.

A CONTENTED SHOEMAKER.

A Maryland paper asserts that in Grantsville, Garrett county, that State, is a shoemaker seventy-six years old, who has worked faithfully and persistently since he was a boy. He is industrious and a good workman, but never possessed at any time twenty-five dollars in money or property, and he is quite happy and is still pegging away.

A meeting will be held to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon, at 1 o'clock, at the Sub-Treasury steps in Wall street, under the auspices of the Republican Reform Club. The call for the meeting will be found in another column, and we commend it to the attention of our readers. It is a clear and candid statement of the views of the signers, who are among the most respected of our citizens. Most of them have been closely connected with the efforts made throughout the country to secure an unwavering adhesion to the Resumption act of 1875, and a reform of the civil service. The propositions embodying their principles are stated in the call, and the position of Gov. HAYES regarding them is emphatically declared. The meeting will be addressed by, among others, the Hon. LOT M. MORRILL, Secretary of the Treasury.

We see in Southern papers Democratic estimates of the vote in this City, according TILDEN a majority ranging from 70,000 to 100,000. There are Democratic papers nearer home which give countenance to the hallucination, and quote these absurd statements as more than prophecies—as calculations that will surely be substantially verified. The Albany Argus, which for a time helped to keep alive the delusion, has now toned down its figures until they represent a Democratic majority of 22,726. Even this pretense fades if we look closely at the figures supplied by the Argus. It concedes a Republican majority of about 40,000 in the whole State outside of New-York and Kings; for Kings it claims a Democratic majority of 12,998, and for New-York. 42,528. Both are overestimates. Accepting them for the moment, however, it is clear, on the showing of the Argus, that the Democrats do not expect a majority in the whole State exceeding 15,000. To reach this result it is necessary to assume that the Republican counties will do worse, and the Democratic counties better, than four years ago. For neither of these assumptions is there any reason. They are as obviously untenable as are the majorities in this County and Kings which are relied upon to overrule the rest of the State. From all which we infer that the Argus, caught by the same fit of virtue which has suddenly overtaken its patron, is preparing its friends for the loss of this State.

A Democratic paper attempts to lessen the force of the circular in favor of HAYES and WHEELER, emanating from the leading business men of this City, by the remark that many of the signers were, until quite recently, in doubt as to their own course in the election. Supposing the statement to be true, what does it prove? Simply this, that the canvass has developed dangers incident to the restoration of the Democrats to power which, in non-partisan minds, have outweighed all ordinary considerations in favor of a party change in the administration of the Government. Among the names attached to the letter to Mr. EVARTS and to the address to the people of the United States, there are, undoubtedly, some who at the outset of the campaign regarded its result with comparative indifference. The "solid South" aroused them to a sense of impending peril to which Mr. TILDEN's letter on the war claims gave point and emphasis. That letter produced exactly the opposite effect to that which its author intended. It showed the magnitude of the risk to which, under a Democratic Government, the credit of the nation would be exposed; and it gave promise of fierce and prolonged strife, as a consequence of Democratic victory. The movement of the business men, which is now apparent all over the country, is, then, not a party movement in the ordinary sense. It has its origin in a clear conception of the effect which the installation of the Democrats in power would have on the public credit, and on business interests; and for this reason, it exercises a marked influence on the classes least susceptible to party appeals.

There is a sudden interruption of the stereotyped disclaimer from the Southern politicians. For two days there has been no protest from any knot of men claiming to speak for a Southern State and protesting that they could not, would not, and should not demand payment for demolished hen-roosts and ravaged pigs and turkeys. For two days the Democratic papers have omitted to print this well-worn form of demurrer, variously signed, and with the startling head-line, "Another Radical Lie Nailed!" Something has gone wrong. Possibly the Literary Bureau has sent out its blank forms to men who have views of their own concerning their right to be paid for property taken during the war. It will not do for the Democracy to stop here: several States yet remain to be heard from.

The Nation characterizes the proofs of Mr. TILDEN's fraudulent evasion of the income-tax after this fashion: "Charges of fraud and perjury against the opposition candidate, based on evidence which is not known to exist and which no honest attempt has been made to discover." This is a good sample of the suppression of truth and suggestion of falsehood style in which the Nation has recently excelled itself. It would be interesting to know what that remarkable sheet would regard as "evidence," and what is its conception of non-existent evidence which somebody has been wicked enough to neglect making an honest attempt to discover. We have printed a good deal of evidence which is not only known to exist, but whose existence Mr. TILDEN has not dared to dispute. As a sample of the evidence which we have attempted to bring to light, and have only partially succeeded in revealing, we may mention the $50,000 payment in 1869 for services as advisory counsel to the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago corporation. The voucher for that payment is receipted by Mr. TILDEN, and was turned over by WINSLOW, LANIER & Co., the agents of the road, in accounting for their disbursements for legal expenses. We assure the Nation that we have tried all "honest" means of getting at that and other documents of like character without success. If the Nation desires, however, to aid the cause of justice, any hints that may occur to it for the prompt discovery of evidence will no doubt be thankfully received by the District Attorney, who has Mr. TILDEN's case in charge.

The Russian ultimatum has been accepted, and Turkey has signed an armistice, which is to last two months, beginning Nov. 1. It is possible that this truce and cessation of hostilities may be extended, and a contingent agreement to that effect has been included in the new arrangement. The English proposal, made last September, embraced an unconditional armistice for six weeks. This was rejected by Turkey, who then proposed a six months' armistice, or "truce," as it was called. Russia at once and peremptorily refused to accept that, and after some diplomatic fencing, forcibly presented the rejected English plan. This has practically been adopted, and so far the victory rests with Russian diplomacy. One happy result of this temporary adjustment will be the interruption of the Servian War. It is to be hoped that another prolongation of the truce will serve to postpone indefinitely a renewal of hostilities.

When Democrats sigh for "the good old days" when their party was in power at Washington, they probably are thinking of the fat pickings which they had. There have been no such wholesale thefts since the Democracy and BUCHANAN went out of office together. During the last Democratic administrations, party thieves succeeded in getting away with more than twenty million dollars. These thefts have become historic, though the rebellion which followed immediately after their discovery prevented them from becoming as conspicuous as they deserved. The illegal acceptances of FLOYD, while he was Secretary of War, amounted to $8,137,395, and over $800,000 in Indian trust bonds were stolen by his nephew, with the connivance of FLOYD and several other high officials. A sum amounting to more than $5,000,000 was stolen by the Cherokee Indian Ring, and nearly $2,000,000 was stolen from the Choctaws. None of these facts are contradicted; and the brief summary of the acts of some of the principal conspirators, which we print in another column, will recall the details to the minds of many of our readers. It should be borne in mind that the last Democratic administration with which this country was cursed was not only traitorous but corrupt and thievish. The same unregenerate, unreformed Democracy is to-day seeking to be reinstated in power by the American people.

TILDEN ON PUBLIC VIRTUE.

Neither friend nor enemy has ever attributed to SAMUEL J. TILDEN the faintest tinge of humor in his own composition, or any capacity for appreciating humor in others. But for this fact, we might receive his proclamation of yesterday as a joke intended to enliven the closing hours of the campaign. The story of Satan rebuking sin has done service for some generations. The story of TILDEN deprecating the use of money in an election, and exhorting his countrymen in the name of virtue to protect the purity of the ballot-box, is a newer and equally effective illustration of the same form of hypocrisy.

Mr. TILDEN has suddenly discoverd that "the improper and illegal use of money at elections" is a formidable evil. Its "debauching tendencies" are to him a source of grievous tribulation. When did this moral light dawn upon him? His "barrels of money" have been the only enlivening feature of the Democratic party in the canvass. They were rolled about while he was yet a candidate. The hungry brethren of the Democratic faith, all over the land, saw them and rejoiced before the farce at St. Louis had been played. Those roving agents, whispering his praises and plotting for delegations selected in his interest, were not kept in motion without a good deal of money. Those puffs in the newspapers preparing the way for his nomination cost money. And the doings at St. Louis would have drained the pockets of any candidate who had not grown rich on the reorganization of ruined railroads for some years previously.

Perhaps, however, Mr. TILDEN's conscience discriminates between the buying of delegations and the buying of votes. "Debauching the virtue" of a convention may, in his eyes, be a venial offense; "debauching" the voters is the sin that horrifies him. We would not doubt the possibility of the repentance even of Mr. TILDEN, but to test its genuineness, we should know when the operation of grace began. The Indiana election is not a remote occurence, and down to that period TILDEN's barrels of money were an item to be considered in the calculation of chances. Even with the aid of his money, the blue jeans party barely escaped defeat; what their fate would have been had he turned purist a few weeks earlier, the merest tyro may imagine. Certain it is that "the improper and illegal use of money" had much to do with the vote in Indiana, and that the bulk of the money used there was supplied from the same capacious purse that had furnished the means of "debauching" the immaculate patriots of the St. Louis Convention.

It may be, too, that Mr. TILDEN, with the subtle morality which distinguishes him, draws a distinction between "debauching the public virtue" at his individual cost and at the cost of the public. We ought not to be surprised if his patience—not to say his pocket—is at length exhausted. It has been subjected to a tremendous strain. For six months, at least, he has been drawing upon his bank account to buy his way into the Presidency. Still the Democratic leeches are not gorged. They are ravenous as ever. So Mr. TILDEN, buttoning his private pocket, loosens the purse-strings of the State Treasury, regardless of the effect on the public virtue. The gangs of men put on the public works within the last few weeks are thus retained as voters for him next Tuesday. The public money is squandered to secure doubtful voters and to pay men who are not entitled to vote at all, but who will attempt to vote in Mr. TILDEN's behalf. Is this "debauching the public virtue," or is it not? If it is, should not Mr. TILDEN have ended it before issuing his proclamation?

There is yet another "improper and illegal use of money" for which Mr. TILDEN is directly responsible. Everybody has heard of "the canal thieves." The verdant Western Democrat is taught that Mr. TILDEN has lodged them safely in the Penitentiary, and has squeezed out of them their ill-gotten gains, which have passed back into the State Treasury. Senator THURMAN was not ashamed to convey this idea to an Ohio audience the other night. As a matter of fact, the whole batch of "canal thieves" are working night and day for Mr. TILDEN. We cannot tell the precise terms of the bargain they have made with him, but that there is a bargain no man can doubt who knows how zealously the "thieves" are working for the Democratic candidate, and how lavishly they are spending for his benefit money which, according to him, was virtually stolen out of the canal fund. The incident is not altogether new in his experience. He did not object to the $5,000 checks given by his friend TWEED to the Democratic cause, though he knew that every dollar of it had been stolen; and we cannot wonder, therefore, that he watches with smiling complacency the use made by his friends, "the canal thieves," of part of their booty. What we do want to know, is, whether, from the standpoint of yesterday's proclamation, a Presidential candidate may profit, politically, out of public plunder, without "debauching the public virtue"?

The field is wide, and this proclamation touches only a small part of it. The corrupt use of money in the election takes other forms than bribery. We are glad to know that, at the last moment, Mr. TILDEN's soul revolts against the purchase of votes. For his own sake, it is unfortunate that the revolt did not occur long ago. To have any saving efficacy, however, it must take a wider range than his ejaculatory protest indicates. It must apply, for example, to the Democratic attempts at fraud in this City and Brooklyn, and to the shameless frauds in which Mr. TILDEN's friends have been detected at Philadelphia and elsewhere. If he would win for himself a name among self-denying mortals, he has but to issue another proclamation denouncing specifically Tammany's plan for "thwarting the unbiased will of the people" by fraudulent registration, and pledging himself to use the knowledge he acquired as a party concerned in the fraudulent count of 1868 to bring to justice any Democrat who shall try to repeat the experiment. No man knows better than Mr. TILDEN the art and mystery of "debauching the public virtue" by the employment of fraud at the ballot-box, and as it is quite certain that the only possible danger of this sort proceeds from Democratic sources, he has here an opportunity of crowning his defeat with more laurels than he is likely to obtain in any other way.

Moreover, if Mr. TILDEN would really rise from the ridiculous to the sublime, let him, in the supplementary proclamation which we counsel him to issue, administer the rebuke they deserve to Mr. BAYARD and the demagogues who go about raving against the machinery provided by Federal law for securing the purity of the ballot. That machinery will save the public virtue of New-York from the debauchery with which Tammany has menaced it; and the vigorous application of the law in every city would go far toward correcting the evil which the repentant TILDEN now professes to deplore. The Democratic hatred of the law is natural enough, for it tends to prevent corruption and fraud in the North as well as to prevent intimidation and violence in the South. Cannot Mr. TILDEN rise to the height of the occasion, and, in the interest of "the public virtue," to whose claims he now pays imperfect tribute, vindicate purity and the law by condemning the Democrats who make war upon both?

WHICH IS THE REFORM CANDIDATE?

When Mr. EVARTS said on Wednesday evening that "a veto was never made for the hard work of carrying on a government," he touched the most significant point in the great canvass now drawing to its conclusion. The Democratic candidate asks us to elect him, to veto the measures of his party. His main claim to our confidence is that he does not represent his party, that he may be counted on to thwart its settled purpose, that he will protect the Treasury from its assaults, that he will not carry out the policy in which it is most deeply and widely interested. He is presented to us as a negative candidate. Not what he can do but what he promises to prevent, is the prominent feature in the discussion of his merits. On the eve of election he finds it necessary to array himself against the notorious desire and intention of the controlling element among his supporters. At the same moment his "Bureau" is receiving from officials in the various Southern States signatures to a circular sent out under his direction, declaring that the supreme motive of the majority of his party cannot be gratified, because it is barred by the Constitution and opposed by the law of the land as interpreted by the Supreme Court. The circular is intentionally misleading, and its assurances amount to nothing, because the most dangerous Southern war claims are not barred by the fourteenth amendment, and have never been even considered by the Supreme Court. In the same way Mr. TILDEN's promised vetoes would be of no use, because, forewarned when to expect them, the South would avoid them by providing for the payment of the claims through tribunals over which the Executive would have no control—by a single amendment, for instance, to the law regulating the Court of Claims, an amendment which might be safely tacked to an appropriation bill, and defy Mr. TILDEN's proposed veto, if he ever intended to employ it.

This effort to get favor for Mr. TILDEN on the ground that he, who has bowed before every demand made on him by his party, however great the sacrifice of patriotism required, is stronger than the compact, determined South, sustained by the strongest impulses of passion and interest, shows the man in his worst light. It brings into relief his character as a pretender, and compels us to ask how a politician who deals in such impudent shifts can be a real reformer. To overcome the evils which have grown up in the public service, to route the forces by which they are sustained, to meet with firmness and wisdom the devices by which they will be defended, will require in the President who shall undertake the task, above all things, sincerity of purpose and unselfish devotion. Without these there can result nothing but confusion, embarrassment, reaction, and debasement. And if Mr. TILDEN had set out to prove, by his course in this canvass, that he does not possess these qualities, he could hardly have adopted a plan of action more completely conclusive. What sincerity can there be in the character of a candidate who will consent to lead a party which he is obliged to pledge himself to oppose? What degree of unselfishness can there be in a candidate who has sought his nomination with the keenest and most unscrupulous bargaining from the very section of his party which he now promises to fight with his veto? He knew last June as well as he knows now, what the country had to fear from the South if the party which it controlled should obtain possession of the Government, yet at St. Louis, the phalanx which was from first to last unbroken in his favor was made up from that section and officered by its leaders. If he has consented to purchase a nomination at such hands, and is ready to take the Presidency with such an alliance entangling him at every step, what are we to think of his ostentatious repudiation of its influence, unless we regard it as a mere campaign trick? And what aid can we expect from such a man, so compromised, in the way of a general reform which would encounter at the outset the intense opposition not only of one section but of the whole body of the active men of his party? Men do not gather figs from thistles or grapes from thorns, and courage to defeat Southern demands and to inaugurate general reform against the determined opposition of the politicians of his party, could not be expected from a President who owed his election and his nomination to the South and to the politicians.

Gov. HAYES, on the other hand, occupies precisely the reverse of Mr. TILDEN's position. He owes nothing to any one section of the country. His claim to confidence rests upon the services which at every sacrifice of private interest, he has rendered to the whole nation. He owes nothing to those politicians who may be expected to oppose reform, and no man has ever dared to say that by word or act did he seek the support of any one. The influence which determined his selection at Cincinnati was that of the disinterested delegates, who recognized in him the best representative of the principles which they sought to establish. And in his letter of acceptance he went even beyond the expectation of his supporters, and showed an intelligent idea of what civil service reform requires and how to secure it, which no public man has ever excelled. He will enter the Presidential office under no obligations to oppose his party, with no personal services to reward, and no bargains to carry out. He can count on the hearty support of the best men of his party—of the men whom Mr. EVARTS represents—and whatever opposition his efforts at reform may encounter, it will derive no strength from any interest or ambition of his own. Any intelligent man can, therefore, decide whether he or Mr. TILDEN is in reality the reform candidate.

THE GREAT MISREPRESENTED.

There seems to have existed for some years a deep-laid conspiracy to blast the fair fame of Mr. SMITH ELY, Jr. It began at least eight years ago in the old Board of Supervisors, when Mr. ELY was recorded as voting for jobs which he disapproved, and as adopting resolutions which were never presented. With fiendish ingenuity, the authors of this plot did Mr. ELY the occasional justice of recording his vote in the negative on the bills of the Ring tradesmen, but that, of course, was merely part of the deep-laid scheme to give an appearance of credibility to the votes which he is alleged to have cast in favor of INGERSOLL, GARVEY, KEYSER & Co. It may be remarked, incidentally, that JOHN FOX, "JIMMY" HAYES, and "IKEY" OLIVER were also victims of the same diabolical plot, but as they never had much character to lose, they did not suffer so severely as Mr. ELY. It may be asked why, when the printed minutes of the board were laid before them, these injured public servants did not get up in their places and denounce the tricks by which TWEED, YOUNG, and WOODWARD were conspiring to blacken their record and mislead posterity as to their public course. It is sufficient answer to say that no man pays the slightest attention to the light which minute books, court records, or other perfunctory trifles of that character shed upon his career till he becomes a candidate for office. Bearing that fact in mind, it will not be considered singular that Mr. ELY was indebted to THE TIMES for the first intimation of how grossly his course had been misrepresented by the minutes of the old Board of Supervisors. We are inclined to think that Messrs. FOX, HAYES, and OLIVER knew it before.

The last meeting of the old Board of Supervisors which Mr. ELY attended was held on Dec. 27, 1869. At that meeting he is, quite erroneously of course, represented as having voted for the expenditure of some three-quarters of a million of public money on ring tradesmen and officials. A week before that meeting, began Mr. ELY's connection with the Stuyvesant Bank. The same perverse ill-luck which had attended him in the old Board of Supervisors, followed him into his new sphere of usefulness. The minute book contains nothing in regard to Mr. ELY which can be deemed trustworthy. It represents that on Dec. 21, 1869, he was elected a Director and President of the bank. Mr. ELY assures us that this is all a mistake. About that time he was engaged in convincing himself that the bank was virtually insolvent, and therefore not the kind of concern for a man of his standing to take in hand. Mr. ELY, it seems, made the very proper suggestion that the affairs of the bank ought to be wound up, and magnanimously offered, "in return for the compliment which had been paid him," in what form does not clearly appear, to serve as a Director, and to assist in the process of winding up. By way of qualifying himself for this task, Mr. ELY subscribed for ten shares of the bank stock. Nothing could more clearly demonstrate the natural elevation of character which distinguishes JOHN KELLY's candidate for Mayor than his gratitude for being offered the Presidency of a bankrupt financial institution, and his cheerful assumption of the liability attached to its directorate, and to the ownership of ten shares of its stock.

The bank was not wound up, as Mr. ELY had wisely suggested. It went on taking the money of trustful depositors for two years longer, and, according to Mr. ELY's testimony, its condition began to improve. From this it may be conjectured how very bad its condition was when Mr. ELY made that "superficial examination" in 1869. For, at the time of its failure in the Fall of 1871, half the bills discounted and two-thirds of the loans reckoned as assets were worthless. We have some hesitation in quoting from so untrustworthy a record as an official minute-book, when the character of Mr. ELY is in question. But it may be mentioned that Mr. ELY is alleged to have been appointed a member of the Finance Committee on Jan. 5, 1870, of the committee on examination on March 30, and on April 6, was appointed a Committee on Columbia County Iron Mining Company, "with authority to interest bank to the extent of bonds." This he seems to have done to the extent of $20,000—a loan which was afterward increased to $40,000 and transferred to the Weed Iron Company. It proved in the hands of the Receiver a very bad investment. Of course, all this may be a baseless romance, concocted by the Secretary or whoever was responsible for the minutes of the Directors' meetings, and the statements are made subject to the probable correction of Mr. ELY.

With the same reservation, the fact may be stated that Mr. ELY is said to have been again elected a Director on Jan. 3, 1871, and that on Jan. 7 he was appointed a member of the Finance Committee. At this point Mr. ELY comes in with the reminder that his "engagements at Washington," assumed with the consent of WILLIAM M. TWEED, demanded his presence in Congress between March 4 and April 20, 1871. If the files of that short session were consulted it would probably be found that the Clerk of the House misrepresented Mr. ELY as persistently as the Clerk of the old Board of Supervisors or the Secretary of the Stuyvesant Bank. No sooner had he returned to the City than he appears, without his knowledge or consent, we are assured, as a member of Committee on Quarterly Examination of the books of the bank with which he was no longer connected. He had asked the Cashier to drop his name from the list of Directors, and that, of course, was release enough for any business man from a fiduciary position of rather uncommon delicacy and peril. The Committee on Examination made its report, nevertheless, and pronounced the ruined bank to be in a perfectly sound and prosperous condition. The recommendation was accordingly made that a dividend of four per cent. should be declared from net earnings. The unreflecting public assumed that as the Directorate of the Stuyvesant Bank contained the names of several men who were generally esteemed honest, the declaration of such a dividend was a perfectly satisfactory pledge of the solvency of the institution. Certain persons accordingly intrusted their money to the keeping of the bank and lost it. Among these were some trustees who had on hand $50,000 of the savings of laboring men, and who are at the present moment trying to make the Directors of the Stuyvesant Bank legally responsible for the false and fraudulent character of their last quarterly statement. It must be clear to the meanest comprehension that Mr. ELY has neither moral nor legal responsibility for the action of the Board of Directors or of its committee. He told the Cashier he wished that his name should be dropped from the list of Directors, and if the Cashier did not accept that as a resignation, it was, of course, his own fault. It is well known that it is quite customary for bank Directors to take this method of throwing up their positions. As for the public, who assumed that Mr. ELY was one of the respectable gentlemen who recommended the four per cent. dividend, they ought to have known better. A Congressman who went to Washington by the aid of WILLIAM M. TWEED, ought to be as much above the suspicion of culpable negligence, not to say of worse, as JOHN KELLY's candidate for Mayor of New-York.

ANOTHER VIEW OF "TWID."

TWEED tarries long on the rolling deep. The Franklin is delayed, and Sheriffs and Deputy Marshals vainly watch off the Narrows for the illustrious fugitive. But, while his coming is deferred, the Democracy take courage, and even dare to joke (in whispers) about their late leader. Election day is almost here, and still he cometh not. The awful budget which he is reported to carry is closed as yet, and there are only four days before the polls will be opened for the decisive vote. It is no wonder that the spirits of the Democracy begin to rise, and that the World gabbles about the use which the Republicans will make of TWEED when he comes. His "confession" is expected, according to the World, to damage TILDEN; hence, he is being hurried home in order to influence the election. TWEED is a Democrat, and his confession, if we could get such a thing, would be good Republican capital. At least that is the Democratic view of the case. And, since the Democrats best know what their old comrade and leader has to say, we must accept their confession as conclusive. For the past ten days they have strained their eyes seaward, and have asked in trembling accents, "Will he come?" From the tallest point of the Tiden mansion in Gramercy Park a sentinel sweeps the sea horizon with a telescope, while the harassed SAMUEL, at the foot of the stairs, like Bluebeard's wife in the story, continually cries, "Abram, brother Abram, do you see anything?"

Another Democrat, the gifted WATTERSON, takes an equally gloomy view of the Tweed business. He has been making a speech at Jeffersonville, Ind., in which, after some scenic representations of Mr. TILDEN's home in New-York, he expatiated at great length upon the enormity of TWEED's arrest. The portico, so to speak, of this portion of the gifted WATTERSON's speech was TILDEN's house, which he says, is "not grand, nor beautiful, nor in any manner architectural;" and it has behind it "a fatherly old tree with a rustic seat beneath it," which seat the Louisville sage avers is "for talking age and whispering lovers made." The gifted WATTERSON does not tell us in which of these two characters Mr. TILDEN appears when he sits down on that rustic seat; he is more interested in relieving his mind of the details of the Tweed outrage. Mr. WATTERSON says that the Republicans "have put themselves to the trouble, by the assistance of the National Government, to find out the hiding-place of the old buccaneer." Think of a Democratic editor speaking thus disrespectfully of the ex-Boss. How long will it be before he will be calling JOHN KELLY an "elderly land-shark"? But it seems that the Republicans have captured TWEED, though many of TILDEN's admirers said it was the Governor who had "followed TWEED like a sleuth-hound," and Sheriff CONNER declared, with real tears, that he had spent three thousand dollars in sledging Canadian snows in pursuit of him. The Kentucky editor grieves, too, that "they are bringing him home on a national vessel, though there is no Federal warrant out against him." The gigantic outrage of bringing TWEED home at all is only exceeded by the other outrage of bringing him home on a national vessel, (and in the Admiral's best state-room, as we are informed,) without a Federal warrant. Precisely what a Federal warrant is, we do not know. Perhaps Mr. WATTERSON does. But if TWEED comes home before election day, and makes a clean breast of it, without a Federal warrant, we shall feel that the palladium of our liberties has been badly damaged, and that the Constitution, as our fathers made "it is not worth shucks," as they say in Kentucky. All this is done, says the gifted WATTERSON, "under a promise of a pardon, or its equivalent, if TWEED will only testify against TILDEN." The tragic spectacle of TWEED testifying against his old friend, associate, and brother committee-man TILDEN, moves the speaker to the bottom of his soul. "Think of it!" he cries. "The final resort of baffled corruption! The evidence of a thief, in the interest of stealing, against the character of an honest man! Think of it!" Then, at the vision which his imagination had conjured up, he comforted himself with a glass of milk, and wiped his streaming eyes.

The gifted Kentuckian hopes he may live to see this "crowning infamy," and he is only afraid that its authors will not "have the nerve and audacity to carry it out." They certainly will not, unless the Franklin brings back the ex-Boss very soon. His chariot-wheels, so to speak, tarry long on the deep. While he delays his coming, the World cracks a feeble joke, and WATTERSON takes his fling at the ex-Boss as "the old buccaneer." But all are alike in a state of nervous trepidation lest the long-expected TWEED, alias "Twid," shall come up the harbor before Tuesday.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN.

During Gov. Morgan's administration of the State Government, the taxes were $6,000,000 less than they have been under Gov. Tilden.

Perhaps it is tenderness for the feelings of his friend Kelly that has lately prevented Gov. Tilden's appearance in his favorite rôle of "Hercules slaying the Tammany Hydra."

"Our only hope must be that as President he will abandon the creed, the principles, and the pledges on which he will have been elected."—From Samuel J. Tilden's "Kent letter" on the election of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Tilden now finds it necessary to make pledges of what he will do if elected.

Was it in his character of a reformer that Gov. Tilden vetoed the Convict Labor bill last session? Was he looking for the votes of intelligent men when he talked in his veto Message about a "red spectre" being held up before the working classes by making thieves and vagabonds earn the bread they eat?

It is remembered by some that Mr. Tilden was a member of the State Assembly in the year 1872. There were, according to the official journal, 1,568 roll-calls during that session. Mr. Tilden was present and voted on just 107 of these roll-calls. He was absent from 1,461. From which record it appears that this valuable member was present attending to his duties almost one-fifteenth of the time. Mr. Tilden is a public man of large experience as an absentee.

That plank of the Democratic platform of 1874 which pronounced the war to subdue the slaveholder's rebellion a "failure," was drawn up by the notorious, if not infamous, Clement L. Vallandingham. Samuel J. Tilden, a fellow member of the Committee on Resolutions, indorsed the unconditional surrender plank in the committee in the convention, and in the campaign which followed. This is the public record. Is it a good or a disgraceful record?

A ruined company, a mill abandoned and falling to decay, the machinery rusting, the outbuildings tumbling down, the yard grass-grown and choked with weeds and refuse; a once busy little village which depended upon the mill silent, and its streets almost without an inhabitant—such is the picture of "Tilden reform" which the Pennsylvania village of Brady's Bend presents. Samuel J. Tilden "reformed" it to its present condition by a process commonly called stock-watering.

Whatever abuses may have crept into the administration of the Government at Washington, will be as promptly removed by Gov. Hayes as by Carl Schurz or ex-President Woolsey. He is absolutely free from all contaminating connection with demoralizing influences at the Capital or elsewhere. He was the candidate not wanted by the Rings. The day he was nominated the Washington lobby went into mourning. The day he is defeated will be the day of jubilee for rebels and plunderers of the public.

Gov. Tilden's administration is, of course, very economical, but yet it is perhaps worthy of passing remark that the annual tax for the general purposes of the State Government, (excluding the debt, school, and miscellaneous tax,) was $1,213,487 greater in 1876 than in 1872, under Hoffman; $629,876 greater than in 1873, under Dix, and $568,574 greater than in 1875, under the great and only economist, himself. Reform appears to be an expensive luxury.

According to the Democratic or State Rights theory of government, each "Sovereign" State is to be the sole judge of infractions upon its rights, and itself decide when it suffers grievances greater than ought to be borne. In strict accordance with this beautiful theory, South Carolina or Rhode Island can get up a rebellion or suspend intercourse with the rest of the Union, whenever in its sovereign pleasure it seems best. It is for the voters to say whether Hendricks, Tilden, and the men who believe in this offensively rotten State Rights rubbish, shall be placed in power.

There is some room for difference of opinion on the point whether Tilden or Tweed was the more responsible for the giant frauds which made Hoffman Governor in 1868. Horace Greeley held Tilden responsible and publicly so stated. Conscientious voters who supported Mr. Greeley are now placed in this dilemma. They must either decide that the candidate for whom they voted in 1872, published over his own signature what was false, or that he proclaimed what was true. If false, they voted to elevate to the Presidency a libeler and falsifier four years ago; if true, can they now vote for a candidate who robbed a State of its suffrage and polluted the source of its liberties.

During the time Mr. Tilden has been a resident of New-York, and an active politician, the substantial reforms of a paid Fire Department, a reorganized Police force, an efficient Health Board, the Excise laws, the Registry laws the Compulsory Education law, and lastly the Police Justices law, have been successfully brought about, after a stubborn contest for each. Mr. Tilden did not give the slightest aid to any of these reforms. To each and all he was either actively or passively opposed; but he claims now to have been a "life-long reformer."

There is more than one way of reducing taxation. If you are a private citizen, with no immediate expectation of receiving a Democratic nomination, you can cheat the Collector by a little hard swearing. Or, if you happen to be a Governor, you can order that no laborers shall be employed in repairs on public works except in counties of doubtful politics. The first plan is genuinely economical, and can be recommended without reserve to all Democratic statesmen and moralists; but the second method manifests as little wisdom as would a householder who should refuse to repair his leaky roof until the weather had ruined his furniture.

The six great expounders or interpreters of the Constitution are Hamilton, Madison, Marshall, Jay, Story, and Webster. At least five of these six highest authorities on constitutional law belong to what is known as the national school. Mr. Tilden, we must infer from his opinions, claims to know more about the Constitution than Hamilton or Webster, for he belongs to what is called the State Rights school. The great authorities of this school are Calhoun, A. H. Stephens, Jere Black, and Jeff Davis. It has been a rule of action with the latter school, whenever worsted in debate, to appeal from arguments to arms, and to call in as assistant interpreters of the Constitution the Lees and the Stonewall Jacksons.

Mr. Tucker, of Virginia, a Democratic member of Congress, and former Attorney General of that State, gave an opinion as Attorney General that the Postmasters of Virginia could overhaul the United States mails to ascertain whether they contained incendiary matter. On the floor of the House, in the debate with Blaine, he reaffirmed the correctness of that opinion. So it seems, according to Mr. Tucker, if the President of the United States or the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court were on a visit to Richmond, his mail could not be delivered him until a petty local official ascertained whether it contained anything improper or incendiary. And yet this incontestibly asinine proposition comes from one of the shining Democratic

OVER TWENTY MILLIONS OF DOLLARS STOLEN.

HOW ENORMOUS SUMS OF MONEY WERE STOLEN FROM THE INDIANS ON ACCOUNT OF THE "RING'S" DISBURSEMENTS—JOHN B. FLOYD AND HIS HOPEFUL NEPHEW—SECRETARY CHANDLER'S CIVIL SUIT AGAINST JAKE THOMPSON—THE RECORD OF THE SO-CALLED REFORM PARTY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 30, 1876.

For a number of years past what are known as the Cherokee and Choctaw Claims against the United States have appeared before Congress with the regularity of the annual session. Volumes in the shape of reports from committees of both branches of Congress have been made upon these claims, and while every report submitted has been favorable to the claimants, the Indians have not yet been able to secure the final legislative action necessary to a settlement. The claims of these people grow out of the ceding of their lands east of the Mississippi River, and their removal to the Indian Territory. The cession was made under treaties with the Choctaws in 1830, and with the Cherokees in 1835. By these treaties the Government received many million acres of land in the States of Tennessee, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi, the United States agreeing to pay a stipulated price for the lands, and in addition to bear the expense of removing the Indians to the Indian Territory and subsisting them for one year after their arrival in that Territory. While the history of these Indian claims is both interesting and romantic, it is not the purpose of this letter to deal with their origin, character, or equity, only so far as it may be necessary to point out the enormity of the swindle perpetrated both upon the Indians and the Government by those who were intrusted with carrying out the provisions of the several treaties made for removing the Indians west of the Mississippi. The Democratic press and the orators of that party never tire of descanting upon the "corruption" of those now charged with the administration of national affairs, yet all the developments made by the various investigations instituted at the last session of Congress will not, if aggregated, either in moral turpitude or pecuniary amount, equal the robberies perpetrated upon the Indians in question by officials of Democratic Administrations from 1830 to 1848.

During a recent examination made by officers of the Interior Department, with a view to the final settlement of a portion of the Cherokee claims, some discoveries were made showing a series of frauds which, considering the amount liable to be stolen, exceeds the performances in this line even of the Tweed Ring in New-York. By treaties made with the Cherokees in 1835 and 1836, the United States agreed to pay those Indians $5,000,000 for their lands lying in the eastern portion of Tennessee, the western portion of North Carolina, and Northern Georgia and Alabama; and, in addition to this money consideration, agreed to remove them, at the expense of the United States, to the Indian Territory; to pay all expenses incidental to the removal; settle all their debts and claims for improvements and ferries erected on the lands ceded; and to provide them with subsistence and medical attendance for one year after their arrival in the Territory. By the treaty of 1835, $600,000 were appropriated for the purpose of removing the Cherokees, and by an act passed June 12, 1838, the further sum of $1,047,067 was appropriated for the same purpose. Thus, the total sum appropriated for the removal of the Cherokees was $1,647,067. It was provided by the treaties that the Cherokees should pay the United States, for unceded lands the sum of $500,000, and it was further provided that the sum of $500,000 should be withheld by the United States, as a national fund, the Cherokees to receive interest on this fund, at the rate of five per cent. per annum, thus leaving $4,000,000 as the sum to be, distributed among the Cherokees for ceding their lands to the United States, irrespective of all expenses that might accrue from the act of removal and exclusive of the amount to be paid by the Government for Cherokee debts, ferries, improvements, subsistance, &c.

At that time the care of the Indians was intrusted to the War Department, and during the time covered by the removal of the Cherokees the entire administration of the Government was conducted by the Democrats. The disbursement of so large a sum of money attracted the attention and excited the cupidity of Democratic officials, and a ring was formed, through which almost the entire sum appriated to the Cherokees for their lands was stolen. It was stipulated in the treaties that there should be paid to such Cherokees as removed at their own expense the sum of $53 33⅓ per head, this sum to be in full for expense of travel and subsistence. The time estimated for performing the journey was eighty days. The records of the Interior Department show that responsible parties offered to remove the Indians at various sums per head, ranging from $32 to $40. The number of Cherokees removed as stated in the accounts presented by the officials having charge of the matter, was 13,149. These are the facts and figures furnished by the treaties, acts of Congress, and records of the Interior Department in relation to the removal of the Cherokees to the Indian Territory. With these factors, it is not difficult to make an estimate which the expense of carrying out the treaties should not have exceeded. Had the Government accepted the highest offer ($40 per head) made to remove the Indians, the entire cost would have been $525,960. Had $54 a head been paid, which is a fraction higher than the estimate made by the War Department, the cost would have been $710,046, which would have left about one million dollars of the appropriation available for maintaining the Indians in their new home, as stipulated in the treaties.

Expense of removal, &c.	$1,979,198 94
Ferries and improvements	1,737,567 23
Cherokee debts	77,135 66
Expenses of treaty	22,026 89

The entire Cherokee fund having been made subject to the order of the Ring, the above amount was deducted from the $4,000,000 stipulated to be paid the Cherokees for the lands ceded by them, and they were informed that the balance to their credit was $184,071 28. The Cherokees refused to accept this settlement, when the War Department made a persistent but unsuccessful effort to force them to take the balance and sign in full of all claims under the treaties. Being unable to force the Indians, the Ring appeared before Congress and succeeded in having passed an act appropriating the sum of $1,256,500 27, which was to be paid the Cherokees upon the condition that they would execute receipts in full of all demands arising under the treaties. At this time, the Indians, having been left to their own resources in a new country, were suffering terribly for food and clothing, and in order to avoid starvation were compelled to accede to the terms dictated, first entering an earnest protest against the shameful robbery. Thus the Cherokees had stolen from them by Democratic officers of the Government $2,743,499 27. Every dollar of the charges made in the account stated by the officials was illegal, as well as fraudulent, because the treaties provided that the terms thereof should be fulfilled at the expense of the United States, and a sum deemed sufficient for this purpose ($1,647,000) was appropriated by Congress, which amount was also stolen by the Ring.

It would take more space than THE TIMES can devote to expose in detail the manner of this robbery. A few instances will serve to illustrate how the enormous charges were made up. Charges were made and allowed for removing 1,633 more people than were actually removed, which, at the rate charged, ($224 per head,) amounted to $365,792. Contracts were made for various supplies, and then canceled, in order to give the same contracts to favorites of the Ring, the original contractors being awarded large sums for relinquishing their contracts. The parties who had the original contract for furnishing shoes were awarded damages to the amount of $144,365, and the contract given to a second party. The amount of damages awarded in this instance would have purchased six pair of shoes for every Cherokee removed, estimating the shoes at $2 per pair. The fact that Indians wear moccasins, and that it is probable not a box of shoes was furnished the Cherokees, will illustrate the character and extent of this particular fraud. In another instance, $83,000 were paid a contractor for surrendering his contract for furnishing supplies. Two Army officers, acting as disbursing officers, embezzled $76,377, and an agent appointed by the War Department stole from the fund $68,145. The entire amount of this Democratic steal in connection with the removal of the Cherokees is ascertained to be, so far as the losses and accounts have been adjusted, $5,870,962.

The removal of the Choctaws was attended by the same system of wholesale robbery of the Government and the Indians, the last act in the Choctaw robbery having been performed by Godard Bailey, with the connivance of John B. Floyd, who was at the time Secretary of War. Bailey having stolen $870,000 in Indian trust bonds to save Floyd from exposure and disgrace for having illegally issued acceptances as Secretary of War, to certain contractors for carrying Army supplies. Under the treaty of Sept. 30, 1830, made with the Choctaws, scrip was issued to the Indians in lieu of lands to which they were entitled, but never received. One half of this scrip was held by the Government as a trust fund on which interest is still paid at the rate of four per cent. per annum. Under an adjustment made in 1855, the amount of this Choctaw fund, with accrued interest, was ascertained to be $872,000, which amount was invested in bonds and held by the United States for the use of the Choctaws. Godard Bailey was a nephew of John B. Floyd and was appointed to the charge of these trust bonds by Jacob Thompson, Secretary of the Interior under President Buchanan, John B. Floyd being at the time Secretary of War. The firm of Russell, Majors & Waddell, were contractors with the War Department for transporting Army supplies in the distant Territories, and Secretary Floyd, contrary to all the usages of the department, and in gross violation of all law and sound business principles was in the habit of accepting drafts drawn by the firm against unearned money. The firm becoming embarrassed, were unable to meet these accepted drafts and in order to save Floyd from disgrace and from being forced to retire from the Cabinet of Mr. Buchanan, an arrangement was made with Bailey through Col. Drinkard, the Chief Clerk of the War Department and Floyd's bosom friend, by which the trust bonds were abstracted by Bailey and delivered to Russell who hypothecated them in order to take up the drafts accepted by Floyd. Russell, Majors, and Waddell being unable to redeem the bonds, they were sold by the holders and the entire amount of the bonds ($870,000) was thus lost to the Government. The amount of Floyd's unredeemed acceptances aggregated $6,137,395. This amount is exclusive of the $870,000 in acceptances given Bailey as collateral for the trust bonds, and is still outstanding as an equitable claim against the Government.

On March 17, 1861, Floyd was indicted in the Washington courts for conspiracy to defraud the United States but escaped trial by a technical plea and the active assistance of Robert Ould, who was was at that time United States District Attorney. On March 19, 1861, District Attorney Ould moved a nolle pros. in the case of Floyd, arguing in support of his motion that the conspiracy existed alone with Bailey, and that as Floyd had been summoned and testified before a Congressional committee in relation to the matter, he could not be prosecuted, according to a ruling made by the court in the case of Russell who had been also indicted for connection with the same conspiracy.

The rebellion following almost immediately after the discovery of the embezzlement of the Indian trust bonds, caused this conspiracy of Floyd to be overlooked by the public, and very little has since been heard of "a series of transactions unprecedented in their character, and remarkable for alternate exhibitions of fraud and folly," as these transactions were characterized by the House Committee in their report to the Thirty-sixth Congress. It is in connection with the theft of these bonds that Secretary Chandler has recently brought a civil suit against Jake Thompson, he having been legally responsible for their safety as Secretary of the Interior. Another feature of the management of these Indian trust bonds should not be overlooked in this connection. Instead of investing the funds held in trust for the Indians in bonds of the United States, as provided by law, the several Democratic Administrations invested them in bonds of the Southern States, and bonds of Southern railroads. The amount thus invested, which has since proved absolutely worthless, was $3,714,907. The investment of this sacred trust shows the influence exercised by the "solid South" in the halcyon days of the Democracy.

The amount stolen from, and lost to, the people of the United States, through Democratic officials in these transactions with the Cherokees and Choctaws, so far as now ascertained, foot up as follows:

Stolen from the Cherokees	$2,743,499
Stolen from the United States at same time	3,127,463
Stolen from the Choctaws	1,757,665
John B. Floyd's acceptances	6,137,395
Worthless Southern State bonds	3,714,907
Interest paid on above bonds	3,147,143
Total	$20,658,032

Can the party of "reform" point to anything that will approach these few transactions of their old chiefs in the administration of the Government since 1861?

A CASE REQUIRING EXPLANATION.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It may safely be said that if there be one feature in the present canvass raised into prominence by both political parties, it is the universal demand for civil service reform—the tenure in place or office of competent, faithful officers during good behavior, and no removal except for sufficient and specified cause. It is also true that both parties, Democratic as well as Republican, profess an equal and an eager interest in the proper administration of our public schools. If this be granted, it cannot be amiss if I communicate through the columns of your valuable paper some facts which have come to my knowledge which are intimately related to both. It concerns the administration of the highest of our public schools in this City—the College of the City of New-York. I have been informed that the Executive Board of the college has recently discharged two of the tutors in that institution without notice, preferring no charges, and, as far as I can learn, without cause. Each of these gentlemen has long held the position of which he is thus deprived—the one for upward of fifteen, the other for ten years or more—and, as an old pupil of the college, I may say that in each case the position has been honorably and worthily filled. Apart from the indignity which has thus been put upon these gentlemen, and through them upon the intellectual calling, which already offers too few inducements for men of talent readily to embrace it; part from this, I would ask, Is this the proper spirit and method of administration befitting the highest of our public schools in this City? I cannot think so. If civil service reform is to be a thing of life and reality, and not a mere phrase to adorn platforms and speeches, here is an opportunity for its home application. I commend it to the attention of all citizens interested in good government and our public schools. The removal of these gentlemen was clearly unwarranted, and justice requires their reinstatement. CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

THE COMMITTEE OF TWENTY-FIVE.

COL. HAWKINS ON ITS RECENT ACTION.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

As Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Independent Citizens' Committee I deem it my duty to explain to you in brief the cause of the failure to accomplish the great object for which the committee was formed.

From the first I was of the opinion that we ought to nominate candidates—well known of the highest character—representative Democrats and Republicans, and that our ticket should have been placed in the field within a few days after the Cooper Institute meeting. I believe then, as I do now, that there was in existence a very large amount of public sentiment in favor of such a ticket, and that no party nominations made afterward could have estranged that sentiment from our support.

My views were overruled; I did not have the support of a single member of the committee; my colleagues were for procrastination, for the purpose of negotiation with the Republicans and the Anti-Tammany Democrats. Without being a prophet, I advised from the first that nothing would come from such negotiations; it has taken but a short time to prove that I was correct. I feel that a great opportunity, which may never occur again, has been idiotically thrown away, and that through no fault of yours or mine.

I am sincerely grateful for your hearty good will and energetic co-operation, and shall always remember you with pleasure. The time may again arrive when your services may be useful to a good cause, and when it does I feel certain that you can be relied upon for good work. Thanking you and your friends for what you have done and were willing to do, I am, most faithfully yours,

RUSH C. HAWKINS.

AMUSEMENTS.

GENERAL MENTION.

Mr. Thomas will soon commence a series of Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon concerts, at Steinway Hall.

Mr. H. R. Humphries gives a concert at Chickering Hall this evening. Messrs. S. B. Mills, Warren and Sohst, with other well-known artists, are to take part in the affair.

Mr. George Fawcett Rowe commenced a week's engagement at the Pittsburg Opera-house on Monday evening, when a large audience enjoyed the mirth-provoking incidents of "Brass."

The company includes thirty-two persons, Miss Soldene, Miss Vesey, Miss Cecil Ducant, Mr. Knight Asten, Mr. Edward Marshall, and Mr. John Wallace being the principal artists. They are to appear at the Globe Theatre, in Boston, on Monday fortnight.

The last rehearsal of the Philharmonic Society, previous to their first concert, to-morrow evening, may be attended this afternoon at the Academy of Music. The first act of "Die Walküre" and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony will constitute the programme of both entertainments; after the hard work lately done by the orchestra under Dr. Damrosch's direction, an excellent performance can be looked for.

The arrival of Mme. Essipoff by the Labrador was announced in these columns yesterday. In the lady's first concert at Steinway Hall on Nov. 14 she will play the following compositions: Chopin's E minor Concerto, with orchestra; Menett; by Mozart; Gavotte and variations, by Rameau; Nocturne, by Chopin; "Traumeswirren," by Schumann; "Guitare," by Hiller; "Les Alouettes," by Letschetizky; Valse, by Rubinstein, and "Fantaisie Hongroise," with orchestra, by Liszt.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Mme. Stolz has been engaged for St. Petersburg.

Carlo Canti, the music publisher of Milan, is dead.

Mlle. Sangalli, the danseuse, has returned to Paris quite convalescent.

Signor Borioli, of the Regio of Turin, is the new director of the Neapolitan San Carlo.

Mlle. Donadio was recalled only for thirty minutes after the fourth act of "Hamlet," at Moscow.

"Andrette," a one-act comedy of M. Charles de Courcy, has been given at the Gymnase Dramatique, in Paris.

The new opera, "Die Folkunger," by Herr Kretschmer, has been successfully produced at the Imperial Opera-house in Vienna.

M. Jauner, the Vienna manager, asked £4,000 for his contract with Mme. Nilsson when the latter was sought for Russia.

"Lohengrin," with Niemann, Betz, Brandt, and Mallinger, was the opening opera at Berlin, followed by Cherubini's "Water-Carrier."

There is to be a great Mozart festival at the Berlin Opera-house next year, at which the leading German artists and the Princess will assist.

A new drama, entitled "The Sole Survivor, a Tale of the Goodwin Sands," has been produced at the London Grecian, with Mr. G. Conquest in the part of a comic villain.

The second volume [temp. 1697-1733] of the Catalogue of the Musical Library of the Paris Grand Opéra, edited by M. de Lajarte, has just been published by the firm of Jouaust.

Mr. J. L. Toole, commences an engagement at the London Gaiety early next month, and will appear in a new three-act comedy by Mr. J. Albery, and a new burlesque by Mr. R. Reece.

The statement that Mme. Adeline Patti had accepted an engagement to create the principal part in M. Gounod's new opera, "Polyeucte," to be produced during the Exhibition year at the Grand Opera in Paris (1878,) has no foundation. The lady will, after all, fulfill her engagement at Moscow and at St. Petersburg, but her stay in Russia will be limited to eleven weeks. She leaves Paris during the second week in November.

LETTER FROM MR. ELY.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I notice in your paper of yesterday an allusion to the Stuyvesant Bank, of which I was once a Director.

Permit me to explain in a few words my connection with this bank. In December, 1869, a gentleman of my trade called on me and said that a vacancy existed in the Presidency of the bank in which he was a Director, and that he was authorized to offer me the position, which I told him I would accept if the bank was sound. Previous to this I had never been inside the bank building. Two or three days afterward I made a superficial examination of the bank and found almost its whole capital was represented by suspended paper and unavailable securities. Of course I declined to assume the responsibility of its Presidency, and a very excellent gentleman was elected in my stead. I suggested at the time that the bank had better be wound up, but it was determined to go on and endeavor to extricate it from its embarrassments; and as a return for the compliment they paid me, I consented to serve for a time as a Director, in order to aid them. This I did until my engagements at Washington compelled me to be absent from the City, and I told the Cashier I wished he would drop my name from the list of Directors. During my connection with the bank its condition improved, It may be inferred from your article that I was one of a committee, which, on July 1, 1871, made a report, among other things, recommending a dividend from the earnings. I never acted with such a committee, nor made such a report. My whole connection with the institution was gratuitous, and my services were rendered without any hope of compensation. SMITH ELY, JR.

An Important Statement by Prominent Business Men—Every Voter Should Study it Carefully.

To the People of the United States:

In 1865, Aug. 31, the national debt reached its maximum amount	$2,756,431,591 43
A reduction during this period of eleven years since the war of	$656,992,246 44
For the past year, ending June 30, 1876	100,243,271 23
A reduction in the annual interest charge since 1866 of	$32,824,479 46

Other great results of this financial policy have been that, despite an indebtedness of more than two thousand millions, and while diminishing taxation, the credit of the country has been raised to the unprecedented point that its four and a half per centum bonds, issued in redemption of the six per centums, have been selling rapidly, at home and abroad, above par in gold; and the Government has been enabled every year since 1866, not only to keep within its income, but to apply an average annual sum of $56,742,284 20 toward the payment of its indebtedness.

A careful consideration of these results of judicious management of the National Treasury during Republican administration of the Government, induces the undersigned to express their confident belief that a continuation of the same general policy which has so well sustained our commercial honor, and aided so powerfully in the preservation of the Union itself, would be best promoted by the election of General Rutherford B. Hayes and William A. Wheeler to the offices of President and Vice-President of the United States.

POLITICAL.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 1, 1876.

TO THE BUSINESS MEN OF THE UNITED States: Every industrial and commercial interest of our country is languishing. Neither prudence, industry or experience any longer receive their legitimate rewards. While the sources of individual and national prosperity have been drying up, and the value of all kinds of property shrinking in a corresponding proportion, the burdens of taxation, through peculation and wasteful expenditure, have been steadily increasing. Unnecessary and improvident public buildings have been undertaken; our public lands, as well as our national credit, have been squandered upon railway jobbers; offices and public trusts have become articles of commerce in which Cabinet Ministers have participated and which the Executive protects.

These facts are notorious and alarming, and are the natural and inevitable results of conspicuous administrative incapacity at Washington, and of official corruption throughout the land.

A change in the character of the men and the policy of the Federal Administration is an imperative public necessity. To tolerate the follies and the crimes of the Republican officials by deliberately prolonging their power is to make ourselves parties to their guilt.

In obedience to the dictates of a great national necessity the Democratic Party has nominated for the Presidency one whose name is identified by memorable triumphs with all those measures of administrative reform for the want of which the country is now in distress. His long public career has been a continued illustration of economy in the public expenditure, a jealous care of the national credit, a courage ever ready to defy the giant of corruption in his strongholds, the widest experience in public affairs, and an unequaled command of the resources of statesmanship. His signal success in purifying the Government of New-York City; his able and successful war upon the Canal Ring of this State, and its confederates; his reduction of our State taxes about one-half in less than two years, and his own unsullied personal character, satisfy us that he is pre-eminently the man for our Chief Magistrate in the present crisis of the country, and we therefore recommend to your cordial and zealous support at the approaching election the Electoral ticket representing

JUTE CULTURE IN THE UNITED STATES—THE LAWSON MACHINERY FOR PREPARING AND SPINNING JUTE—THE COMPLETE PROCESS IN OPERATION—FELT HAT-MAKING MACHINERY—THE PROCESS OF FELTING—FOWLER'S STEERING PROPELLER—A NOVELTY IN STEAMSHIPS—CRAMP & SONS' MARINE ENGINES.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Oct. 24, 1876.

After inspecting and studying some very fine jute machinery this morning, I propounded to myself the question, "With their climate, why should not the Southern States of this nation produce not only all the jute necessary for domestic consumption, but enough for supplying foreign markets?" I have, after turning the matter well over in my mind, not arrived at any answer to the conundrum. The annual importations of jute and its products are, I believe, somewhere about five million dollars. How much of this is converted into ladies' switches and chignons I cannot say; but the demands of commerce for jute for bagging are large enough to render that question of little consequence. Why, then, should we depend on Asia for our supply of jute? Jute of a very superior quality has been grown in some of the Southern States, and I learn that recent experiments in growing jute in California have met with encouraging success. I think, then, that, with fair capital and judicious management, an enterprise in this direction would prove to be a good investment. Nor do I see why we should not be the principal purveyors of jute in European markets, as we have long been of cotton, especially as proximity is so decidedly in our favor. Jute is not difficult of cultivation. It certainly cannot be a delicate plant with such a fibre as it has. At least that being used on the machinery in operation here would not lead one to suppose so; and certainly there is reason to suppose that the exhibitors would use the best raw material to be obtained for the purpose of exhibiting their machinery. Now that capitalists seem to be weary of the old fields and channels for investment, a consideration of my question may not be without advantage to them. But I must get on to the jute machinery which has led to this preamble about jute and its culture.

Messrs. Lawson & Sons, of Leeds, England, exhibit a complete set of machinery on an extensive scale for preparing and spinning jute suitable for making yarn for cloth or for rope. Visitors to the Exposition at Vienna will remember the fine display this firm made there, and for which they received one of the five grand diplomas of honor, the highest award given, which were all that fell to the lot of Great Britain and Ireland. Their display in Machinery Hall is far more complete than that of Vienna. Indeed it is so complete that visitors can see the whole process of preparing and spinning jute, from the raw material in bulk to the finished articles. The set comprises the following machines, covering a very large area of flooring: Breaker card, finisher card, first drawing, second drawing, roving, spinning, and cop machines.

In the manufacture of jute the raw material has to undergo a process known as "batching," in order to enable the machinery to break so harsh a substance. The process can be and is done either by hand or machinery. It consists in applying a certain quantity of oil and water to the material and then passing it between a number of fluted rollers, heavily weighted, in a machine called a "softener." The jute is then ready for the braker card, in which it is fed on to an endless sheet moving toward a feeding roller. This roller takes hold of the fibre and retains it; while a large drum or cylinder, revolving at a high rate of speed and having wooden lags fitted with very sharp steel pins on its surface, strikes the fibre and tears it asunder. At the same time the jute is carried forward to other rollers, similarly fitted with steel pins, which, in turn, clean and lay the fibre parallel, and from which the fibre is taken off by the "doffer" and delivered into a metal receptacle in front of the machine. The material has now the form of a sheet, or "sliver," as it is termed, and is ready for the second or "finisher" card. The name of this machine speaks for itself. Its action is much the same as that of the breaker card, only more finishing; that is, it lays the fibre still straighter and cleans it more sufficiently so to render it fit for the first drawing frame, the fibre being now ready to be drawing into sizes suitable for the different numbers required for spinning—number one, number two, &c. The first drawing frame has rollers and hackles, which carry the fibre forward to the drawer, where it is drawn and the different fibres of the material are laid as parallel as possible—the more parallel the more suitable for making good yarn. The machine is one of the latest patents brought out by the Lawsons, and consists of a chain gill in place of the old screw or rotary. This innovation, by the simplicity of its working parts, admits of double the amount of work being turned off, while it brings about a great economy of skilled labor. It is certainly a very successful innovation, and it is not surprising that there has been a heavy demand for these machines during the eighteen months which have elapsed since they were patented. From the first the sheer is taken to the second drawing machine, in which it undergoes a similar process, reducing it still more. It then goes to the roving frame, on which, for the third time, it undergoes the process of drawing; but this time, instead of passing from this machine into a receptacle or case, as before, it is wound on to a bobbin, in the shape of the rove and having received a certain twist. The roving and drawing machines of the Lawson pattern are made so simple that, should a lap or choke take place by reason of carelessness on the part of the attendant, the head stops and the accident can at once be remedied, the others working on; for as each head is provided with a distinct motion an accident to one or more can be repaired without stopping the whole machine. Other makers have adopted the principle of two shafts for bringing about the same result; but this requires more wheels and involves more danger from gearing. The Lawsons have also introduced a more direct acting motion into their roving machine in the shape of a scroll in connection with the cone, in the place of the rack and pinion formerly used by them. This arrangement is far simpler and produces a much better result.

The spinning frame is on the improved principle, having its drawing roller made wider on the faces of the bosses, thereby giving it a greater weaving surface. The roller can be moved from right to left by means of a screw. A very ingenious piece of mechanism is also displayed in having the iron plate move all at once, giving the desired angle. This is much better than the old practice of setting the plates, each head by itself, by screws. It saves a great amount of labor and produces better results in spinning. The yarn, after being spun, is, in the case of weft yarn, carried to the "cop" machine, on which it is wound on to a spindle from the bobbin to the required size suitable for the shuttle. This is a great saving of labor compared with the old spool-cop machine. This machine is fitted with various mechanical motions which can be set to suit the various sizes of yarn; a stop motion, which sets each spindle in case the yarn runs out or breaks, also a stop motion to give the required length of cob. The yarn is wound outside on to the cop, and when the cop is fixed in the shuttle, it is drawn from the inside, thereby saving much waste of yarn, and enabling more yarn to be put into the shuttle, and, of course, lessening the number of stoppages of the loom.

Among the smaller exhibits of this firm is an ingenious doffing motion for a flax card. It has only two motions, eccentric and piston, inclosed in a box, and giving an oscillating motion. This is a great improvement on the old system of cranks and levers for flax cards, its great merit being its simplicity. I understand that Messrs. Lawson have not only fitted a great many of these motions on to old cards of their own make, but on to those of others, and in all parts of the world. In all the machinery of Messrs. Lawson the gearing is inclosed in a sort of box-frame end. This not only prevents accidents to the attendants, but keeps off the dust to a great extent. A feature, too, in their exhibit which has excited a good deal of interest is the method of driving the shafting which runs their machinery. It is certainly new to me. In place of wheel gearing or belting, they use ropes and grooved pulleys, it being claimed that by this system the pulleys are more easily driven, while there is less strain on the shafts and bearings. This system has been introduced by Messrs. Lawson into several mills in Great Britain and Ireland, and also in India. Taken as a whole this exhibit of jute machinery is as fine and complete a display as is to be seen in any department of Machinery Hall, and reflects great credit on the enterprise of the firm who transported it all the way from Yorkshire to the Centennial Exhibition.

Of all the processes of manufacture few involve the use of such simple materials as that of making felt hats. A felt hat is a compound of hair and hot water, and if any other manufactured articles can beat that for simplicity I have yet to learn it. I believe that the hair principally used is that of the European rabbit and hare, the beaver, and the nutria, the latter a native of South America, and though smaller, somewhat resembling a beaver. The different kinds of hair are mixed together in a machine which is called a "devil," and the fluffy heap resulting from the mixture is weighed into small parcels of about four ounces each, which are placed in partition boxes by the side of the operating girls. Each parcel contains material enough to make one hat, and on being spread out by the girl on the machine before her, the hair is drawn slowly through a picker which separates it. A blast of air carries it on in single particles through a tube which widens towards the mouth. Opposite the apperture a perforated hollow cone, inside of which is a powerful exhaust, revolves in a vertical position, and catching the hair, holds it by means of the exhaust, till the quantity of hair put into the machine has all been equally distributed over the surface of the cone. A wet cloth is then wrapt round it, a metal cap is put over it, and the whole is immersed in very hot water. On the removal of the cap and cloth, the cone is turned upside down, and the embryo hat easily peels off without breaking; the natural action of the blast and the revolution of the cone intertwining and weaving the hair together after the fashion of the nests of some small birds. At this stage the hat very much resembles in appearance those long sugar-loaf head-pieces which are generally supposed to form an item in the regulation outfit of a negro minstrel. But by continual soaking in hot-water, and friction, in which consists the process of felting, the hat shrinks, becoming "small by degrees and beautifully less" till it has assumed the proportions deemed to be correct by those who make the laws of fashion.

I have given this short description of the preliminary stages of the manufacture of felt hats as a prologue to the description of some very capital machinery which takes up the manufacture just where I left it off and is exhibited here by the Eickemeyer Hat Blocking-machine Company, whose machine shops are at Yonkers, N. Y. The first of these machines is called a tip-stretcher. The body of the hat having been soaked in hot water is placed on a stretching cone attached to the top of a vertical spindle immediately under a series of adjustable stretching fingers. These fingers have an independent upward and downward motion, which is produced by a crank driven by a pulley making 100 revolutions a minute. After each operation of the fingers upon the hat body, the hat is shifted on the cone, and the process is continued until the tip is satisfactorily stretched or drawn out. I should have said that the stretching cone is gradually pushed up while the stretching fingers are in operation. So far, however, that part of the hat which will hereafter be fashioned into the brim has not been reached by the stretching fingers. This part of the hat is stretched on another machine of somewhat similar construction and general working to the tip stretcher, except that the hat is put upon a metal block, which is adjustable to the height of the crown by means of a screw handle, one complete turn of which reduces or increases the height of the hat block one size. When the machine is in operation the block is raised to the required height, bringing the stretching ribs into working position, and the supporting ribs of the brim are also spread out. After ten or fifteen stretchings have been made the block is lowered and the hat is turned on the block so as to bring the stretching fingers into a position to act where the supporting ribs acted before. The stretching is then repeated till the purpose has been answered.

Another process through which the hat passes is shaving and pouncing. This is also done by machinery. Three conical-shaped rollers point to a common centre, two of them being feed rollers and the third the cutting roller; and as the hat is fed into the machine it is shaven as close as may be desired, there being machines for the brim and machines for the body of the hat. A suction blower which is attached to the end of the spindle of the cutting roller, and is connected by a jointed pipe with the cutting roller, carries off the cuttings—to the advantage of the machine and especially to the advantage of the health of the operator. Then there are machines for ironing the brim and crown, and also for blocking the hat. In fact an inspection of the Eickemeyer Company's machinery only shows how thoroughly hand-work is being superseded by labor-saving machinery in every department of manufacture.

Among the more recent mechanical inventions exhibited at the Centennial is the steering propeller invented by Mr. F. G. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., as exemplified in a beautiful little working model careering about in a miniature lake in Machinery Hall, and the Bonita, a fully equipped vessel, which is constantly making short voyages on the Schuylkill River. I do not pretend to say whether or no this new principle is likely to create a revolution in the steam-ship world, but I can vouch for the wonderful performances of the little model to be seen here. I will endeavor to give the readers of THE NEW-YORK TIMES a conception of its working. The steering propeller is submerged at the stern of the boat and rotates in an upright shaft, the lower end of which is supported by an extension of the keel. Motion is communicated to this shaft by a horizontal engine, which is coupled to it directly, without the intervention of gearing. The propeller consists of horizontal arms, keyed to the shaft, and supporting vertical blades at their extremities. These blades are hung on pivots, and have an oscillating motion of about thirty degrees. The motion is produced by an eccentric with which each blade is connected, the adjustment being such that the blades are given two sculling strokes for each revolution, so as to pull on the forward half and to push on the after half of their circuit. As the blades revolve they describe the position of the body of a fish while swimming, and as said by scientific men to produce the same mechanical effects. The propelling force is exerted in the direction of the short radius of the eccentric, and as this is connected by a sleeve and suitable gearing to the helm or steering wheel, the steersman is enabled to turn the eccentric and thereby cast the propelling force to any point of the compass. For this reason there is no necessity for reversing the engine in backing. Neither is there any necessity for reversing gear or rudder, the propeller serving the treble purpose of propeller, rudder, and reversing gear. The propeller is rendered strong and durable by being constructed of forged metal, while it is so arranged that the wearing parts can be renewed at a trifling cost. A special patent device also obviates the chance of corrosion of the wheel and its joints. The wheel is provided with a steering index which always points out to the steersman the direction in which the propelling force is exerted, enabling him to control it at will. Mr. Fowler's invention would appear to embody the perfection of manœuvring. Notably, it will turn a vessel on her own centre, either to the right or to the left, by steam alone; it will enable a vessel to follow a narrow and tortuous channel at full speed in backing; or to steam out of a narrow slip, where there is little or no room to go ahead or back, by squaring away sideways, or, again, to make a figure of eight around two stakes, placed half the length of the boat apart, either in going ahead or in backing. The working model illustrating these principles in the tank in Machinery Hall is about twenty inches in length and is driven by power. But the steam-yacht Bonita, on the Schuylkill, is, of course, more interesting to those visitors to the Exhibition who can find or make the time to visit her. She is fitted with the same propeller-steering apparatus as I have described. Her machinery is the design of Mr. Fowler; her hull and woodwork were constructed by Mr. Frederick Wood, also of Bridgeport. Her length, over all, is 50 feet, her beam 7½ feet, and her draught of water 2½ feet. She is constructed with a forward cabin 10 feet long, and has a cock-pit aft of the same dimensions, the intervening space being occupied by the boiler, donkey pump, &c. Her engine is located aft, and is a simple horizontal, high-pressure engine, with a 9-inch cylinder and 9-inch stroke, cutting off at 7 inches; the ports being on the under side of the cylinder, and always admitting the passage of condensed water through them. The bed-plate is tubular and is secured to three bulk-heads, which are fastened to the keel, stern-post, and planking, thus rendering the whole firm and rigid. The wheel is 36 inches in diameter, is 14 inches deep, and has an effective pitch of 4 feet 8 inches, and a maximum velocity of 350 revolutions a minute. The Bonita is a very fast boat, and has astonished the Schuylkill boatmen, especially in backing past their passenger steamers which were going ahead. But this is a sort of thing which, of course, no Schuylkill fellow of a boatman can be supposed to understand. Mr. Fowler offers to try the Bonita in any series of competitive trials with any boat in the world, length allowance to be made, where there is a difference of dimensions. He proposes seven different trials, and they surely, when considered, would appear to be ample to define the superiority, or otherwise of his novel system. They are, first, a straight course ahead, to demonstrate efficiency when steaming ahead. Second, a straight course astern, to demonstrate efficiency in backing. Third, a curvilinear course ahead, to test steering power in connection with steaming ahead, such as is required in following crooked channels, turning in narrow channels, avoiding collisions, naval manœuvres, &c. Fourth, a curvilinear course astern, to test steering power when backing. Fifth, turning a boat on her centre by steam, or shifting her end for end, such as is required in "winding" a boat at her dock or manœuvring in naval actions. Sixth, a trial in shoal water, to test the efficiency of propellers of light draught. Seventh and last, a trial in rough water, to demonstrate the satisfactory working of propellers when partly submerged, and to test their efficiency in bringing a vessel out of the trough of the sea, head on. Such is the bold challenge which Mr. Fowler offers to the builders of steam-ships. The acceptance of such a challenge would involve little or no expense, and it might result in proving that a new and very valuable principle of propelling and steering steam-ships has been discovered. If otherwise, no one will be hurt, save Mr. Fowler, and he will have only himself to thank for his discomfiture. By the way, Mr. Fowler's principle is applied to Admiral Porter's United States steam-torpedo boat, the Alarm, which, unless my memory fails me, acquitted herself so creditably in the experiments which were conducted at Newport about a year ago, and was then pronounced by competent naval authorities to be a very easily handled and, at the same time, formidable craft.

Among the comparatively few exhibits of marine steam-engines the two exhibited by Messrs. Cramp & Sons, Philadelphia, appear to me to be the most worthy of notice. Of these two engines one is a single vertical, direct-acting, surface-condensing marine propeller. Its cylinders have a 20-inch bore, with a piston-rod stroke of 22 inches. It is designed for a tug-boat 85 feet long, 17 feet beam, and 9 feet depth of hold, and is rated at 135 horse-power. The other engine is a compound engine, of the same general design and for the same purpose, it being intended for a tug-boat 100 feet long, 20 feet beam, and 10 feet depth of hold. This engine has 210 horse-power. Both engines are fitted with vertical air-circulating feed-pumps, connected with a cross-head by links to the beam, and worked by the motion of the cross-head of the main engine. The condensers are conical-shaped and form a part of the bed-plate supporting the housing and girders, and with two bearings cast on the top for the fulcrum of the pump beams. The condensers have 550 inches of horizontal brass tubing, each tube 4 feet 6 inches long, with a screw-gland packing in the tube-sheets. The cylinders are supported by the housing cast on the condenser and on columns bolted on the bed-plate. The reversing engine is situated forward of the starboard corner of the bed-plate. The compound engine has the slide valve only, and is without expansion gear beyond that which is given by link motion. These engines are exceedingly good specimens of marine engineering. Their design is admirable, and their compactness, the accessibility of all the parts, and the facility of reversing, either by hand or by steam, strike one at the first glance. Apart from these points, the fineness of the castings and the general excellence of the workmanship throughout is worthy of the high reputation of the great ship-building firm by whom they are exhibited. DEATH OF AN ACTOR'S WIFE.

The Baltimore Sun of Wednesday says: "The wife of Mr. Louis L. James, the leading actor in Ford's Grand Opera-house Company, died at Guy's Hotel last evening, while her husband was playing the part of William Meister in Maggie Mitchell's play of "Mignon." Mr. John T. Ford was at once apprised of Mrs. James's death, and it was thought best not to break the sad news to Mr. James until the play was ended. Mr. Charles E. Ford and Miss Annie Ford rendered all the kind offices at the hotel in their power, and met Mr. James on his arrival. Mrs. James had been suffering since coming here at the opening of the season, being prostrated after making the journey from San Francisco. She was under treatment from Dr. McKew, and last evening, before her husband left for the theatre was ill, but he did not think death was imminent. Mrs. James was from Philadelphia, about twenty-four years of age, and the mother of a little girl about five and a boy three years old. She did not belong to the theatrical profession."

CATHOLIC CONGRESS IN BOLOGNA.

DEMONSTRATIONS OF HOSTILITY TO THE GOVERNMENT—THE POPULACE UNDER GREAT EXCITEMENT—THE CONGRESS ADJOURNED BY THE POLICE—NEWSPAPERS WITH BUT LITTLE ENTERPRISE—SALES OF ECCLESIASTICAL PROPERTY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ROME, Saturday, Oct. 14, 1876.

The City of Bologna which, after Rome, was by far the most important of those of the former Papal possessions, has long shown itself one of the most radical in its anti-Papal sympathies. For several years past have been held in various cities what have been called Catholic Congresses, and this year Bologna was chosen as the place of reunion. The impression among Italians is that these meetings of Catholic delegates are meant as demonstrations of hostility to the Government of the country, and some of the proceedings in past years have justified such an opinion. The Congress, in coming together the present week, had hardly completed its organization before it became evident that the feeling in the town was so strongly against it, that unless the authorities took a decided stand on one side or the other, the risk was great of public confusion. The Church of the Trinita had been transformed into a hall of reunion, and the presiding officer was the Cardinal Morichini. Among the delegates were many holding a very respectable position in the Catholic party, and there were present half a dozen or more Bishops. The show of hostility on the part of the public began on the first day by the gathering of large numbers in the streets near the place of reunion, saluting with hisses and howlings the members as they came out. Then, from the windows all over the town was hung out the national flag, a symbol not yet accepted as orthodox by the friends of the Pope in the old States of the Church. A procession was formed, followed by a confused crowd, which moved to the residence of the Prefect for the purpose of asking that, for the preservation of the peace of the city, an order might be given for the Congress to be closed. From every side were heard cries of "Abbasso i preti! Abbasso il Congresso Cattolico!" ("Down with the priests! Down with the Catholic Congress!") In the evening succeeded a noisy demonstration under the windows of the residence of the Cardinal Archbishop and the houses of some of the more conspicuous promoters of the Catholic movement. It soon became evident by the number of those taking part in the demonstration and their condition as citizens, in what direction the current of public feeling was generally set, and the Prefect gave the order for the Congress to be closed. There was the choice between a violation of the right of reunion, conceded by the laws, and a concession to the strong feeling of the population, which might have led to acts of violence. There has been an apparent violation of the principle of liberty upon which the Italian State is founded, and which has already produced so many good results. We here, can easily enough understand the situation, and can pardon this single violation of right. If there is a crime that a sincere lover of his country cannot forgive, it is that act of a class or party which is ready to invite an Army of foreign soldiers to invade the country, to destroy its unity and independence, and the liberties that have been won by many sacrifices and centuries of humiliation. And every Italian knows that such is the end to which the efforts of the clerical party are directed.

The memory of the cruel fate of Ugo Bassi is still alive in Bologna, and that must always remain among the darkest passages in the history of the Papal Administration of a quarter of a century ago. The action of the population in the recent proceedings has been criticised by the organs of conservative or reactionary views, but we all know that the object is one nearly hopeless—that of the revival both within and beyond the borders of the country, of an influence now exhausted, of legitimacy and temporal rule. Italy has made a pretty thorough trial of the cure prescribed by the Pontiff for the ills of society and the State, and is ready to run the risk of the experiments making by England, Germany, and the United States.

We have had in the newspapers to-day, the speech made by the head of the Ministry, on Sunday last, at Stradella, the little town in the North which Signor Depretis represents in Parliament. A proof of the small amount of newspaper enterprise there is in Italy, is found in the fact that the public have been kept waiting for five or six days for the text of a discourse considered one of the most important, as an exponent of policy of the Government, of any for some time pronounced by the Minister of the Crown. It is true, the newspapers are small and are generally sold for one cent; but the circulation of some of them is considerable, reaching as high as eight and ten thousand. It cannot cost much to print them, as the type is large, the paper of common quality, and the price paid to compositors one-third or one-half what is given in America. One would think that Italians capable of writing their own language would wish to give their countrymen information about the United States, and particularly interesting facts about the great Exposition. Many instructed Italians must have been, the past Summer, in our cities; but in the newspapers here hardly a word is seen by which the people of this country may be informed of what is going on. It is this ignorance in which these inhabitants are left of the great world of the West which is one of the causes of the blunders that are made and the deceit practiced in Italian emigration—blunders which better-informed northern people do not fall into. This neglect to communicate intelligence is a loss to the country in many ways.

The official journal publishes a statement of the amount of sales of ecclesiastical property since the year 1867; or from the time that the law was passed turning such property to public uses. For the whole period up to the end of 1875, the amount of income derived from sales was 505,358,000 francs, and the number of lots or parcels of property was 114,693. The sum at which the whole was estimated by the Government was 392,653,000 francs, and the difference represents the higher rates received in bids at the public sale. Up to the end of September, the present year, the whole number of lots sold was 118,589, and the gross sum received 514,118,000 francs, on a Government estimate of 399,642,000 francs. The regular monthly sales continue, ranging from 500 to 1,000 lots, bringing in from eight hundred thousand to a million of francs. There is a good deal more to be disposed of, and these houses and lands are proving to be a mine of no inconsiderable wealth. There is the added advantage in the improvements that are immediately made, as the property passes into private hands, with an increase of the general wealth. The Government has reserved many buildings for its own uses, and every commune and considerable city has shared in the division of such structures as could be turned to account. There are many convents still occupied by the monks as a temporary privilege, or it can be seen to what use they can be put. Thirty-two or more of such monastic buildings in and about Naples, have been handed over to the public within a short time, and a demand is made for more of such concessions here in Rome. Rome is now overrun with Spanish "pilgrims," a vagabond mode of moving from one country to another, and particularly to Rome, which mode of traveling, however, within a few years has been much encouraged by the Pope. The new fashion is not without a certain commercial value, first to the lords of the Vatican, and afterward to the custodians of the public monuments and the shop-keepers of the city. It may be deemed a curious fact that the Mayor has ordered a temporary increase of the Police force during the stay of these two or three thousand Spaniards, of whom a considerable portion are priests and women. On the whole, the visit of these Spaniards to Rome ought to have a good effect if they have sufficient intelligence to profit by it, for here, by observation they may discover what can be done, after the road of improvement is well entered upon, to bring about beneficent changes.

The Spaniards have been treated with civility by the Romans, although they do not sympathize with the motive which has brought them here. Few of the pilgrims are lodged in first-class hotels, as most of them are not in condition to pay excessive metropolitan prices. Not very liberal provision has been made by the agents of the Vatican to extend hospitality, and, indeed, on the arrival of one of the squads of three hundred, or more, not knowing where to seek shelter, the whole would have been obliged to pass the night under the open sky, had not the Police found a lodgment for them in the public establishments.

LIFE IN THE FRENCH CAPITAL.

THE EXCITEMENT ON THE PARIS BOURSE—HOW SPECULATORS ARE AFFECTED BY ABSURD RUMORS—A GREAT STATESMAN AND A PRACTICAL FARMER—HOW LOST DOGS ARE RECLAIMED—THE ROMANCE OF A POOR AMERICAN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Oct. 20, 1876.

Since the year 1870 we have not seen the Bourse so agitated as it has been during the past few days, during which we have had what the French call a deringolade. Funds of all sorts fell five francs, and rentes and consols were greatly affected. In the evening the boulevards were blocked up between the Rue Lafitte and the Rue Lepelettier by crowds of anxious speculators, many of them having terror depicted upon their faces. The neighboring cafés were full of men who wore looks of anxiety which could not be concealed, and there appears to have been good reason. In the midst of the affair, some one spread the report that the Duc Decazes had resigned, that Count Andrassy had retired from the Austrian Ministry, and Von Beust called to Vienna by the Emperor. For about an hour the Little Bourse was terribly excited over these reports. It is clear that they are systematically put in circulation by men who are "bearing" the market, for as soon as the effect of this had worn off a little they started the rumor that, in view of the certainty of a European war, the French Government had determined to postpone the Exposition for one year, or until 1879. Of course, there was no truth in any of these stories, but they produced the expected effect, and sent the funds down immensely. The worst of the matter is that the market has shown a downward tendency ever since, and if things keep on in this way for twenty-four hours more, we shall be menaced with a financial crisis. All this proceeds from the feeling that war cannot be avoided, but nothing has been decided at the time I write. All depends upon the resolutions taken at Livadia, and they will be sent you by telegraph before this letter crosses the Atlantic.

M. Thiers has returned to Paris, but is still occupying himself actively with diplomacy, inviting the foreign representatives to his house in the Place Saint George, and talking to them by the hour about the necessities of the moment. M. Thiers, like all the statesmen of his epoch, is a furious Turk. He foresees and predicts the greatest danger if the Ottoman Empire is dismembered. This comes from the old idea of the "balance of power," which can never be eradicated from the minds of the statesmen of the 1830 period. These evenings with M. Thiers are extremely interesting, for he is a remarkable talker. He has the faculty of expressing himself fluently, about all that he knows—and he knows a great deal—and knows how to throw in little anecdotes and bits of personal experience, which charm while fixing the attention. He is a wonderful causeur, and knows it. His habit of talking whenever he has an audience has led to a number of stories, one of them being that of a practical farmer who was sent for to give M. Thiers the results of his experience. The statesman wanted information about the agricultural state of the country, in order to make up a report. The agriculturist arrived, and was warmly received. M. Thiers took his favorite place with his back against the mantel, and told the farmer why he had been sent for, and then launched out into a discourse upon farming. He told him what kind of manure should be used on certain soils, how seeds should be planted, how stock should be treated, and discoursed for an hour in the most admirable manner. Suddenly M. Thiers looked at his watch.

"I am sorry to say," he said, "that my time is up, but I have had a satisfactory interview, and I shall not fail to embrace your ideas in my report."

The farmer looked up in surprise.

"Good day," continued M. Thiers, "and allow me to express my thanks for the valuable information you have given me upon the practical agriculture of the country."

During the whole interview the farmer had not expressed a single opinion, and had only bowed from time to time his assent to the views of M. Thiers. Yet the latter gave him credit for a remarkable stock of knowledge in his report and in his book. He now sends for the different diplomatists to get information from them, and talks to them incessantly for hours, giving them no time to put in a word. But, as I have already remarked, these conversations are wonderfully interesting.

We have here a small journal called Les Petites Affiches, in which people advertise for servants, for places, houses to let, or offer rewards for objects lost. This has been used of late for a species of industry very common in England—the finding of lost dogs. Recently the number of advertisements in this journal of dogs found, which could be reclaimed by their owners upon payment of a small recompense and the cost of keeping to date, attracted the attention of the Police. They saw that a company had been formed for this special business. Last week over fifty dogs were found, and all taken to the same place, where they were reclaimed by their owners upon the payment of money, the sum varying according to the evident value of the animal. Orders were given to the Police to look out for the rascals. Yesterday a lady was passing one of the courts with a magnificent grayhound, when a man held out a bit of meat and enticed the animal into the passage. The gendarme on the corner saw the act, but just as he started forward an accomplice of the thief gave a sharp whistle. Meanwhile the lady was running about in great distress calling for her dog. The accomplice continued to whistle, running by the passage, and in a moment the dog came bounding out, followed soon after by an individual who walked away unconcernedly to join the whistler on the corner. The latter decamped when the gendarme laid his hand upon the shoulder of the thief. This individual was a great coward, and revealed the secrets of the band of dog-thieves, so that several of them have been arrested. They will be imprisoned not less than six months each, for the Parisians of all classes are very fond of dogs, and they are invariably protected. It seems that the band broken up yesterday had found the business extremely lucrative. Only the other day a prima donna of the opera bouffe gave $100 for the recovery of a pet poodle, a Havannois, pure breed, and a Russian gave the same sum for a magnificent Levrier.

The Figaro of this morning tells a story of an American heritage, which is very good, if true. A short time ago a coachman was busily engaged in cleaning the carriage of his employer in the Avenue de la Reine Hortense, when a man came from the American Consulate and said to him: "You are Tom A——."

"Yes, that's my name," said the coachman.

"Then you are requested to come to the Consulate and claim a legacy left you by your uncle in New-York."

"What! the uncle who kept a hotel?"

"Yes."

"And how much is it?"

"Eight millions of francs."

The journal says that the legacy was duly obtained—that Tom, who had been a wild boy, and, after running through his money, had turned coachman to earn an honest living—has bought a house in Paris; that he gave a grand dinner last night, at which his employers were present, and that he now rides in his own carriage through the Bois de Boulogne. This is something like the romance of my nearest neighbor, who died a few months ago, who inherited $5,000,000 from an uncle as unexpectedly as the coachman. Tom

POLICING THE SHOW.

HOW THE CROWD IS CARED FOR.

THE MODEL POLICEMAN—POLITENESS—NUMBER OF THE FORCE—THEIR DUTIES—LOST CHILDREN—LOST CHATTELS—THE CASES OF ARRESTS—GENERAL CHARACTER OF DELINQUENCIES—EXCELLENT CHARACTERISTICS OF THE CENTENNIAL POLICEMEN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PHILADLPHIA, Friday, Oct. 27, 1876.

Theoretically, the policeman ought to be urbanity in person, civil and fair-spoken, and capable of replying to ten thousand silly and useless questions in the most gracious and bland manner. Really, that ideal personage seems to have been found in the Centennial policeman. As far as the amenities go, these people on the force have been models in their way. But to be simply affable and mannerly would not have alone sufficed. The hands covered with the No. 9 Berlin gloves ought to have been able to clutch the thief, or extinguish rows, and the Centennial police have not only been suave, but efficient, as necessity required. There have been many Jobs for patience among this police. Perhaps the cross and surly men were extirpated early in the season. Very certain it is, that from personal experience I have had yet to find the first guardian of the peace at the Exhibition who has not been perfectly Grandisonian in speech and manner, and always ready to impart information in the most good-humored way. I think, then that Capt. W. A. Hoyt, the senior officer of the force, and their Adjutant, who has managed pretty generally the active work of the Police on the grounds, can be justly proud of these better qualities of his men, for he has informed me that he has had so far but three complaints made as to the rudeness of his subordinates. In two of the cases, Capt. Hoyt tells me, that the men said they had been ill and were therefore irritable, and, with an admonishment, these men were allowed to try again, whereas a third, who owned up "that when people kept bedeviling him for five hours on a stretch at a time, with nary a let up, he got naturally ugly." This touchy offender was summarily dismissed.

The Centennial force consists at present of 671 men, with six Captains, three Lieutenants, and forty-two Sergeants; is divided into five companies, there being just that number of precincts to guard at the Exhibition. At the opening of the show, something over one thousand men were on duty, but, as the force became more proficient, the number has been gradually curtailed. I do not think any crowd in the world is so inherently good as an American one. It seems to know how to take care of itself, and, though full of fun, it has an intuitive perception of how things are to be done, and is rarely given to panics. It is a curious throng, bent on seeing all it can for its money, and somewhat given to short cuts and going where it has no business to go, but it takes its orders, from those in authority, and is not given to chaff or ridicule people who are entitled to direct its movements. This vast swarm is invariably polite to the women, no small portion of its mass, and squeezes and hustles as little as possible. But the important element in the American multitude is this: it has its eyes always open and is never stupid. I do not know how many people the West-end Railroad has killed. It was physically impossible that constant trains of cars tearing around the grounds at all times, through so many people, should not have caused accidents; but I am pretty certain that had similar methods of conveyance been employed on like occasions in England, France, or Germany, a hecatomb of poor creatures would have been Juggernauted every twelve hours. The very good order that has made the show so remarkable, is due then a great deal to the natural character of the masses, and in no small measure to the efficiency of the Police. Perhaps there never was a show where that disagreeable thing, man-power, exerted in a physical way, was so little called upon. Nothing can be more annoying to visitors than to be told to "move to the right or to the left," or to "pass on and not to loiter." I have never seen, save on one or two occasions, when the Woman's Department and the Kansas State Building were packed, any effort to control ingress or egress, and when it had to be done it was quietly, though thoroughly, managed. Women will, of course, sometimes stand right in the way at the places of exit, discussing the Exhibition, their general impressions, and news from home, and though they block the way no policeman ever disperses them.

The duties of the policemen are more or less various. Private Brown, who passes near the Boucheron diamonds, in the French exhibit, is not simply ornamental. He is poetically the dragon watching the Hesperian fruit. Maybe he is very sick of it by this time. I do not suppose that any burglar has mined under the foundations of the Main Building from Elm avenue directly under the case, and that some day a dirty hand will protrude upward through the velvet lining, and clutching the $40,000 parure, disappear with the prize. But as this flashing exhibit hives the crowd, and a bevy of admiring women feast their eyes, as they lean forward, forgetful of portmonaies, the gallant Smith keeps on hand quite a stock of vigilance for the diamonds first, and a reserve of surveillance for the sight-seers and pickpockets.

Now, if we could sum up all the petty thievings and purloinings from the stands of exhibitors, the aggregate loss would be a large one as to value, but really insignificant compared with the enormous amount of things exposed. The most serious loss, so I am led to understand, took place in one of the English colonial exhibits, where a nugget of gold, worth somewhere in the neighborhood of $80, mysteriously disappeared. Certainly, the show is just one of those places where kleptomania was sure to develop itself. The most general thieving has taken place in the Italian department where rubbishing trinkets are sold, and in the numerous so-called Syrian, Turkish, and Algerian bazaars; where no doubt no end of rosaries have been taken away by irreligious people. Exhibitors have been themselves very much to blame, in not keeping stricter watch, but when it is remembered that there are many thousands of employés always in the buildings, it would be unfair to put the peculations entirely to the account of the visitors.

Main Building, being the place where the greatest quantity of valuables is massed, is guarded by 230 men. Machinery Hall has 120 men, and to this force the five men are added. In the Government Building the Centennial Policemen are dispensed with, the United States policing her exhibits with her own enlisted men. Of course, during the day, the duties of the force are constant in character. Though no one is going to lug away the Krupp gun in Main Building, the eyes of the policemen are always on the watch. In Memorial Hall, should some æsthetic thief carry off a good many pictures and statues, though the loss to art would be small, still people have no right to prod ugly canvas with their umbrellas, nor to lay their bludgeons (Centennial canes, still cut from the battle fields of Virginia!) with a whack across the backs and legs of the clumsy or vulgar marble nudities. It is the duty of the policeman in the art galleries to prevent just such things, and they are generally kept quite busy attending to their duties. In Summer time, when the parterres were all aglow, the policemen watched the plants closely, here the crowd were so universally careful of the flowers that but very few cases brought merited punishment on the offenders.

One special function of the police is to put people straight when they get tangled up and snarled, and to find them or their goods when they get lost or astray. Now, when one remembers that so far 8,321,478 human beings have been to this show, the number of people, big and little, or their goods and chattels, which have been lost is remarkably small. Some cases of lost people are quite curious. Quite a pretty, young woman was found the other day in the grounds, who in the most cheerful way announced that "she was lost." She had been separated from her party. "In which building?" asked the Policeman. "Hadn't the least idea." "Where was she stopping in Philadelphia?" "How should she know? She had arrived at night." "Did she know the name of the hotel?" "It was stupid. but indeed she didn't." "What was her name, and where did she come from?" "Oh, yes; she knew that. She was Mrs. ——, from Sacramento, and her husband was there. She had no relatives East. Oh, she could manage it. Here was her purse, and please wouldn't somebody telegraph to her husband, who knew at what hotel she was going to stay in Philadelphia, and her husband would get her all right. No, she wasn't a bit bothered, and if the Captain would only let the very gentlemanly policeman who had found her take her round the Centennial, while an answer was coming from Sacramento, she wouldn't waste her time." The telegraph message was sent to California, the husband replied, and the little lady, at a cost of some twenty-five dollars, found out where she was staying, and was returned to her hotel and to her friends that evening. Of lost children, some three hundred and fifty have been returned to their homes by the Police, but fully four times as many children have been recovered by their parents at the Centennial Police head-quarters, and of these no registry has been kept. More boys are lost than girls. As to ages, a baby of two years old has been found, and young women of twenty are among the waifs. Boys of about ten are the most uncomfortable in their temporary bereavement, as they blubber outrageously, and knuckle their eyes, embossing their faces in a very unbecoming way. When a big girl is lost she may be thoroughly frightened, too much so in fact to cry. Almost any hour of the day we may see a lost child at Head-quarters. The guileless confidence of a little lost one, as it is marched along, uplifted on a stalwart policeman's shoulders is pleasant to see. There are apples and nuts in store for such. Generally the scene concludes by a grand rush made by the careless mother, who bounces in, swoops up her little darling, kisses it, cries over it, and generally marches out again, without thanking anybody. The registry-book kept at the office is a varied one—amusing as to character, men and pocket-books, women and shawls, all gone astray, being indicated. "Mrs. Dill has lost Mrs. Niil. Mrs. D. will be back at 2 o'c. to see if Mrs. N. has turned up." "Mrs. C'Areless is separated from her husband. Should Mrs. C'Areless come to the office, tell her her boarding-house is at No. 9,846 Hutton street."

Lost articles—unreclaimed, of course—abound. There are spectacles and eye-glasses by the gross, veils by the wisps, gloves (all odd ones) by the bale, an assortment of men's and women's head coverings, fans enough to raise the wind of a cyclone, and umbrellas in sufficient quantity to keep off a deluge. There are quantities of shawls and wraps—some cashmeres among them—a cord and more of sticks, and no end of nondescript articles. As people do not call for these things, these disjecta membra are likely to remain on hand as spoils of the show.

One would fancy that all the light-fingered gentry in the country would have come to batten on the gobe-mouchés at the show. Some forty-three detectives are always around on the watch for thieves, and intent on spotting nefarious characters. So far 150 pickpockets have been captured, who will spend some of the Centennial year in quod. The records of arrests, taken at random from the books of the Police, are amusing in character. "Jumping fence," a crime of trespass, is one easily disposed of. The fence-jumper is liable to a fine of $10, or to twenty days' incarceration. One determined sight-seer, on the occasion of the late fire-works, did climb the fence and dropped into a Policeman's arms. The intruder had not only to pay his fifty cents, but suffered confinement in a dark room, where he remained until the last squib on this glad occasion had been exploded, and then, deprived of the brilliant corruscations, the show being richer by a half dollar, this Peeping Tom was summarily dismissed. Occasionally, people do come in tipsy, escaping the vigilance of the outside Police, but they have a short shrift inside. A man too carried away by over-sampling in Agricultural Hall, may be limp on his legs, but he is quickly put outside. Fights are rather uncommon, but sometimes occur. Mostly it arises between rival exhibitors. Two men, of ingenious turns of minds, invent two of the best butter churns in the world, get at logger-heads, and end by punching one another's heads, and are both arrested. This is quite natural. Possibly, if Krupp and Gatlin were exhibiting their pretty toys side by side, they would like to load up and exchange broadsides. Begging, peddling in the grounds, selling without a license, passing counterfeit money, (in one case it was a Turk, who was pretty sure that he would see the Bosphorus without his ears,) fast driving, leaving horses unhitched, cruelty toward animals, (Capt. Hoyt being a warm admirer of Mr. Bergh,) bothering pictures or statues, make up the general character of the delinquencies. One amusing cause of trouble originates from disputes at the restaurant of the Trois Frères Provencaux, Hobson and Dobson, of Tamaqua, dinnerless, and with stupendous appetites, are naturally allured by the fragrant odors emanating from the excellent cuisine of this very extravagant place of resort. In sheer ignorance and innocence, without a careful examination of the prices, they order a succulent and plentiful dinner. When picking their teeth after their luxurious meal, feeling perfectly contented, the obsequious mutton-chop-whiskered French waiter brings in the bill, and Hobson and Dobson are horror-stricken. Both their lean purses would not pay half the wretched total, and they have no idea of walking back to Tamaqua. They dispute the bill and abuse the waiter, who scorns them and calls them cochons, and a row ensues. Almost always the Police deals delicately with such cases. As for myself, my sympathies are entirely on the side of Hobson and Dobson, and I am sincerely glad that they have a good square meal (un diner carré?) at the expense of the Trois Frères. The three brothers can better afford it than can our friends Hobson and Dobson. At the next Centennial I trust the character of the food at the majority of the restaurants in the Main Building will be under surveillance, as things to eat there are mostly disgustly dirty, unwholesome, and generally abominal in character.

As far as policeing the show goes then, the work of officers and men at the Centennial having been of a most novel and arduous character, your correspondent is inclined to give them no small guerdon of praise. B. P.

THE HIGHEST MONUMENT IN THE WORLD.

The new cast-iron spire of the cathedral at Rouen has just been completed. The Semaine Religieuse of that diocese publishes the following particulars relative to the comparative heights of the principal monuments of the globe, as contrasted with this new work. None of the structures raised by the hand of man has made so magnificent or so lofty a pedestal for the Christian Cross. The dome of St. Peter's, at Rome, the marvel of modern art, thrown up to the skies by the genius of Bramante and Michael Angelo, has raised the emblem to 452 feet above the ground. Strasburg, the highest cathedral in all France, reaches, with its celebrated clock tower, 465 feet; Amieus, 439 feet; Chartres, 399 feet; Notre Dame, at Paris, has only 222 feet. The Paris Panthorn, considered one of the boldest edifices, does not exceed 308 feet, the cross included. On another side, the highest pyramid, that of Cheops, measures 478 feet according to some travelers, 465 feet according to others, and this latter calculation is the one generally adopted—a height which no known human construction has hitherto exceeded. The pyramid of Chephrem has 436 feet, that of Mycorenus 177 feet. Among more modern edifices the dome of St. Paul's, London, has 360 feet, that of Milan, 375 feet; the Hotel de Ville, of Brussels, 352 feet; the Square Tower of Asinelli, (Italy,) 351 feet; the dome of the Invalides, Paris, 344 feet. St. Sophia at Constantinople only rises to 190 feet; the leaning tower of Pisa to 187 feet; the Arc de Triomphe, Paris, to 144 feet; the Pantheon of Agrippa to 141 feet; the Observatory of Paris to 88 feet. The dome of the Capitol at Washington, including its statue, reaches 307 feet in height, Trinity Church steeple being 284 feet. From these figures, which are given in round numbers, it will be seen that the spire of Rouen, which has a height of 492 feet, is the most elevated monument in the world. The old one, commenced in 1544, on the plans of Robert Becquet, destroyed by the fire of Sept. 15, 1822, and which was justly considered one of the boldest and most perfect works in existence, had a height of 433 feet; it was therefore 59 feet less than the present spire.

AN ARMY WITHOUT A FLAG.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

The Figaro reminds us that the French Army has no flags, and that on the 2d of June, 1871, the War Minister issued an order that the standards then in use were to be handed over to the artillery. In exchange, small flags without any inscriptions were served out provisionally. The artillery destroyed the silk of the old standards and sent the eagles and the gold fringe to the Domain Office, where they will probably remain until we have another Empire. The provisional flags, which have now been in use for five years, possess a great advantage as far as economy is concerned; they only cost twenty-five francs apiece, while the silk standards, with their ornaments, cost 280 francs. It is not, perhaps, a question of expenditure which hinders the War Office from bringing this provisional state of affairs to a close, but doubtless a difficulty about replacing the eagle. The fleurs-de-lys are out of the question; so is the Gallic cock, which has been monopolized by the Orleans family; the lady in Phrygian cap who symbolizes the Republic, and who is playfully called Marianne, is only in favor with the Radicals, and the moderate Republic has neither symbol nor song. Taken alone, the tri-color belongs to the Revolution, the Empire, and the younger branch of the Bourbons. Perhaps it would be prudent, until the Conservative Republic is more firmly established, to leave the top of the flagstaff in its present nude condition.

THE SAN JUAN COUNTRY.

SILVER DISCOVERIES IN COLORADO.

THRIFTY TOWNS AND PERMANENT SETTLEMENTS—ALL TRADES AND PROFESSIONS REPRESENTED—A TOWN 11,000 FEET HIGH—THE LARGE AMOUNT OF ORE ON HAND—AN ENTERPRISING COUNTRY.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

LAKE CITY, Col., Saturday, Oct. 26, 1876.

Some parts of the new West have settled up wonderfully fast, of late, in spite of hard times and panics. This is particulary true of what is known as the San Juan country, in south-western Colorado. When, four or five years ago, a few venturesome frontiersmen who had been spying out the land, brought glowing accounts of silver leads that were richer than any yet found in the Rocky Mountain country, most people readily took it as another Munchausen story, got up to match that just exploded hoax, the "diamond fields of Arizona." But it is the habit of old prospectors to go and see when such wonderful tales are told. So they began to flock hither, some of them the same men who had tramped and trudged all over the barren wastes of New-Mexico and Arizona in that vain search for precious stones. The almost inaccessible mountains, deep and forbidding cañons, and wild, savage character of the country could not deter fortune-hunters from finding out the truth about the San Juan country. It is sufficient to say that a region which four years ago was almost without a solitary white settler is to-day one of the most populous and fast-growing portions of the New West.

A recent trip to the various towns and camps gave me an opportunity to see and realize fully what has been accomplished in four years—I might better say in two years—for nearly all the thrifty towns and permanent settlements were staked out in 1874 and 1875. Here is Lake City, a flourishing place of 1,500 inhabitants; in the Summer it has a floating community of as many more. The first cabin was thrown together about two years ago. Now there are two banks, several large wholesale stores, a newspaper called the Silver World, concentration works, real estate offices, club rooms, and a theatre at which the "San Juan Minstrels" hold forth nightly to crowded houses. This place is looked upon as the mining centre, and though there are a dozen other rapidly growing towns to dispute the honor, the location of Lake City seems to be much the most favorable. The best developments have been made right here on the mountain side, and along the creeks, threading out in different directions. Access to the other camps, by means of good pack-trails, and to the chief supply points in the valley, by well constructed wagon roads, has already been secured. The Western Union Telegraph Company talk of extending their lines from La Veta, via Del Norte, to this place; and the Denver, South Rock and Pacific, and Denver and Rio Grande Railways, now both under construction, are aiming in this direction. The citizens have voted to spend $25,000 for the improvement of their wagon roads, and subscribe liberally to all enterprises that will help their town.

Besides the business houses I have already mentioned, I find by looking around that almost all the usual trades and professions are found here—drug stores, restaurants, bakeries, hotels, barber shops, saloons, breweries, assay offices. No less than ten lawyers swing their signs, and five physicians, a Presbyterian Church, Good Templar's Lodge, and a school are among the noticeable evidences of a right start. Additional stores are being erected, and new reduction works are under way. There are over three hundred buildings of all classes. And this, it is to be remembered is the season of the year when the miners seek a lower altitude for the Winter, as the deep snow-falls prevent their working their claims. Last Winter this town was nearly deserted, but this time the plucky citizens propose to "stick," though they are likely to be blocked in from the outside world for days, without mails or any knowledge of what is going on elsewhere. The stage companies, however, are well prepared for all obstacles, and if the winter is as open and mild as the last, there will not be much detention, but if like two years ago, the stage routes will, for the time, have to be abandoned. Prices are not so high as might be expected. Good hotel accommodations can be had at $4 per day. Flour sells at $7 per hundred pounds; butter, forty to fifty cents per pound; potatoes, three to four cents per pound; ham, twenty-five cents; and other things in like proportion. The average prices are about twenty-five per cent. higher than in Denver. Luxuries are high priced. Fruits are scarce. Apples cost ten cents, and grapes sell for forty to fifty cents per pound. I saw a rather uninviting water-melon sold for one dollar.

The best way, and almost the only way, to reach the other mining camps is by pack animals. Going up Henson's Creek, ten miles away is Galena City, a new camp started the past Summer; thence up, up, up to a height of 11,000 feet, where we find Mineral City, a place of 100 people, and the highest miners' camp in the country. It is always literally snowed up for four months of the year, and the hardy miners lay in supplies accordingly. From this point, following down the Uncompehgre, is Owray, some thirty miles from Lake City. Though but ten miles away, it is 5,000 feet lower than Mineral City. The trail between the points is very difficult, and here and there dangerous. At one place, for some two hundred feet, it is merely a narrow path, six to ten inches wide, and on one side is a deep, precipitous chasm, opening its wide jaws and enabling one to peer down a dizzy depth of 2,000 feet. Several pack animals have missed their footing along here and have been dashed in pieces upon the deep bottom. Owray is but six months old, has 200 settlers, is getting along at a brisk rate, and aims to be the county seat. On the ground that all is fair in war, it indulged in cumulative voting in the late election, and polled 200 ballots. But it failed to get the county seat, and Silverton, twenty-five miles away, still boasts that honor. This is one of the first camps that sprang up in the San Juan country. It has some five hundred inhabitants, a bank, newspaper, and several quite extensive stores. Though not growing as fast as some of the towns, it seems to be a permanent place and surrounded by some of the best mines. Up the creek four miles is Howardsville, a small camp, and further on, Maggie Gulch, Eureka, and the Forks of the Animas. The latter place is twelve miles from Silverton, and has about one hundred and fifty inhabitants. There are reduction works here. Down below are Argentine and Tellurim City, active mining centres. It is impossible to give any detailed account of the twenty towns and settlements in the San Juan country, or by describing them, to give any true idea of their extent or importance. It is easier to give in a lump the results of our extended investigation.

The San Juan country covers an area of 12,000 square miles. It has, during the past three years, been divided into four counties—Rio Grande, Hinsdale, San Juan, and La Plata. The vote at the late election will give a good idea of the present population. It would be fair to make the ratio one to four, as there are not so many families, women and children, as in sections that have been longer settled. The footings are as follows:

	Vote.	Population.
La Plata County	200	800
Hinsdale County	802	3,208
Rio Grande County	726	2,904

This is a population about as great as that of the Territory of Wyoming, and all gathered here within four years' time. The silver discoveries have extended over a very large area. Some of the lodes have changed hands at big prices. The ore now out and waiting treatment, at all the camps, is claimed to be worth from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000. The great drawback has been the lack of reduction works and stamp mills. These are now being rapidly supplied, large quantities of machinery of all kinds, necessary in the treatment of ores having arrived. The most valuable mines have fallen into the hands of capitalists who will engage in their active development. The discoveries of the past season have been as numerous and rich as those of last year, while much more money and work have been expended in opening the mines. Poor men, who to some extent had the best discoveries, but had not the means to go ahead and develop, have generally sold out at good figures, and have now the chance of working with pick for others, at fair wages. There is not yet work for more than are already here, and I would not advise anybody to come to the San Juan country expecting to "make a good thing" in that way. In fact, this is not the time of year to come for any purpose. Prospecting cannot be carried on to any advantage, nor can mines be examined sufficiently to judge of their value. A large portion of the country will be literally locked in by snow from November until April. Many of the mine owners have gone East to winter, and before they return will purchase machinery and other supplies to prosecute next year's work. All that I have met seem well satisfied with the country, and some are enthusiastic about the future. If the Denver and Rio Grande Railway reaches Del Norte by next season, as there now seems a prospect, some of the drawbacks will be removed. Supplies will be cheaper, and ores more readily marketed. The establishment of four or five banks, with ample capital, has been a great help. They have all purchased ores the past season, paying fair prices, and placing in the hands of the miners ready money to still further develop their claims.

EXPLORATIONS IN COLORADO.

PROF. HAYDEN'S PARTY—THE WORK OF SURVEY ABOUT FINISHED—THE RESULTS TO BE MADE PUBLIC AT ONCE.

DENVER, Thursday, Oct. 26, 1876.

A part of Prof. Hayden's surveying expedition in Colorado is already through with its season's work, and its members have returned to Washington to write out the results for publication. Of the two remaining divisions that under Mr. Chittenden arrived from the field of operations to-day, and Mr. Gannett's is expected at Cheyenne in a day or two. The work this year has been supplemental to the labors of the past three or four years, and is understood to be the closing up of Hayden's explorations in Colorado. Next season Cheyenne is to be the head-quarters of the surveys, and Wyoming will be districted for thorough examination. The Black Hills and Big Horn country, now attracting so much attention, will be explored first. Prof. Hayden has been over a portion of the country before. He was geologist of Lieut. Warren's expedition in 1857, when the first important report concerning the Black Hills country was made, and his explorations in the far West have several times during the past ten years been extended into portions of Wyoming. The operations of the coming year will be looked forward to with great interest, as large numbers of those now seeking fortunes and homes in the far West have an idea that the Big Horn country is a kind of garden spot, sunny, fruitful, and healthy, and have in their mind's eye, at the same time, a vague notion that somewhere in the Big Horn Mountains there are better gold prospects than in the Black Hills.

The Hayden surveys of this year in Colorado have taken in a part of the White River country, and also the Rio San Miguel and Dolores, and the western borders of the State. The results of the entire surveys in Colorado from 1869 to 1876 will now be condensed into one small volume, as were the Territorial surveys of 1867, 1868, and 1869, to meet the popular demand; while the detailed account of the operations for 1874, 1875, and 1876 will be given in three large volumes, accompanied by ten special maps and one large atlas, in seven sheets, one of which will be a drainage map, presenting all the streams, trails, and wagon-roads, and the other six will embrace all the topographical features of the State in detail. An edition of this atlas will be published in colors, giving all the geological and mineralogical features of the State. These will go to press as soon as the field notes of this season can be prepared for the engraver and publisher.

A VIRGINIA TILDEN ELECTOR.

Ex-rebel Col. F. W. M. Holladay, one of the Electors at Large on the Tilden ticket in Virginia, made a speech in Richmond on Friday night. We quote a few sentences from the reports given by the local papers: "He said that the fanatical Radical Party knew no State lines, but regarded the whole country as a county. Were he left to choose between a government controlled by a mere numerical majority knowing no State but only sectional line, and a monarchy, he would welcome Cæsar, even if in the person of Beast Butler or President Grant. We read at our breakfasts the orders of Taft and forget them before dinner, but had such orders been issued before the war the whole people would have been aroused, and the streets of Washington would probably have run red with blood. The issues of this controversy arise above mere dollars and cents. He [the speaker] fought not merely to secure honesty in the administration of Government, but to overthrow that party which has subverted and now seeks to destroy the Government of our fathers. The negroes are now hypocritically told that the late war was one of emancipation. Not so. President Lincoln and both branches of Congress solemnly declared to the world that the war was not against slavery, but for the Union. Even when Mr. Lincoln issued his emancipation proclamation, he did it avowedly as a war measure, to weaken the South. The war went against us. I have nothing to regret in that war. In the providence of God it seems that in no other way could slavery be abolished and we save our honor. The actual strife of sections was better than the lingering hate and outrage of border warfare and John Brown raids. We went to war, not to preserve slavery, but to preserve our honor—the honor of the South, of Virginia. The sentiment of each was: 'My country, if she fall, may she fall with her feet to the foe and her martial cloak around her.' [Applause.] And our sentiment to-day is that if liberty must go down everywhere, she shall go down last in Virginia, with all the greatest monuments of her former glory all around her. The Republicans know no more of constitutional liberty than Hindoos; or, if they do, they care not for it. From that fact arises the mighty issues that confront us, and no amount of reform as to mere peculation and theft on their part will lessen the danger with which they threaten the dearest institutions of our country. They must press forward in their ruthless career. Some novel act of fanaticism is necessary to their existence as a party. Stoppage is death to them. They must go on, and the most awful act is yet to come. The next step is to invade the social circle of the family, force the children of the South into Federal schools to be taught the miserable fanaticism and hypocrisy of true Republicanism."

THE SOUTH'S BAD LEADERS.

In his Kentucky speech Ex-Secretary Bristow said: "Under the leadership of men whose names are familiar to the people of this section of the Union, the South has suffered defeat and disaster; its homes have been desolated, its towns and cities destroyed, its people impoverished, and a dark shadow cast over every home in this once happy and prosperous land. Of all the cruel wrongs inflicted upon the country by the wicked war of secession, the direct calamities have fallen upon the South. Incalculable as was the injury to the whole country resulting from the false teachings of Southern leaders, the deepest and most incurable wounds fell upon the South. Of all the people and communities throughout the length and breadth of the nation, the people of the South have the gravest reasons to spurn the teachings and tendencies of the Democratic party, with its Southern leaders and Northern allies. If the South would consult its own best interest, it would fly from the leadership of its Davises, Harrises, and Hamptons, and form new political alliances. Let it raise up a new order of public men, who have not bowed the knee to Baal, or drawn their inspirations from the men who, for love of power and gratification of their selfish ambitions, madly rushed the Southern people into an unjustifiable and devastating civil war. Forgetting the obligations of patriotism, and refusing to see the inevitable consequences of their acts, they brought ruin to their own section, and should receive, as they deserve, the execration of every Southern man who desires the moral and material welfare of his own people and section. While the nation magnanimously forgives these men, and seeks to enforce none of the penalties they have incurred, the people of the South should relegate them and their political disciples to the quiet of private life, and thus cut off their power for inflicting further mischief upon their own people."

THE GAME LAWS OF ENGLAND.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

A remarkable "game case," involving a question of some importance, was tried at a Justice of Peace Court at Falkirk recently. Two miners, named McDonald and Sinclair, were accused of trespassing, in pursuit of game, on lands the property of Mr. Forbes, of Callendar. From the evidence, it appeared that the miners were walking along a public road, and had two dogs with them, which entered an adjoining field, and, after coursing it, hunted a rabbit into a stone dike built between the road and the field. McDonald left the road, got upon the top of the dike, and watched the escape of the rabbit, while Sinclair stood on the roadside close to the dike, from which he removed some of the stones, and then secured the animal. It was contended for the prosecution that McDonald, having left the road and gone upon the top of the fence, had committed a trespass, and a conviction was asked. As to whether Sinclair had committed a trespass by inserting his hand within the fence it was left to the court to say. On behalf of the miners it was urged that they were not guilty of entering or being upon lands in pursuit of game as set forth in the complaint, and that there must be actual personal entrance to the lands before a contravention of the statute was committed. The court took this view of the matter and acquitted the accused, who thus remained masters of the situation and of the rabbit.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

VARIOUS SUBJECTS DISCUSSED.

THE MAYORALTY QUESTION.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It is a fact not to be disguised, that there are many earnest Republicans who are greatly disappointed that some equitable and honorable arrangement could not have been made by which Mr. Green could have had the support of the party at the present time. But with others, the writer is forced to "accept the situation," and without understanding all the reasons which compel such a decision, we must abide the issue.

The question now presents itself, what is to be done? Besides the Republican Party as an organization, there are many thousands of citizens who are discontented with and opposed to Tammany Hall and its associations. Hitherto a number of attempts have been made by a united effort of all the opposition to break the rule of Tammany. It has been done by a surrender on the part of the "Whigs" when in existence, and since 1852 by several surrenders of the Republicans, and for the cause of reform they have always accepted a Democratic Mayor for the candidate and given the most of the ticket to the Democrats. The result has generally been a disappointment, for the dominating power of Tammany Hall has usually overborne the men put in office by Republican voters, and the Democrats smiled and congratulated themselves on their success.

Now, if Mr. Ottendorfer and the German, Anti-Tammany, and Independent organizations, with Controller Green as a true reformer who has so successfully fought the battle with Tammany Hall and its corrupt claims, are willing to be known as independent and sincere friends of reform, is it too much to ask of them that they should unite once with the Republican Party on a Municipal ticket, even though it be a straight ticket? Is all the sacrifice to be made by the Republicans, and are they to elect Democrats, and the favor never to be reciprocated?

It may be convenient for the professed reformers in City affairs to throw the blame of the failure to unite upon the Republicans; but when O'Brien and others take committees and conventions by the throat, and insist upon filling the offices of large emoluments, or break up the combinations, it is not the part of Republicans to submit to these repeated exactions all the time.

The political revenge is, apparently, not to affiliate with or support the Republican candidates, but to gravitate back to Tammany, where they have the doors closed against their approach, and fling themselves back into the very current they professed to oppose.

Is the reform, then, only an attempt to get the patronage, or is it a sincere desire to effect true reform? The principle I hold to is that men of principle do not support corrupt parties because they are personally disappointed. CIVIS.

QUESTIONS FOR MR. TILDEN.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Now, that Mr. Tilden is in the mood, will he please explain a matter far more important than that of the assumption of the debt contracted by the South in the war of the rebellion? He has been a life-long secessionist of the ultra Calhoun type. In his famous Kent letter, deprecating the election of Mr. Lincoln, which he declared would justify the South in breaking up the Union, he said:

"They" (the framers of our Constitution) "left revolution organized whenever it should be demanded by the public opinion of a State; left it with the power to snap the tie of confederation as a nation might break a treaty, and to repel coercion as a nation might repel invasion."

And in denying the right of the Government to put down rebellion he says:

"No contract governing complicated transactions or relations between men, and applying permanently through the changes inevitable in human affairs, can be effectual if either party intended to be bound by it is at liberty to construe or execute its provisions in a spirit of hostility to the substantial objects of these provisions. Especially is this true of a compact of confederation between the States, where there can be no common arbiter invested with authorities and powers equally capable with those which courts possess between individuals for determining and enforcing a just construction and execution of the instrument."

Mr. Tilden has always held that any State might retire from the Union, offering no other pretext for its action than its own will—the "public opinion" of its people. Such a position, which he holds to-day, is entirely compatible with his recent declaration against the payment of the debts of the Southern States contracted in the war of the rebellion. He may well reply: "The debts you contracted in asserting your independence you contracted as a nation, and must bear them as a nation, as sovereign communities, which you are. Your remedy is to secede if your claims are not complied with. You must content yourselves with your constitutional rights, of which the payment by the North or by the nation of your debts, no matter how contracted, is not one."

No fact is more notorious than that the Southern States did not secede to protect slavery. They had no fears for its immediate safety. They had become tired of being any longer tied up with uncongenial partners. The "public opinion" of their people pronounced against the continuance of what they termed "a hateful confederation." Before a blow was struck, however, Mr. Tilden pointed out to them, in the most minute detail, their right, under the Constitution, to secede. It was a right to be peacefully accorded to any State. They speedily put his teachings into practice, at a sacrifice of half a million of lives and of more than six billion dollars of treasure. And after all this, the greatest offender and criminal of all has the effrontery to come before the nation and offer himself as their candidate for the administration of a Government which he did his best to destroy, and which he tells us to-day any State may destroy at its own volition or caprice. Of what importance is it to talk about the assumption of the debts of Southern States, when Mr. Tilden declares that these States may at will repudiate those of the nation—that if they do not chose longer to contribute toward the payment of these, interest or principal, all they have to do is to say so, and their obligations for the future are at an end.

Elect Mr. Tilden and our Constitution is a rope of sand, and our Government bonds may not be worth the paper on which they are written. Elect him, and as far as he is concerned, any Southern State "may snap the tie of confederation as a nation may break a treaty; and repel coercion as a nation may repel an invasion." If the Government assumes to protect the freedmen, it is to become more hated by the Democratic caste at the South than ever. "Public opinion" will become more opposed than ever to the continuance of the Union. Is it wise or statesmanlike to place ourselves in precisely the condition in which we were before the war? To throw away the construction that the result of the war put upon the Constitution that we are a nation, not a loose confederacy; and leave us again to fight over the battle from whose terrible consequences we still suffer—all for the gratification of an intriguing political adventurer? It would be more than folly—it would be madness—for foreigners, whom we are trying to persuade to purchase our bonds at a low rate of interest, in order to lessen our burdens, to take them till they see what is to be the result of the coming election; for, if after all our experience we again throw ourselves into the arms of the very parties who precipitated the late rebellion, in order to give them an opportunity to repeat the same game, we shall show ourselves to be too weak and contemptible to be safely intrusted with a single dollar of other people's money. P.

A HINT TO BROOKLYN VOTERS.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will you not strongly impress upon the Republican voters of Brooklyn the paramount necessity of being early at the polls in their respective districts on election day? There are at least two very grave reasons therefor. In the first place, the largely-increased registration in that city has rendered it positively certain that a very considerable number of voters must be disfranchised for want of time to receive their votes. For example, the Sixth Assembly District has registered 10,400 voters, and is divided into only fifteen election districts, giving an average of about seven hundred votes to each polling place. Previous experience has demonstrated the impossibility of taking more than one vote a minute on the average, and at this rate there will be at least one hundred and sixty voters disfranchised in each election district, or 2,450 for the Assembly District. The Sixth District is only a fair illustration of other districts in Kings County, and it is, therefore, plainly to be seen that the result in this State may be seriously affected by a failure on the part of our voters in Brooklyn to do their whole duty in this matter. Secondly, it is estimated that an effort will be made by the Democrats to get possession of the lines of voters in the early morning and hold them through-out the day. This is to be done by hiring men to stand in the line and drop out to give their places to Democratic voters. In this way it is hoped to discourage Republicans and ultimately drive them from the polls. Z. R. B.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Nov. 1, 1876.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A well-dressed and somewhat elderly man tall and slim, with gray hair, representing himself as being a retired clergyman, is going about swindling people under pretense of aiding a poor family, former members of his congregation. He goes to a house, asks the servant for Mrs. ——, (having ascertained the right name before calling,) and when she comes into the parlor, tells his story in a very clever manner. After leaving he goes to the next house, calls for Mrs. ——, (as before,) and represents that he has been sent there by the lady he has just left. He, doubtless, has other stories than "a poor family." He acts his part well. Please insert this in your paper, and thereby caution the public generally against him. FIFTH AVENUE.

LAW REPORTS.

BENJAMIN WOOD IN COURT.

HE IS SUED FOR MISAPPROPRIATING THE PROFITS OF A LOTTERY BUSINESS—HE SETS UP IN DEFENSE THE ILLEGALITY OF THE BUSINESS AND THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

Two suits brought by Marcus Cicero Stanley against Benjamin Wood and others were brought before Judge Larremore in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on motions to frame issues, but were adjourned until Wednesday. In the complaint in the first action Mr. Stanley alleges that from Nov. 1, 1868, to July 19, 1869, he was the owner of a one-twenty-first share of the lottery business, carried on under the firm name of C. H. Murray & Co. Tickets were sold for eleven different lotteries. The business was conducted by Wood, Jacob Banch, John A. Morris, Charles H. Murray, William C. France, and Henry Colton. During November, 1868, the plaintiff alleges that these managers conspired to cheat and defraud him of his share, and that they misappropriated $1,234 06 per week. Of this misappropriation Wood is declared to have received $460 per week and Banch and Morris each $139 per week, the remainder being divided between the other three managers. Mr. Stanley alleges that he received satisfaction from Murray, France, and Colton, and he asks that Wood, Banch, and Morris be compelled to make an accounting, and to pay him what may be found due. In the second action Mr. Stanly charges Wood with having embezzled and converted to his own use not less than $61,000 of the profits of the concern, of which Wood was principal manager and trustee. The plaintiff claims that his share of the amount misappropriated is about $2,900. He asks an accounting and to have Wood compelled to pay over what may be found due to him. Mr. Wood sets up similar answers in both suits. He first denies the allegations in certain sections of the complaint, and then alleges in defense that the profits, if any, were made in this State, where the lottery business is unlawful. He also sets up the Statute of Limitations as a bar, since the causes of action accrued more than six years ago. Townsend & Weed appear for the plaintiff, and ex-Recorder James M. Smith represents the defendant Wood.

CAPT. GRINDLE FOUND GUILTY.

TWICE INDICTED, THREE TIMES TRIED, AND AT LAST CONVICTED OF CRUELTY AT SEA.

The trial of Capt. Josiah L. Grindle, of the ship St. Mark, indicted in the United States Circuit Court, before Judge Benedict, was concluded yesterday, and resulted in a verdict of guilty. Capt. Grindle, though an inoffensive-looking man, has an unenviable reputation as regards his treatment of his crew at sea, and was indicted in this court in 1871 for alleged cruelty while in command of the ship Old Colony. At that time the jury returned the very singular verdict, "Not guilty under the statute and rulings, but guilty of cruelty," and he was discharged. Upon the 17th of August last he was again arrested for alleged cruel and inhuman treatment while in command of the ship St. Mark, upon the affidavits of William Skinner and Henry Poents, cook and carpenter respectively of the ship. It was testified to on the trial, that three men died from injuries received at the hands of Capt. Grindle and his officers, and their stories were uncontradicted except by Mary Blake, the nurse in the Captain's family, her testimony being a positive denial of the facts alleged. At the trial which concluded about three weeks ago, Assistant United States Attorney B. B. Foster appeared for the Government and Judge Fullerton for the defense. The jury disagreed and were discharged, and, awaiting another trial, Capt. Grindle was released on $15,000 bail. The testimony at the trial concluded yesterday was substantially the same as that given previously, the complainants adhering strictly to their former statements. Henry E. Knox appeared for the accused, and District-Attorney Foster for the Government.

The jury were charged yesterday morning by Judge Benedict at some length. He said this case was of a class of especial importance, arising out of statutes regulating the commercial marine. Great powers had been conferred upon shipmasters—at times they had been without limit—but now they were regulated by statute. The shipmaster had charge of a peculiar and unfortunate class, more beyond the protection of the law than any other, oftt-imes ignorant and bad, and over whom the court must exert control. His powers have been defined by law, and it was necessary that this statute should be enforced to insure sailors substantial rights, and at the same time make the following an inviting one. With some further remarks on this subject, after quoting and explaining the statute, the case was put into the hands of the jury. They retired at 10:30 in the morning, returning again at 3 in the afternoon for further instructions. They returned again at 3:30 with a verdict of guilty as charged. Mr. Knox moved then for the release of the accused on bail, pending a motion in arrest of judgement, but this was denied. The latter motion will be made at the opening of court this morning.

The penalty by the statute is a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both. Pending the trials the witnesses Skinner and Poentz have been confined in Ludlow Street Jail. Since the loss of his ship St. Mark, Capt. Grindle, having amassed an ample fortune, had retired from the merchant service, and his conviction now and probable imprisonment is a heavy blow.

THE BOY ACROBATS.

Argument was had before Judge Westbrook, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, in regard to the custody of the boy acrobats Thomas Donohue and the Ellis children, who were taken from their trainer, Alfred Smith, alias Leon, while performing in Murray's circus, in Poughkeepsie, about two months ago. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has since had the custody of the boys. On the argument yesterday, William Van Wyck, who appeared for Smith, claimed that the latter was the proper custodian of the children, they having been legally indentured to him, and he being willing to return them to their parents. The counsel also insisted that the proceedings before the Recorder at Poughkeepsie, whereby the children were committed to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, were not valid. The law of 1876, under which the proceedings were had, he claimed, is unconstitutional, since by it parents or guardians can be deprived of the custody of children without trial and merely on a hearing before a committing magistrate. Lewis L. Delafield, the counsel for the Society argued in favor of the constitutionality of the law of 1876. It gave, he said, as much right of trial as is given under the vagrancy act, which had been held to be constitutional. Mr. Delafield insisted further that the indentures apprenticing the children to Smith, were illegal because, under the laws of England—in which country the indentures were made—the consent of two Justices is necessary, and such consent had not been obtained. Judge Westbrook said that children of that kind are peculiarly the wards of the court. He would read the testimony very carefully before rendering any opinion. The children, who were in court, seemed to be enjoying excellent health and were in the best of spirits. Smith and John H. Murray, the proprietor of the circus in which the children were performing, have been bailed in $500, to appear for trial in Dutchess County, where they have been indicted.

A MILITIAMAN'S GRIEVANCES.

The suit of Perrault against Turner was brought in the Supreme Court several months since to compel the defendant, who is the Captain of a company in the Seventh Regiment, to reinstate the plaintiff as a member of the company. Perrault was court-martialed and expelled about two years ago. According to the company's by-laws the Captain is required, when present, to preside at each court-martial. In the present instance he did not preside, but took the floor and advocated Perrault's expulsion. The court issued a mandamus to compel the reinstatement of Perrault. The latter then applied to be honorably discharged from the regiment, as having served seven years. In this period he included the two years of his suspension. The regimental officials refused to grant his desire, and the case was then brought before Judge Barrett, who rendered a decision yesterday in opposition to the applicant.

A CASE RESTORED TO THE CALENDAR.

Chief Justice Curtis, in the Superior Court, Special Term, yesterday granted a motion to restore to the calendar the case of Francis Morris and J. E. Simmons against William H. Webb. The action is brought to recover $37,650 39 as the amount of a trust fund placed with the defendant for the benefit of the plaintiffs. A notice of trial in the suit was served on Sept. 19, 1874. Some testimony has been taken, but the case has never been called, although placed on the calendar more than a year ago. By an inadvertence the case was dropped from the calendar, and the plaintiffs' counsel made the motion just granted, alleging that as the defendant has given no security there is danger of loss to the plaintiffs unless the case be speedily tried.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Supreme Court of the United States, Thursday, Nov. 2.—No. 81.—James M. Barkley, plaintiff in error, vs. The Board of Levee Commissioners of the Parishes of Madison and Carroll.—The argument of this cause was continued by Mr. C. L. Walker, of counsel for the defendant in error, and concluded by Mr. E. T. Merrick for the plaintiff in error. No. 82.—James A. Lovejoy, &c., plaintiff in error, vs. O. O. Spofford et al.—This cause was argued by Mr. William Lahres, of counsel for the plaintiff in error, and submitted on printed arguments by Mr. W. P. Bartlett for defendant in error. No. 83.—Antonio Berregesa, Administrator, &c., appellant, vs. The United States.—The argument of this cause was commenced by Mr. P. Phillips, of counsel for the appellants. Adjourned until to-morrow.

COURT NOTES.

Judge Barrett, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday denied the motion to change the place of trial to Brooklyn of the suit brought by this City against the Brooklyn authorities on account of their action in the garbage-dumping warfare.

Jacob Breitnesser, Assistant Postmaster at Farmingdale, Long Island, was arrested yesterday for the alleged embezzlement of $114 in postage stamps. He will be returned to Brooklyn for trial in the United States Circuit Court, Eastern District.

Yesterday, in the Washington Place Police Court, Justice Kasmire presiding, John Dwyer, residing at No. 84 King street, was charged with stealing a watch and pocketbook from John Bex, of No. 400 Hudson street, all of the value of $60. In default of $2,000 bail the prisoner was held to answer at General Sessions.

The examination of James Cookcroft, bankrupt, will take place to-day, before Register Williams and the Assignee. The Assignee claims that the bankrupt must surrender his watch, the more particularly as it was not paid for, and Mr. Lutz, of whom it was purchased, is made a creditor in common with the merchandise creditors and Mr. Cookcroft's tailor. The case is causing some discussion, and the Assignee says he will submit his views on the subject for Judge Blatchford's decision.

THE LATE JUDGE McCUNN'S ESTATE.

The long continued litigation over the estate of the late ex-Judge McCunn was again brought to notice in the Supreme Court yesterday, by a decision of Judge Donohue denying an application to rehear a motion for the removal of Joseph J. O'Donohue as the Receiver of the estate. Judge Donohue in his opinion comments rather severely on the allegations made in support of the application, which, he says, misrepresent the facts on the occasion of the former hearing, when the motion for the Receiver's removal was denied.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Barrett.

Kidd vs. Packard.—The question is a serious one whether evidence of special damage should have been admitted without a distinct averment. (See Chet. Pl., 428; Sedg. Dam., 612; 16 Abb. 312; 42 Barb., 199.) In 26 N. Y., 124, the special damage was averred in the complaint. In 17 Barb., 522, Judge Hubbard says that the special damages were fully averred in the complaint. I would like counsel to examine the cases fully, and come before me again prepared to argue this point.

Perault vs. Turner.—The relator is not entitled to his discharge until he has served the term required by law. He was slow in applying for the original mandamus, and cannot claim in the period of service the time that elapsed from his expulsion until his reinstatement. The writ is discretionary, and should be refused in such a case. As well might one who had been expelled within a month after his enlistment wait for seven years to procure his reinstatement by legal proceedings, and then ask an honorable discharge, the same as if he had served faithfully for a full term. Motion denied with $10 costs.

Mayor, &c., vs. Britton.—1. Whether the cause of action or any part thereof arose in Kings County must be determined solely by reference to the averments of the complaint, without regard even to the demand of judgment. According to these averments the defendants, Britten and Fergusen, (who now move,) went out upon the high seas and there oppressively arrested the plaintiffs' servants or caused it to be done, and threatened to continue or to aid and abet in such duress upon such high seas. No act in Kings County is averred or complained of, although the prayer covers such ac's. 2. While the weight of authority is against the other opposition, based upon the convenience of witnesses and the difficulty of obtaining an impartial trial, yet there is some authority the other way. Motion denied, without costs, upon the first ground.

By Judge Donohue.

Gano vs. McCunn.—Motion denied, without costs. Opinion.

By Judge Larremore.

Blake vs. Obright.—Default opened on payment of costs of motion and of the inquest. Judgment to stand and to be placed on day calendar, and defendants must stipulate to try when reached.

Perkins vs. Finck.—Default opened on payment of costs of motion and of trial. Judgment to stand as security.

Lisner vs. Gessner.—Application granted on defendant's offer; order to be settled on two days' notice.

In the matter of opening New avenue, &c.—Proof of title not complete.

Kennedy vs. Van Wyck.—Motion denied.

Eliot vs. King.—Substitution ordered on payment of or security given for the attorney's fees, the amount thereof to be settled by a reference of disputed order, to be settled on Nov. 6, 1876, at 10:30 A. M.

Spring vs. West.—As against an Executor no allowance should be made.

Butler vs. Butler.—Application granted.

Goodwin vs. Heinrisch.—Motion granted.

By Judge Lawrence.

Joly vs. Lacombe.—Findings and decree signed.

Barker, &c., vs. Hoff, &c.—Order as settled.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—PART II.

By Judge Lawrence.

Orders Settled.—Bloomingdale vs. Seigel; Blandy vs. Gould et al.

By Chief Justice Curtis.

Silva vs. The Metropolitan Drug Company.—Let charge be put in case. Motion to resettle case as filed denied.

The Jaeger Iron Company vs. Phelps.—Motion denied, with costs to abide event.

Maclean vs. Blossom.—Receiver's bond approved.

Morris vs. Webb.—Motion granted and cause restored to calendar.

Krogen vs. Dallas.—Ordered on day calendar for 6th November.

Jennie Schwartz vs. Peter Schwartz.—Report of Referee confirmed, and judgment of divorce in plaintiff's favor.

MARINE COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge McAdam.

Motions Granted.—National State Bank of Troy vs. Ryan; National State Bank of Troy vs. McDermott; Maretzki vs. Papadoponli.

DESPERATE ATTEMPT AT ROBBERY.

Capt. Ward, of the Twenty-second Precinct, made a report to Acting Superintendent Dilks yesterday, of a singular attempt at robbery, which occurred in his precinct last Tuesday. The report sets forth that during the afternoon of the day mentioned, while Mrs. Manning, who resides on the fourth floor of No. 883 Tenth avenue, was engaged in her household duties, her apartments were suddenly invaded by two men, who, before she could make an outcry, seized her by the arms and stuffed a handkerchief into her mouth. They then pinioned her arms behind her, and having secured her firmly, they removed the gag, and asked her to give up whatever money she had in the house. Mrs. Manning said she had no money, and the ruffians thereupon proceeded to ransack the apartments, opening bureau drawers, trunks, &c., and searching them thoroughly, but without finding any money. The disappointed robbers took possession of several articles, which they tied up in bundles, but they became alarmed and left hurriedly, taking nothing with them. After they had taken their departure, the woman screamed for help, which attracted the attention of some of the neighbors, who released her. Mrs. Manning describes the robbers as follows: One was quite tall and wore a black mustache and had curly hair. He appeared to be about thirty-five years of age, and was dressed in a dark sack overcoat, black pantaloons, and slouch hat. His companion was short and stout, had bright red hair, and full whiskers, and wore a brown coat and a Derby hat. He appeared to be about forty years of age.

SUICIDE OF AN INTEMPERATE WOMAN.

Lucy Coughlin, fifty-five years of age, who resided at No. 318 East Twenty-fifth street, committed suicide by drowning on Wednesday evening. The fact was not ascertained until early yesterday morning, when the body was found in the East River, at the foot of Twenty-fifth street, by an officer of the Eighteenth Precinct. A small smoothing-iron was found securely fastened to each of her ankles by means of cords. Deputy Coroner Marsh, who made a preliminary investigation, ascertained that Mrs. Coughlin had been recently much addicted to the use of liquor. On Wednesday she quarreled with her sister-in-law, Ann Coughlin, and on leaving the house carried the smoothing-irons with her.

THURSDAY, Nov. 2—P. M.

The selling movement on the Stock Exchange which yesterday followed the announcement of the failure of the railroad representatives to agree upon any basis of settlement, was resumed this morning, and a further sharp decline in prices resulted. The tone of speculation during the entire day was characterized by weakness, though there were occasional rallies caused by the covering of the shorts. Lake Shore and Michigan Central were the leading features of the market, and the dealings in the former were attended with considerable excitement at intervals. The stock declined from 57½ to 55¾ and closed at 56½ against 57⅞ yesterday. Michigan Central opened at 46 against 46⅞ last evening, and declined to 45¼ before the first call. There was a subsequent recovery to 46½ and a reaction to 45⅜, followed by a rally to 45⅞ at the close. New-York Central declined to 101½, rallied to 102 and closed at 101¾. Erie was steady at 10⅞@11. North-western common declined to 37½ and preferred to 59, closing at 37⅝ for the former and at 59½ for the latter. The St. Paul shares were firm and slightly higher, the common ranging between 25 and 25⅜, and the preferred between 55 and 55¾. At the close the improvement was partially lost. Rock Island declined to 101¼, and later sold at 101⅝. Western Union sold down to 71⅛ at the opening, and afterward rose to 72, with final sales at 71¾@71⅞. Wabash was quite active, and advanced to 8, closing at 7¾. The coal stocks were higher on a small business. Delaware and Hudson Canal advanced from 73 to 74⅛. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western from 73⅝ to 74¼, and New-Jersey Central from 36¼ to 37. The Express shares were dull and steady. The entire business for the day reached 139,235 shares, of which 82,740 were in Lake Shore, 19,300 in Michigan Central, and 13,650 in Western Union.

The money market was easier than on yesterday and nearly all the business in call loans was at 3½@4 ₱ cent. In discounts prime names are quoted at 4½ to 6 ₱ cent. The national bank notes received for redemption at Washington to-day amounted to $500,000. The following were the rates of domestic exchange on New-York to-day: Savannah, buying, ⅜ off; selling, par to ¼ off, large amounts; Charleston, 5-16 to ⅛ par; Cincinnati, dull, 100 discount; New-Orleans, commercial, ⅜, bank, ¼; St. Louis, 150 discount; Chicago, 50 discount.

The foreign advices report a decrease of £193,000 in the specie of the Bank of England for the past week. The proportion of bank reserve to liabilities is now 54½ ₱ cent., against 55½ ₱ cent. last week. The Directors at their weekly court to-day made no change in the bank rate of discount, which remains at 2 ₱ cent. The London market for securities was higher for consols, and some of the American securities, consols closing at 95⅞ for both money and the account, and United States bonds at 103⅜@103½ for 1865s, (old,) 109 for 1867s, 108¼ for 10-40s, and 106⅝@106¾ for new 5s. Erie was steady. Silver was quoted at 53⅛d. ₱ ounce. Rentes, at Paris, declined to 104.85. The specie in the Bank of France increased 6,842,000 francs during the week.

The sterling exchange market was weak in tone, and the rates for actual business were reduced slightly, the demand being very light. Prime bankers' bills sold at $4 81½@$4 82 for sixty days, and at $4 83½@$4 84 for demand.

Gold was dull and the ruling quotation was 109¾, the market opening and closing at that figure. During the afternoon there were some transactions at 109⅞. The near approach of the elections has a tendency to retard operations, as the result will probably have an important influence, one way or the other, on the market. Cash gold was easy at 1 to 3 ₱ cent. for carrying. In exceptional cases loans were made flat.

Government bonds were quiet and the changes very slight. Sales of the registered new 4½ per cents were made at 111¼@111⅜. In railroad mortgages the most important change was a decline of 1 ₱ cent. in Hannibal and St. Joseph convertibles, which sold at 82; Toledo and Wabash, St. Louis Division, fell off from 72½ to 72, do. seconds being steady at 70. Chicago and North-western consolidated gold coupons fell off to 95½, and afterward recovered to 95⅞. Fort Wayne firsts sold at 121, and seconds at 115. State bonds were firm and in fair demand. Tennessee sold at 47 for old and 45 for new. Georgia 7s, new, sold at 105⅜, and Missouri Asylum 6s at 107.

TAMMANY CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR.

HIS RECORD AS A TWEED SUPERVISOR—TRANSCRIPTS FROM THE CITY BOOKS.

When confronted with the minutes of the meetings of the old Tweed Board of Supervisors, showing the glaring frauds for which he gave his vote, Mr. Ely, Tammany candidate for Mayor, has replied that the minutes "lied;" that they were false statements from beginning to end, and that he neither attended the meetings nor even knew where they were held. This may be so, but if it is, it must be confessed that the minutes have a wonderful appearance of correctness. We present a transcript of them for the year 1868, showing the business transacted at the meetings of the Board:

Jan. 11, 1868.—Special meeting; Mr. Ely signs the call, and is present. Bills of Ingersoll, Watson & Co., and Keyser & Co., for $50,125, for fitting up armories, were presented, referred to a committee, reported back at the same meeting, and passed. No opposing vote.

Jan. 16.—Special meeting. Mr. Ely signs the call and is present. After transaction of routine business, board adjourned to Jan. 18.

Jan. 18.—Board met pursuant to adjournment. Mr. Ely not present. At this meeting the salaries of the Judges were largely increased. The County tax levy of $2,101,882, was reported and passed; personal taxes to the amount of over $300,000 were remitted; County Jail bills certified by Sheriff Kelly were passed; Coroners' bills of $5,357 were passed; and also several bills of the Ring tradesmen.

Jan. 27.—Special meeting. Mr. Ely not present. At this meeting bills of the regular Ring tradesmen, to an aggregate amount of $41,661, were presented, referred to a committee, reported back, and passed. Other bills, to the amount of $6,000, were referred to a committee, to be reported upon at the next meeting.

Feb. 19.—Special meeting. Mr. Ely signs the call and is present. Bills of Ring tradesmen, to the amount of $63,458, were presented, referred in a lump, reported back, and passed, Mr. Ely voting no. Sheriff Kelly's bill of $4,984 was reported back from committee and passed, Mr. Ely voting yea. Two bills for printing, of $13,000, were passed, Mr. Ely voting no. Salaries of City Judge and Recorder fixed at $10,000 each, from Jan. 1, Mr. Ely voting no. Additional appropriations, County Taxes, amounting to $9,335,628 42, passed, Mr. Ely voting yea. Clerk Superior Court authorized to appoint Librarian at $1,500 per annum, Mr. Ely voting YEA.

March 30.—Regular meeting. Mr. Ely present. Bills presented and referred of Ring tradesmen to the aggregate amount of $42,051; reported back and passed, Mr. Ely not voting. The following bills were referred to a committee, and disposed of as stated: G. S. Miller, for $429 31, reported back and passed, Mr. Ely voting YEA; Ingersoll, Watson & Co. for $11,777 52, reported back and passed, Mr. ELY voting YEA; Ingersoll, Watson & Co., for $12,535 48, reported back and passed, Mr. ELY voting YEA: Ingersoll, Watson & Co., for $1,830 83, reported back and passed, Mr. Ely voting yea.

Davidson*, and others, amounting to $369,425 32, presented and referred; a large portion reported back and passed, Ely voting YEA on $64,354 93. Of the bills presented, referred, reported back, and passed were T. W. ROE & CO., STATIONERY, &c., $12,241 95, and J. O. SEYMOUR & CO., STATIONERY, &c., $12,575 20, on which ELY voted YEA. Bill of Clerk of the Board for $450 for procuring files of bills introduced into Legislature. NO NEGATIVE VOTE. Resolution passed directing the Controller to pay the bills of the NEW-YORK PRINTING COMPANY for all work done or supplies furnished the County by them, upon the certificate of the Clerk of the Board, and charge the same to its appropriate account. TAMMANY'S SURROGATE.

ALLEGED CONSPIRACY WITH AN APPOINTEE TO DEFRAUD THE ESTATES OF CHILDREN—LOUD AND BITTER COMPLAINTS BY LAWYERS—HIS ACTION AS REFEREE IN A SUIT AGAINST TWEED, JR.—CONGRESSMAN MEADE'S ACTION AS COUNSEL.

One of the worst actions of Surrogate Calvin, the man whom Tammany Hall is now trying to foist upon the City and County of New-York for another two years, and in regard to whom lawyers having cases in the Surrogate's Court make the most bitter complaints, is his persistency in appointing one Henry Wood, a son of Ben. Wood, as Special Guardian in cases involving estates of infants. Wood is characterized as a man utterly incompetent to fill the position, but still Calvin never lets slip an opportunity to appoint him. His mere appointment of this man however, is by no means the worst feature of the affair, as it is claimed, upon the very best testimony, that Calvin conspires with Wood to rob estates of sums of money, more or less great, in making his awards for services rendered.

Last Spring the firm of Farnham & Browning, doing business at No. 322 Broadway, went before Calvin with the estate of William Browning, deceased—an estate involving from four to six hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Farnham conducted the case, and his first step, as is usual in such cases, was to apply for a "final counting." The case was sent to an Auditor, and, as one of the heirs was a young lady lacking three months of having attained her majority, and was therefore an infant in point of law, a special guardian had to be appointed, and as usual Henry Wood was selected. In course of time the Auditor rendered his report. The usual practice is for counsel, when the Auditor's report has been made, to apply for an order confirming the Auditor's report, but in this case, before Mr. Farnham had an opportunity to make such an application, Wood, who represented less than one twentieth of the estate, served him with a notice to the effect that he had made application: for the Surrogate to make such confirmation on May 28. After thus notifying Mr. Farnham, and on May 18—ten days before the day set for Calvin's action, Wood went surreptitiously before the Surrogate, and represented that he, Mr. Farnham, and two other lawyers in the case had agreed that he [Wood] should receive as compensation for his services $400, Farnham $1,200, and each of the other lawyers $100. He then notified Mr. Farnham that these awards would be made by the Surrogate. Mr. Farnham instantly went before Calvin and declared that the above basis of award was obtained by fraud, and stated that he would consider himself well paid if he got $250. Of course, if the principal lawyer in the case received only $250, the special guardian could not, in decency, be awarded nearly as much, as his services are of a light and almost trivial nature—at least they were in this case. The other two lawyers told Calvin they would be well paid if they received $50 each. Calvin flew into a rage. He saw he could not give Wood his coveted $400 if Farnham took so moderate an amount. He twisted and squirmed in his seat on the bench, glared ominously at Mr. Farnham, and then broke out as follows: "How do I know, Sir, but that you have arranged with the Executor to take this $250 for the purpose of preventing the guardian from getting his $400, and when the case is all settled accept an enormous fee for yourself?" Mr. Farnham asked if the Surrogate had any evidence to that effect. "I have no evidence that such is not the case," was his insolent reply, and then he announced that he would reserve his decision. A few weeks later he made the following awards: Farnham, $250; Wood, $300, and the two other lawyers $50 each. The Auditor says that Wood did not spend more than an hour in the case all told, yet he was awarded a larger fee than the principal lawyer.

The suits of Morgan and Grant against William M. Tweed, Jr., were brought up before Judge Larremore, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on a motion to compel the filing of a report by Delano C. Calvin, the Referee appointed to investigate into the conduct of Edwin R. Meade in connection with the cases. It appears from the papers on file that Messrs. Morgan and Grant were policy-holders in the insolvent Commonwealth Insurance Company, and sued Tweed, who was the Receiver, to recover the amounts of their payments. Edwin R. Meade, the present Democratic Congressman from the Fifth District, acted as their counsel in the suits, and pretended to have a great deal of trouble in collecting the claims and in propitiating the Receiver. At any rate, Meade received about $3,500 in payment of the plaintiffs' claims, but turned over none of the money to the plaintiffs. The latter then, through their counsel, S. S. Lancaster, applied to have Meade compelled to turn over the money he had received. In this proceeding, Mr. Calvin was appointed Referee. This was in the early part of 1875. There were ten hearings before the Referee, at which testimony was taken, and there were also twenty adjournments, the majority of the latter being at Meade's request. The taking of testimony closed in April last, and Mr. Calvin was required to make a report to the court within sixty days. Mr. Calvin, however, having made no report within five months thereafter, the counsel for Messrs. Grant and Morgan served a notice on Mr. Meade that he would proceed in the case as if no reference had been ordered. Meade's counsel, however, applied for and obtained a new order of reference to Mr. Calvin. This order provided that the testimony taken on the first reference should be used as the testimony of the new reference, and required Mr. Calvin to make his report before Oct. 6. Mr. Calvin, on Oct. 5, obtained another order extending his time to make a report for twenty days. This time was afterward reduced to ten days. Finally, Mr. Calvin notified the counsel in the case that his report was ready and that they could have it on paying him $250 as a fee. Mr. Meade, however, seems to be in no hurry to take up the report and pay the fee. The plaintiffs having already lost much money, are unwilling to pay any more until they find in whose favor the report is. The cases came up yesterday on a motion to compel Mr. Calvin to file his report, to have his fees taxed by the court, and to designate at least in whose favor the report is made. Judge Larremore advised counsel for the plaintiffs to tender to Mr. Calvin the amount of fees he thinks proper that the latter should receive. In case Mr. Calvin refuses to deliver his report, the counsel is to make a further application to the court for relief. The point made by the plaintiffs' counsel is that Mr. Calvin, after having failed to make his report within the proper time after the first reference, is not entitled to fees for the same.

EX-SENATOR DOOLITTLE.

HIS EFFORT TO GO INTO BUSINESS AS A COTTON SPECULATOR—ANOTHER LOOK AT HIS CELEBRATED CORRESPONDENCE WITH CONATTY—HE IS QUITE AT HOME WITH THE PERJURED DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE.

Ex-Senator Doolittle, once the representative of Wisconsin in the United States Senate, seems to have been recently resurrected from his political grave. He does not make a very lively corpse, but such as remains of him is perambulating the country under the banner of Tilden and Reform. This is quite natural. No man better than the ex-Senator knows how urgently Reform is needed when gentlemen of his stamp are still allowed to appear in public streets in the daytime, and speak at political meetings at night. Mr. Doolittle held forth on the Reform question and the corruption of the Administration, at Tammany Hall, last night; and to help the good cause and give emphasis to the gentleman's remarks, we reprint an interesting correspondence which Senator James R. Doolittle once had with the Senator from Wisconsin, James T. Doolittle. A brief explanation is necessary to make the finer points of the scheme apparent. It happened that there was a certain Treasury clerk, named Thomas G. Conatty, who in 1864 had to resign his clerkship on account of ill-health. Seeking something wherewith to gain a living, he applied to the Government for a permit to trade in cotton in the insurrectionary States. Through influential friends near the Treasury, Senator Doolittle being one, he obtained the permit. About three weeks after, that is, in December, 1864, he met the Wisconsin Senator in a street car, informed him of his good luck, and received the statesman's congratulations, and, after a thoughtful pause, a request to call at his office next day. Mr. Conatty went, and the Senator explained the scheme that he had elaborated. This was that Conatty, in gratitude for the Senator's services in getting the permit, should turn over to him (Doolittle) one-fourth of all the profits which Conatty should make on his cotton business; but for fear that ill-natured people should say anything about such a transaction, the sagacious Senator had provided a beautiful correspondence, supposed to have passed between him and Conatty, which presented the matter in a light calculated to exalt our ideas of human nature. "Now, here," said the Senator, "is letter No. 1, which I have written out and which you will copy, as if it was your own, and send to me to keep. Here is letter No. 2, which is my answer to that, and which you will keep. The date has been put ahead, and everything made right." With these remarks, or similar, the Senator produced two letters in his handwriting and presented them to the bewildered Conatty; who, as he said in his affidavit, was so astonished he could make no reply. The following are copies of the letters, and when we reflect that an individual, perfectly sober and in the full possession of his senses, could sit down in his room and deliberately write to himself and of himself such letters as these, it will probably be acknowledged that a more perfect specimen of a consummate hypocrite is not to be found in the whole range of life or literature. This is letter No. 1:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29, 1864.

Hon. J. R. Doolittle:

DEAR SIR: I have been engaged for two years past in the Treasury Department, where I have been assiduously at work, early and late, until I seriously feared my health might give way.

In consequence of the confidence which my fidelity there has inspired in the head of the department, I have received a permit to trade and to purchase cotton to the amount of fifty thousand bales.

This has been freely given me; and now, my dear Sir, allow me to say that during all my stay here I have witnessed on your part in the high position you occupy the same fidelity, and, I may add, such a position and a course of conduct, that my heart has been drawn out to you; and, as this permit may enable me to realize a great fortune too great to be properly administered or enjoyed by any one man—I have determined that, AS A PRESENT ON MY PART, and in the belief that you could better use a portion, should I be successful, than I could use all, I WILL REMIT TO YOU THE ONE-FOURTH PART OF ALL THE PROFITS I may realize over and above all my expenses. I do this in the hope that, while I may become rich in this operation, I may secure to you a competency also.

This is letter No. 2. Observe its unctuous sweetness:

[Private and Confidential.]

T. J. Conatty, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR: Your magnanimous proposition, contained in your letter from Baltimore, of yesterday, fills my heart with feelings which I cannot express. Such instances of disinterested friendship are so rare, so few among the sons of men are endowed with such a high and noble generosity, that I am without words to tell you how much it affects you [me.]

I have no claims upon you except those of a disinterested friendship sincerely cherished. As to this permit to trade in cotton, you have obtained it without any word or influence or thought of mine, even direct or indirect, for until your communication to me I never had any knowledge or thought even that you contemplated such a thing.

And yet this fact alone, which gives me no claim upon you, is the only possible ground upon which I accept your generous, I will say more, your most magnanimous offer.

Had I aided you in the least, directly or indirectly, in thought, word, or deed, I could not have accepted it if I would, and I would not if I could.

I hope you may realize your sanguine expectations, and be able to place yourself, without injury to any other human being, in a condition of pecuniary independence, so that when this fearful war is over you may retire into private life, again to cultivate those literary pursuits you so much love, and which are more precious after all than gold and silver. And should your success be such, that in the munificence of your proposition you can enable me to do the same, you will confer a great benefit upon

Your sincere friend,

J. R. DOOLITTE.

THE BROOKLYN RING DEMOCRACY.

MASS-MEETING OF "BOSS" M'LAUGHLIN'S "BOYS" AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC—THE USUAL STEREOTYPED "REFORM" SPEECHES.

The Ring Democracy of Brooklyn held a mass-meeting last evening. The colonizers came from their temporary residences in the odd-numbered wards in large number to the Academy of Music where the meeting was held. Crowds of curious people, attracted by the fireworks and the brass band, gathered in the vicinity. Those who found their way inside the building saw and heard some very curious things. They saw a meeting held under the auspices of the Ring Democracy, presided over by Col. A. C. Davis, the professional reformer and champion crow eater of Kings County. Davis abused Boss McLaughlin until he was taken into McLaughlin's General Committee, but not so fully into the Boss' confidence as to receive the nomination for Congress in the Second District, which he anxiously sought. They heard Mr. Dorsheimer, who cheated the Government out of thousands of dollars by means of fraudulent mileage fees while United States District Attorney, shouting for Tilden and reform. He has kept up the cry so loud and so long that his voice has gone the way of his reputation. The meeting was called to order by S. T. Freeman, a feeble reformer, who was captured by being placed at the head of the Ring General Committee, and of whom it has been said he is an "old war-horse" in embryo. Mr. Freeman said in a scarcely audible voice that he did not believe half that Mr. Evarts had said on Wednesday night. Of Col. A. C. Davis, whom he nominated as Chairman, he said that he was not the same kind of a lawyer as Mr. Evarts. Davis' name was coldly received. He talked in a wild way about Tilden and reform, and said something concerning the "thunder tones of the ballot-box." His address was closed by a request that, as the atmosphere was stifling, somebody would open the windows. A long list of Vice Presidents and Secretaries was then read. Among the eminent reformers on this last were William C. Kingsley, Henry C. Murphy, and Winchester Britton. A significant circumstance occurred in connection with the reading of the resolutions which loudly proclaimed that the Ring Democracy—Kingsley, McLaughlin and the rest—were in favor of reform. In the resolutions were embodied the names of the "Boss," candidates for the different City and county offices to be filled next Tuesday. Not one of the names was received with enthusiasm, and several of them were hissed. Dorsheimer's speech followed the reading of the resolutions. It was principally devoted to abuse, which often descended to Billingsgate. Gov. Dix was an "angry old Boy in Blue," Gov. Hayes had a face like a clam, and Mr. Evarts was a modern rebel, trying to ruin the credit of the country, and to arouse the passions of the Northern men against the South. Dorsheimer said there were rebels like Mr. Evarts on the press, on the platform, and in the pulpit, pursuing a similar course. The difference between these modern rebels and the men who fifteen years ago sought to destroy the Union by force was, the speaker said, that the latter risked their lives to secure the end which the former, without danger to themselves, were trying to reach. At the conclusion of Mr. Dorsheimer's speech, Senator Kernan was introduced, and in a long address repeated all the worn-out campaign arguments that have been dinned into the ears of the people for the past two months. Between the speeches the audience were amused by negro minstrel songs and brazen bursts of music from in front of the stage. The entertainment afforded the crowd outside the Academy was made up in equal parts of brass band, fire-works, and stump speaking.

THE GERMAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

A COMBINATION TICKET ADOPTED—BOXES TO BE PLACED IN EVERY ELECTION DISTRICT.

The German-American Independent Conference Committee met last evening at 7 o'clock in Beethoven Hall, in Fifth street, Coroner Moritz Ellinger in the chair, and agreed to report a combination ticket to the County Convention of the organization, which met at 8 o'clock in the same hall. The Conference Committee were disgusted with Tammany's nominees for Sheriff and Surrogate and for two of the Coronerships, and disliked some of its nominations for Aldermen at Large. The committee agreed to report the following ticket for the consideration of the convention:

Mayor—Smith Ely, Jr., Tammany.
Sheriff—Major George W. Sauer, German Independent.
County Clerk—Henry A. Gumbleton, Tammany.
Surrogate—Charles A. Peabody, Republican.
Judge of the Superior Court—John J. Freedman, Tammany.
Justice of the Marine Court—James P. Sinnott, Tammany.
Coroners—William H. Stiner, Republican; Louis Naumann, Republican; and Richard Flanagan, Tammany.

It was resolved to ask power from the convention to nominate two candidates for Alderman at large. Coroner Ellinger said, after the adjournment of the Conference Committee, in response to questions asked him, that it was the intention to have the combination ticket printed and delivered from boxes in every election district in the city, if the Convention indorsed the action of the committee.

Herman Uhl presided at the meeting of the convention, which met at 8 o'clock, and Coroner Ellinger made the report of the action of the Conference Committee. It was resolved to take the names up singly, and pass upon them seriatim. The name of Ely was opposed vigorously, but was finally adopted. When the name of Major Sauer was presented, Justice Otterbourg spoke strongly in favor of making him the nominee, saying that he was the right man for the position, and his nomination was made amid great enthusiasm. Henry A. Gumbleton was nominated for County Clerk, without any debate. Ex-Judge Charles A. Peabody's name was received with great applause, and the mention of Delano C. Calvin's name was hissed. Judge Peabody was nominated almost unanimously, after a persistent effort had been made against him by a few delegates, who severely tried the patience of the convention. Ex-Judge Freedman was opposed by several delegates, but was finally nominated. The rest of the ticket, as proposed was adopted, the Conference Committee was given power to name two candidates for Aldermen at Large, and it was resolved to have boxes and combination tickets, as adopted by the convention, in every election district.

Major Sauer has been in the National Guard twenty-five years, is proprietor of the Germania Assembly Rooms in the Bowery, is the brother of Alderman William Sauer, and is exceedingly popular with the Germans of this City. He accepted the nomination, and promised to faithfully discharge his duties it elected.

THE ILLEGAL USE OF MONEY.

GOV. TILDEN'S PROCLAMATION ON THE SUBJECT TO DISTRICT ATTORNEYS.

The following proclamation was issued by Gov. Tilden yesterday:

The improper and illegal use of money at elections is in some portions of the State a serious and growing evil, sometimes thwarting the unbiased will of the people, and always debauching the public virtue, both of officers and electors.

The stringent statutes and recently adopted constitutional provisions relating to the subject if vigorously enforced are sufficient to soon eradicate this evil.

Now, therefore, I call upon all District Attorneys and other public officers to be vigilant in detecting and diligent in prosecuting persons guilty of the crime referred to within their respective counties, and I respectfully ask all good citizens of the State to aid them in their efforts.

Done at the Capitol, in the City of Albany, this second day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six.

WESTCHESTER CAMPAIGN NOTES.

Hon. J. F. Manning, of Massachusetts, addressed a large Republican audience on the issues of the campaign on Tuesday evening, at Armory Hall, Mount Kisco, Westchester County.

Hon. Chauncey M. Depew is announced to address the Republicans of Tarrytown at Irving Hall, in that village, this evening. Mr. Depew has achieved an enviable and well-merited reputation as an effective and vigorous political orator, and there is no doubt but that the hall will be filled to repletion.

The keepers at Sing Sing Prison have been assessed $13 50 each on their last month's salaries for the benefit of the Tilden campaign fund. One of the keepers, a Republican, Col. Wiggans, a one-armed veteran, who served with credit during the late war, refused to submit to this extortion, and was immediately discharged.

A large and very enthusiastic meeting of the Republican residents of Sing Sing was held last evening at Olive Hall, in that village. The hall was filled to overflowing, about fifteen hundred persons being in attendance, among which number were several ladies. Several campaign songs were admirably rendered by the Young American Glee Club, after which the speaker of the evening, Major Z. K. Pangborn, of New-Jersey, was introduced. Major Pangborn, who was received with hearty applause, delivered an able address, reviewing the career of the sham reformer, Tilden, and the other "reform" candidates. Throughout the greatest enthusiasm prevailed, and the demonstration was a most gratifying success.

BROOKLYN CAMPAIGN NOTES.

The regular Democratic nominee for Justice in First Judicial District has been an office-holder for twenty years. William A. Rowan, the Republican and Independent Democratic nominee, is a very popular man, and will receive large support from men of all parties.

Republicans should rise early on election morning and go to the polls. The registry is so large and so many challenges will have to be made that in this way only can they hope to cast their ballots. The Ring followers will vote early, and often if they are permitted.

Col. F. W. Obernior, the Republican and Independent Democratic nominee for Justice in the Sixth Judical District, has been for twenty years a resident of Brooklyn, was a gallant soldier during the war, and is a lawyer in good practice. His chances of election are excellent.

Hon. Jacob Worth, Republican candidate for Assembly in the Sixth District, secured the passage through the lower House last year of the bill reorganizing the corrupt Charity Commission, which was afterward vetoed by Gov. Tilden as part of the price of the Brooklyn delegation to Utica.

Remsen street, from Court street to the river, is a strong Republican district, and probably more wealthy men reside in it who are deeply concerned in the financial interests of the country than in any other street in Brooklyn. Last year the registry in Remsen street was 111; this year it is 178.

Two Republicans in the Seventh Ward were yesterday approached by Democrats and offered two votes for the Republican Presidential and State tickets in exchange for two votes for the Democratic candidate for Alderman in the ward. The very life of the Ring depends on obtaining control of the Board of Aldermen, and no stone will be left unturned to succeed.

Within the past day or two it has begun to be hinted about that a thousand men after voting in Brooklyn, are to be sent to the county towns, where there is no registry, to repeat. Every preparation has been made by the residents of the county towns to defeat this scheme, and should the repeaters attempt to vote where they are not legally entitled to vote, they will be summarily disposed of.

The German Republicans of Williamsburg held a very large meeting at Turn Hall, Nos. 61-73 Meserole street, last night. Several thousand men took part in the demonstration. The speakers were George Wren, Augustus Koch, Ripley Ropes, Mayor F. A. Schroeder, Hon. Jacob Worth, P. M. Peterson, Solomon Spitzer, James Tanner, Eugene D. Berri.

Walter L. Livingstone, the Republican and Independent Democratic candidate for Surrogate will receive a large number of Democratic votes in the Eastern District, the home of Dailey, the Ring nominee. Dailey, like Calvin in New-York, will be opposed by those of the legal profession who think that a Boss Kelly or a Boss McLaughlin should not be permitted to dictate to the voters of either county who shall fill the position of Surrogate.

The followers of the Ring nominees for Congress in the three districts of Kings County are using the old election cry, "One charge more and the Navy-yard is ours!" Veeder and Bliss, the candidates in the Second and Fourth Districts, respectively, are veteran office-holders, and the latter, before he was kicked out of the Republican Party, was one of the organizers of the old double-headed Ring in Kings County, is now being sued, with the Ring contractors, Kingsley and Keeney, and the Ring Water Commissioner, William A. Fowler, for conspiracy to defraud the tax-payers.

During these last days before the election all sorts of slanders are being circulated against the Republican Aldermanic candidates in the odd numbered wards. A specimen slander comes in the shape of a charge that Alderman Rowley, of the Seventh Ward, received some years ago $500 for his vote on the shoe contract in the Board of Supervisors. The cowardly slander was circulated by a man, who, when Mr. Rowley confronted him and forced the miserable lie down his throat, begged piteously not to be sued. Decent men of all parties ought to unite to crush the Ring slanderers on Tuesday.

It was rumored just before the nominating conventions met that Boss McLaughlin was willing to sacrifice much of the Democratic ticket to secure the election of his man Barre. The "Boss" has a large pecuniary interest in his man Barre's election. Corporal Tanner, the Republican and Independent Democratic candidate, received trustworthy information that McLaughlin's friends were offering in all directions to scratch the name of Judge Delmar, the Democratic candidate for County Clerk, and vote for his Republican opponent, Mr. Eugene D. Berri, if Republicans will vote for the Boss' man Barre. Between McLaughlin and Delmar there is little to choose. One is the actual Boss of Brooklyn, and the other aspires to the position, willing if he can to overthrow the present incumbent. If the Republicans and Independent Democrats are true to themselves, both the actual and the would-be Boss will be hurled from power on election day.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

A serious accident occurred yesterday morning on the Pennsylvania Railroad, which resulted in the death of one person and the serious injury of several others. At 6:30 yesterday morning the regular passenger train left New-Brunswick for Jersey City. At Linden Station the passenger train came in collision with three cattle cars, which had become detached by the breaking of a coupling-pin from a train of thirty-five cars, westward bound, and remained on the main track, while the train of cars to which they had been attached took the east-bound freight track. Owing to a heavy fog, the engineer of the passenger train did not observe the cars on the track ahead until it was too late to prevent the accident. When the crash came, Fireman Vandewater jumped off the engine, and from the concussion of the fall was badly injured. Joseph Lilhenstien, a drover, was so severely crushed that he died a short time after receiving his injuries. A tramp who had been stealing a ride was also seriously crushed. The force of the collision made a complete wreck of two passenger cars and four freight cars, and the engine was also damaged.

A MINISTER ON POLITICS.

Rev. Elbert S. Porter, D. D., Pastor of the Bedford Avenue Reformed Church, addressed a large meeting of citizens of Williamsburg last night, at No. 206 Hooper street, on the issues of the political campaign. On being introduced by Col. Baird, the Chairman, Dr. Porter said he was gratified at the invitation to address the meeting, and while he esteemed his sacred office as the highest held by man, it does not deprive him of his rights as a man and a citizen. The idea of States rights had not been given up by the South, and but for the Republican Party there would have been no American Union. Notwithstanding the corruption that has crept into the party, the masses have remained pure, and are now rallying to the old principles. The speaker reviewed the disgraceful history of the Democratic Party in its relation to the admission of Texas and Kansas to the Union, and, speaking of the election of Lincoln, he said the Southern aristocrats calculated that no army could come against them. Having convinced them of their mistake, we must now act as a unit, and carry out the principles of the Constitution. An earnest appeal to work for the success of the Republican ticket closed the address, which was frequently applauded during its delivery.

The Norwegian bark Alba Bavan, outward bound for the port of Glasgow, timber laden, which went ashore on the south point of Anticosti, during the gale of the 16th ultimo., is a total wreck. The crew were saved.

Five buildings were destroyed by the explosion of the powder mills near Xenia, Ohio, on Wednesday, and about five tons of powder were burned. There were no other casualties except the death of Densar, who was in the building which first blew up.

LISBON, Nov. 2. The United States frigate Vandalia collided with the Norwegian bark Atlantic. The latter's bows were stove in by the collision. The Vandalia was uninjured and towed the Atlantic to this port.

DEMOCRATIC MURDERS IN MISSISSIPPI.

NEW-ORLEANS, Nov. 2.—Gen. Auger, commanding this military department, received a dispatch from Artesia, Miss., stating that a political meeting held there yesterday ended in a free fight, in which six negroes were wounded, one mortally. United States troops were called upon by the citizens, and their prompt appearance prevented further disturbance. Quiet reigns there now, and the citizens desire the troops to remain to prevent a repetition of the riot.

BRIGHAM YOUNG'S TROUBLES.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 2.—There was an effort made yesterday to replevin the property of Brigham Young which had been sold at auction by the Commissioner. The Judge forbade the Clerk of the Court to issue and file the necessary papers, but reconsidered his action to-day and the papers being issued the property is now in charge of the United States Marshal.

SHOSHONES MASSACRED BY SIOUX.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 2.—A report from Camp Stambaugh, Wyoming Territory, says that a village of 500 lodges of Shoshones was attacked on Oct. 30 by a large Sioux war party, estimated at 1,200 lodges, at Pointed Rock, about ninety miles from Camp Stambaugh. As far as learned, only one Shoshone, named Hampy, escaped. He was the Indian who saved the life of Capt. Henry in Gen. Crook's second fight last Summer.

Jose Cepeda, a Cuban cigar-maker, who jumped from the third story of his residence, No. 35 East Broadway, on Sunday last, while temporarily insane, died yesterday morning of his injuries.

Mrs. Maggie Van Cott, the noted revivalist, will commence services at the Eleventh street M. E. Church, between Avenues A and B, on Tuesday night, the 7th inst., and continue ten days and nights.

While David S. Paige, of Paige's Hotel, at West and Spring streets, was in an auction-room in Hanover square, on Wednesday last, an adroit pickpocket relieved him of his gold watch and chain, valued at $75.

The Board of Aldermen held a brief session yesterday, but no business of importance was transacted. The board will meet next Thursday to consider the estimates for 1877, preparatory to submitting them for final action to the Board of Apportionment.

The residence of Mr. Thomas S. Brennan, President of the Board of Charities and Correction, at One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street and Southern Boulevard, was entered by sneak-thieves on Tuesday evening, who stole an overcoat and jewelry valued at $110.

At the Union Place Hotel last evening, Mr. E. C. Chamberlain and Mr. Neil Bryant entered into the following agreement: If Mr. Tilden is elected, Mr. Chamberlain will wheel Mr. Bryant around the Union Square Park in a wheelbarrow, and if Mr. Hayes is elected Mr. Bryant will wheel Mr. Chamberlain around the park. The gentleman who enjoys the ride is to carry the American flag.

The Board of Managers of the Produce Exchange yesterday adopted resolutions congratulating the citizens of Philadelphia and the Managers of the Centennial Exhibition on the success attending their efforts, and thanking them and the commercial bodies of Philadelphia for the entertainment extended to the members of the Produce Exchange and merchants on the occasion of their visit to the Exhibition.

BROOKLYN.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Theodore L. Cuyler were on Wednesday evening tendered a grand reception by their numerous friends at the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The body of John Reardon, a sailor on board the English ship Neckpore, who has for some days past been missing, was found yesterday in the river at the foot of Congress street.

The residence of Mr. Thomas A. Brooks, No. 234 McDonough street, was entered by burglars on Wednesday night, during the temporary absence of the family, and robbed of $200 worth of jewelry.

During the month of October there were twenty-eight fires, which occasioned a loss on buildings of $10,210 and on their contents of $38,062, a total of $48,272, upon which there was an insurance of $69,350.

Justice Delmar yesterday held Walter and James Kearney for examination on a charge of having burglariously entered the store of Pauline Leader on Tuesday last, and carried off $75 in currency and about two hundred pounds of sugar.

In the City Court yesterday Judge Reynolds directed the issuance of four writs of mandamus against the Board of Registry of the Sixth District of the Twenty-first Ward, compelling them to register the names of Jacob Popp, Fred Wetyler, John Kronsen, and Henry Van Glahn, which they had refused to do on the ground that these gentlemen had not been citizens ten days.

A motion was made yesterday before Judge Reynolds, in the City Court, to vacate the order of arrest obtained by the plaintiffs in the suit of Jesse Reynolds and Clarence E. Wolcott against John L. and David H. Coles for the recovery of $2,250, alleged to be due them for $938\frac{1}{2}$ tons of ice sold to the defendants in June last. The answer, besides setting up fraud in the weighing of the ice, alleges that it was of an inferior quality, and that $1,500 of the debt has been paid. Decision was reserved.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

The Friends' meeting-house, at Chappaqua, is now about two hundred years old. After the battle of White Plains, on the 28th of October, 1776, it was used by Gen. Washington as a hospital. The old edifice was recently repaired, and will probably stand for many years yet to come.

A large number of convicts were transferred from Sing Sing Prison yesterday to Auburn. There are at present confined in the former institution nearly 1,500 male and about two hundred female prisoners, and as there are only about 1,100 cells in the male prison the institution is greatly crowded.

NEW-JERSEY.

An unknown man walking on the Midland Railroad track at West End last evening, was struck by a train and instantly killed.

The trial of Oschwald and Ryan in Newark, for the murder of officer Breck, was resumed yesterday. The summing up was commenced and the case will probably go to the jury to-morrow.

Frederick Hoffman, of Union Hill, who pointed out to the revenue officials an illicit distillery in Homestead, was arrested yesterday, charged with having broken into Peter Mechlies' saloon and taken away $150 worth of goods.

Daniel Sherry and John Diamond were yesterday arrested in Jersey City and committed for trial to answer a charge of highway robbery. They met A. H. Burnett, a countryman, and, having found that he had money in his possession, plied him with liquor till he was drunk, and then robbed him of $175 in money and his valise.

Paul Heirbrandt, the real-estate agent whose mysterious disappearance from Union Hill has already been noted, presented himself to Sheriff Laverty at the Court-house, Jersey City, yesterday afternoon, and asked to be taken into custody. No warrants being in the Sheriff's hands for his arrest, the Sheriff informed him that he could not arrest him. Heirbrandt then said that he was suffering from a wound in his side, inflicted by himself. An examination showed that the wound was not a serious one.

SALE OF VALUABLE BOOKS.

The second evening's sale of rare books and works of art by Messrs. Leavitt & Co. was last night again very largely attended. Lord Kingsborough's great work on the antiquities of Mexico, in nine volumes, was sold for $12, a price far below its value. A number of elegantly bound but not rare books of standard works sold well. The Riverside press (Cambridge) edition of Montaigne's works in four volumes brought $5, and a very fine copy of Motherwell's Scottish Minstrelsy, (edition of 1827) only brought $6 25. Although the more learned and reliable work by Maitland, has, in the estimation of students of Scotch ballad literature, taken the place of Motherwell and the more attractive work by Professor Aytoun, the work of the Paisley poet has still great value in the eyes of collectors of ballad literature, and the price it sold for was absurdly low. The Turner Liber Studiorum, the original etchings reproduced by the Woodbury process, brought only $8. Five volumes of the superb edition of Pope's works, which have been in preparation by the Murrays, of London, for nearly half a century, and is not yet completed, were sold for $1 25, the trade price of each volume being about $2 50. Two very fine volumes of Ray's English and Scotch Proverbs (1721—68), a work of great value, brought $8 75. A magnificent copy of the famous "Boydell" Shakespeare was started at $10 and rapidly run up to $20, at which price it was knocked down, a great bargain to the purchaser. The amount of Shakespearean literature disposed of was not very varied, but it included some choice works. Dyce's nine-volume (1866) edition brought $3 25; Staunton's fac simile of the first edition (1623) of Shakespeare's plays fetched $21, and a very handsome volume of illustrations of scenes around Stratford-on-Avon brought $11 50. A number of law books brought fair prices. On the whole the sale has been to the advantage of the purchasers.

NATIONAL JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

SECOND DAY OF THE WASHINGTON AUTUMN MEETING—INSPIRATION, COURIER, AND RISK THE WINNERS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—This was the second day of the Autumn meeting of the National Jockey Club. The weather was clear and warm, with strong winds blowing. The track was in excellent condition and the attendance fair.

The first race was a dash of one mile and a half, for all ages, for a purse of $250; $50 to the second horse. Inspiration sold in the pools as the favorite. The horses started well, with Inspiration leading, Burgoo second, Libbie L. third, Tom O'Neil fourth, and Kenny fifth. Burgoo went forward and took the first place, leaving Inspiration second, with no change in the positions of the other horses. The same positions were held until they neared the three-quarter post, when Kenny and Tom O'Neil changed places. At the mile-post Burgoo led Inspiration by two lengths, Tom O'Neil third, Kenny fourth, Libbie L. fifth. At the one and one-quarter mile Burgoo still led, with Inspiration one length behind, Libbie L. third, Kenny fourth, and Tom O'Neil fifth. On entering the homestretch Inspiration rushed forward and captured Burgoo. The two horses came down the stretch neck and neck, when Inspiration made a desperate rush, took the lead, and held it to the finish; Burgoo second, Tom O'Neill third, Kenny fourth, and Libbie L. fifth. Time—2:41¼.

In the second race, mile heats, for three-year olds for a purse of $400, $100 to the second horse, Courier was the favorite. Leamington Second led off in the first heat Courier second, and the others bunched. At the quarter, Leamington Second still held the first place, Sunbeam had gone to the second, Hobkirk to the third, and the others were bunched. There was no change until the half mile was passed, when Sunbeam pushed forward to the first place, leading Leamington Second by a nose. On entering the homestretch Sunbeam and Leamington Second were running neck and neck, and Courier was only half a length away, and becoming a keen disputant for first position, was soon in line with the other two. When fairly in line for home, the three horses came along with a rush, but Courier made a length and took the lead, holding it to the finish; Leamington Second, second; Sunbeam third, Hattie F. fourth, Hobkirk fifth, Waco sixth, Moorhen seventh, and Gale distanced. Time—1:44¾. In the second heat Leamington Second again led off, Courier second, Hobkirk third, Hattie F. fourth, and the others bunched. Courier went to the front and held the lead until the half mile, when Leamington Second and Waco captured him, and the three horses passed the post neck and neck, with the others close behind them; going around the turn Courier regained his position. Waco took the second place, and Leamington Second filled the third; Courier led into the stretch, with Leamington Second second, Waco third, and the others following two lengths away. The rider of Waco pressed his horse forward, rode directly across and in front of Leamington Second, and against Courier, and before finishing the heat again rode into the latter horse; but Courier came in first, the winner of the heat and race, Waco second, Leamington Second third, Moorhen fourth, Hobkirk fifth, Hattie F. sixth, Sunbeam seventh. Time—1:46. For fouling, the riders of Waco and Leamington Second were disqualified from riding during the remainder of the meeting, and Leamington Second was put back to the sixth place and Waco to the seventh.

The third and last race was a hurdle race for horses that have never won a hurdle race or steeple chase; one and a half miles over six hurdles; light welter weights; purse $200, of which $50 to the second horse. There were six starters. New-York being the favorite. Risk took the lead, followed by Culpepper. Paladin was third, Bay Rum fourth, Lorena fifth, and New-York last. Risk went over the first hurdle, closely followed by Culpepper, and the others in the order named. Paladin passed Culpepper and Risk, and leaped the second hurdle. Risk was next, Culpepper being third, New-York fourth, Bay Rum fifth, and Lorena in the rear. The third hurdle was jumped in the same order. New-York took second place, and the fourth hurdle was passed in the following order: Paladin first, New-York second, Risk third, Culpepper fourth, Bay Rum fifth, and Lorena last. Risk again went to second place, leaving New-York third, with the others as before, and the horses went over the fifth hurdle in the order named. The fifth hurdle was jumped in the same order, with the exception that Culpepper and Bay Rum had exchanged places. Risk, New-York, and Paladin came down to the finish at a rattling pace, with Paladin leading by a neck; but Risk lengthened his stride, and came home first, Paladin second, New-York third, Bay Rum fourth, Culpepper fifth, and Lorena last. Time—2:56.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE WALTER B. PALMER.

The funeral of the late William B. Palmer, President of the Tenth National Bank, took place yesterday, from Rev. Dr. Taylor's church, Sixth avenue and Thirty-fourth street. After the choir had sung "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "In the Dark and Cloudy Day," Dr. Taylor continued the services by reading some passages of Scripture. He was followed by Rev. Dr. Burchard, of the Thirteenth Street Presbyterian Church, who said he had known Mr. Palmer from childhood, and eulogized him as a pure and upright man, both in public and private life. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: William D. Moore, J. H. Work, Leander Risley, Peter Cummings, President of the Broadway Savings Bank; Stephen Burkhalter, Robert Fisher, William A. Hall, President of the Oriental Bank, and S. R. Comstock, President of the Citizens' Bank.

A CARD FROM ALDERMAN HESS.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A rumor has come to my ears, that, in consequence of not having received the nomination for Sheriff, I was opposed to the excellent ticket placed in the field by the Republican County Convention. Will you please state, that in my judgment and without regard to the political principles represented by the candidates, the Republican County ticket is superior in its merits to that nominated by Tammany Hall, and I sincerely trust for the sake of good government, that it will be elected. I assure you nothing will be left undone by me in my humble efforts to secure a Republican victory. I also desire to correct the impression prevailing in the Twentieth Assembly District that I am opposed to Mr. Englehart, candidate for member of Assembly. On the contrary, I am heartily in favor of his election, and shall use all honorable means to secure the same. JACOB HESS.

THE CONTEST IN NEW-YORK.

A REVIEW OF THE CANVASS.

SUMMARY OF THE LITERATURE AFTER A SIX WEEKS' TOUR OF THE STATE—A GREAT CHANGE IN THE ASPECTS OF THE CANVASS—HEAVY REPUBLICAN MAJORITIES IN THE COUNTRY—A CHEERING OUTLOOK.

From Our Special Correspondent.

ALBANY, Friday, Nov. 3, 1876.

In completing a tour of the State of New-York, made during the last six weeks, and comprising in its scope all but four of its sixty counties, it may, perhaps, be of interest to the readers of THE TIMES to have a general summary of the situation and prospects as viewed by its correspondent. And yet so great a change has taken place in the aspects of the canvass during the last ten days, as well as in the comparative importance attached to the issues discussed, that observations made four weeks ago, or even two weeks ago, may now be regarded as comparatively worthless. It has several times been stated in this correspondence that, in computing the Republican majorities of the various counties in the interior, the lowest estimates of the least sanguine Republicans have generally been given. It is also to be remarked that these estimates, for the most part, were made at a time when the Republican outlook in the State appeared less hopeful than at any period of the campaign. The Democrats were everywhere boasting of their small success in Indiana as though it were a tremendous and unexpected victory, instead of being an actual defeat on all the issues involved in the national contest. The largely increased registry of voters in New-York City, indicating as it did then that the total would reach 200,000 and over; a similar increase in Brooklyn with the evidences of a deep-laid scheme to swell the Democratic majorities by fraud—all these things were calculated to dishearten the Republicans of the interior, and to revive in a corresponding ratio the hopes of the Democrats. As a part of the system the game of brag which the Democrats were then playing, and with a view to aid them in their bar-room bluster, bogus reports of pool betting on the result were daily issued from New-York, and telegraphed to all the Democratic papers and placarded on all the bulletins in the interior of the State. Rural Democrats, who never owned $25 in their lives, and Democratic bummers, who could not command the price of a drink, could be heard offering $100 to $60, or $1,000 to $500 that Tilden would carry the State of New-York. All this has now ceased. The registry in New-York and Brooklyn, though large and fraudulent, is not so formidable as was at first anticipated, and has lost its terrors for the Republicans of the rural districts. The pools have ceased to frighten anybody, for when they are put to the test in the country districts they are found to have no money to back them. A thousand dollars, even bet, on Hayes and Wheeler carrying this State, has been lying at a pool-room in this City of Albany for the last five days waiting in vain to be covered by Democratic money. Republicans are no longer despondent but jubilant. Since the Tilden letter on the rebel war claims, Democrats of the latter class are abandoning the ticket by hundreds. They never had any confidence in their candidate as a man, and now they have none in him as a politician. They always called him an "old fraud," and now they call him an "old fool." Two-thirds of the Democrats who are running for local offices in Republican counties are ready to sell him out if they can make votes for themselves, and their followers are willing to ratify the bargain. By conceding the Assemblymen, and County Clerks, and Sheriffs, the Republicans, if they chose, could scoop in half of the Democratic vote for their Electoral ticket in most of the Republican counties of the State.

Such is the situation now, compared with what it was two weeks ago. And yet, even then, the estimated majorities, low as they were, that were given to THE TIMES' correspondent, were sufficient to carry the State for Hayes and Wheeler against 50,000 opposing majority in New-York and Brooklyn. It would be a safe calculation to add twenty-five per cent. to those majorities in most of the Republican counties embraced in the estimates as published. It is not necessary to recapitulate these majorities, corrected in the light of recent events, or to give a table of estimated majorities by counties. It is sufficient to say that the State of New-York is as certain, in the opinion of your correspondent, to give a majority for Hayes and Wheeler on Tuesday next, as any future event which can be made the subject of human foresight and calculation. This prediction is based mainly on four propositions, the accuracy of which has been verified by personal observation and diligent inquiry:

First—The Republicans are going to poll their full vote at this election, which they have not done in four years. If the weather is passable, it will be the largest vote ever polled in the State.

Second—There are no changes, or next to none, from the Republican to the Democratic Party.

Third—The Liberals are almost all—certainly nineteen-twentieths of them—back in the Republican ranks, and are among the most zealous workers for Hayes and Wheeler.

Fourth—There are hundreds of disaffected Democrats who from the first have refused to acquiesce in the nomination of Tilden for President, and they are now being joined by thousands who gave their support to the ticket at the outset, but who have become alarmed at the tendencies of the party as developed during the canvass, and at the inevitable results that would follow its success.

Now, if there is anything, beyond mere assertions and vague speculations, unsupported by facts, to offset these propositions and indicate a Democratic victory in this State, they have entirely escaped observation.

In looking back upon the way this campaign has been conducted on the Democratic side, or rather on the side of Tilden—for it has been Tilden's campaign all through in this State, his organs and his orators having done nothing but echo him and his "literary bureau"—abundant material can be found for comment, and not a little for amusement, mingled with disgust. In the first public utterance of Tilden, after his nomination at St. Louis, he startled the public and delighted the Democracy with the announcement that he was to give them an "aggressive campaign." Now, an open and aggressive campaign by Samuel J. Tilden, a man who was never known to impart the most trivial information to any one, without first seizing his listener by the lapel of his coat, leading him into a corner, and whispering in his ear, was certain to be a novelty, and those who knew the man were curious to see how he would go about it. But they never had an opportunity. The "aggressive campaign" immediately relapsed into the "still hunt." If he ever intended such a thing, he soon discovered that he would have all he could do, and all his clerks could do, to defend himself and straighten out the crooked paths in his personal and professional career, without assuming the aggressive. But he never did intend it. It was entirely foreign to his nature. What he did do was to immediately set about inaugurating a campaign of fraud, falsehood and cant. His first move was to plaster the State all over with handbills, claiming credit for himself that he knew belonged to the Republicans. This combination of fraud and falsehood was intended as an appeal to the pockets of the people in the matter of taxation. It took six weeks of the campaign on the part of Republican speakers and newspapers to expose this lie, which had been sneakingly circulated in every variety of form among the people in the remotest hamlets of the State. The other great card of the Tilden campaign was the cant phrase "Reform." With this catchword he expected to captivate every unsophisticated farmer in the State and nation. He put it at the beginning and end of every plank in the St. Louis platform, which was the joint product of Dorsheimer and Tilden here in Albany. Tilden is said to be, even yet, laboring under the delusion that this "reform" dodge is the great issue of the campaign among the farmers. But they long since saw through that hypocritical cant, and, on examining Tilden's record, they have learned that the reform that is really "needed" is in the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. The farmers are not so easily deluded as Tilden imagines. They are more intelligent than they were when he was a boy and used to dispense peppermint and paregoric on the hills of Columbia County. And, while he imagines they are diligently poring over his "reform" tracts and lying handbills, the truth is they have cast them into the fire long ago, and are now giving their attention to the live issues of the campaign. The clap-trap issues on which Tilden tried to run the canvass, and did run it for the first two months, are now regarded as the merest rubbish. The real issues, and the only issues, on which the minds of the Northern people are fixed to-day are the rebel war claims and the expediency of turning over the Federal Government to the hands of the people who but yesterday were trying to destroy it. On these issues Mr. Tilden is entirely unprepared, either with the documents or the personal record. His tracts and handbills are worthless and of no more account now than the fallen leaves, hardly more numerous, that are strewn over the fields in the rural districts. His attempt to meet the real issues by writing a letter on the eve of election promising, in advance, to veto the claims of the men from whom he expects three-fourths of his votes, was a desperate attempt to recover the ground that was fast sliding from under him, but it has proved utterly futile. The people see that, if he keeps his promise, he must cheat the "solid South" as he has attempted to hoodwink the solid North. In either case he is a cheat. On the question of surrendering the control of the Government to the South, the people have found, on examining Tilden's record, that he sympathized with them when they were rebels, justified their secession on constitutional grounds, and refused to pay his legitimate taxes to help conquer them and preserve the Union. In fact he is found wanting in every line of his past record that has any connection with the issues to be decided next Tuesday. And these are the reasons why he will not be permitted to receive the electoral vote of New-York.

After Tilden is defeated and laid on the shelf, as he will be next Tuesday, the humiliating and disgusting features of the campaign may be left for the contemplation of those Democratic editors and orators throughout the State who have seen themselves ignored, and their legitimate work usurped during the canvass by a "literary bureau" and printing-shop conducted by "nincompoops," who have run a candidate for President of the United States after the manner that quack nostrums, patent trusses, and itch ointment are pushed before the people.

THE TEN WESTERN COUNTIES.

THE REPUBLICAN PROSPECTS BRIGHT—THE GERMANS SOLID FOR HAYES AND WHEELER TWENTY-THREE THOUSAND REPUBLICAN MAJORITY PREDICTED.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

BUFFALO, Thursday, Nov. 2, 1876.

The political outlook in this city and county grows brigher for the Republicans every day. Three weeks ago the incessant brag and bluster of the Tildenites had produced a discouraging effect upon the Republicans, but that has all passed off, and the supporters of Hayes are now closing ranks with firm hearts and steady hands. The canvass of the county is nearly completed, and shows that there will be a Republican majority of not less than twenty-five hundred, with a good prospect of its being largely increased. The Tildenites have been counting on drawing largely from the German vote, but in this they are doomed to disappointment. The Germans have not forgotten that when the Government was in want of money to aid in suppressing the slaveholders rebellion, not a dollar could be obtained from either England or France, and that when it called upon Germany, offering as the only security the word of honor of the great free North, the capitalists of the Fatherland hesitated not a moment to advance all that was asked. Remembering this, they now ask can we Germans of America vote to restore to power the rebels who endeavored to destroy the Government under which we have decided to live, and to sustain which our friends at home poured forth their treasure? The response is—we cannot; we will not. The Germans will not, at the coming elections, aid in placing Samuel J. Tilden in the Presidential chair, nor in giving to the unreconstructed rebels the control of the National Legislature.

The Congressional trouble in the Thirty first District—Wyoming, Genesee, and Niagara—is pretty much settled, although Mr. Flagler still insists on remaining in the field, being incited to this course by the Tildenites, who, although they are running a candidate of their own, flatter him with assurances of their support. He will get this in the same way that a fox supports an unwary chicken. The result will be the re-election of Mr. Hoskins, and the political burial of Thomas T. Flagler. There is a similar quarrel in the Thirtieth District—Monroe and Orleans. Some few Republicans opposing Mr. Davy, of Monroe, who has the regular nomination, and proposing to vote for Mr. E. Kirke Hart, of Orleans, the Tilden candidate, and who, having been an ardent Know-nothing, has naturally fallen into the Democratic Party, calling loudly upon naturalized citizens for their support. Mr. Davy will undoubtedly be re-elected. That staunch old Henry Clay Whig, George W. Patterson, of Chautauqua, was here this week, and says that his county will give one of her old-fashioned majorities for Hayes and Wheeler, Morgan and Rogers, and that his own majority for Congress in Cattaraugus and Chautauqua will be as large as a modest country gentleman like himself can unblushingly accept. You may put the Thirty-third Congressional District—Chautauqua and Cattaraugus—down for seven thousand majority on the general ticket.

Having given the political condition of the ten western counties—Allegany, Cattaraugus, Chautauqua, Erie, Genesee, Livingston, Niagara Orleans, Monroe, and Wyoming—a good deal of consideration, by having been quietly over a good part of them, the estimate of your correspondent is that they will give a Republican majority of 23,000, and this is a moderate calculation. There has been some fraudulent registration here, but the men are all marked, and every one of these who attempts to vote will be instantly arrested. There will be no child's play about this. Every legal voter will have a fair chance, and every illegal voter will be punished. If New-York will unflinchingly enforce the law the State is sure for the maintenance of the Union, and Tilden and his solid South will have to wait their coming day, which they will never see.

SPEECH BY HON. WM. A. WHEELER.

THE LARGEST POLITICAL MEETING EVER HELD IN MALONE—SPEECHES BY SENATOR BOUTWELL AND THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR THE VICE PRESIDENCY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

MALONE, Nov. 3.—The largest and most enthusiastic political meeting that ever took place in this county was held to-day. Nearly every town was represented, several sending delegates mounted and in uniforms. Two meetings were held, each hall being filled to overflowing. In Lawrence Hall the address was by Mr. L. W. Russell, of Canton, who spoke earnestly and forcibly for over an hour. In Concert Hall Senator Boutwell made a masterly and exhaustive presentation of the issues of the canvass. At the close of his address there were loud calls for Mr. Wheeler, who occupied a seat on the platform. The scene was indescribable, every one in the vast assemblage rising to his feet, amid tumultuous applause. Mr. Wheeler responded in a most earnest and eloquent appeal to the people to stamp out the heresy, which the South maintains, that the sword breaks what the sword has made. He spoke of the Southern problem as the one all important issue in this campaign, and one demanding the continued care of the Republican Party. He took the broadest ground on the financial questions, upholding the distinctive Republican doctrine enunciated in the platform. Both meetings were enlivened by the presence of the Malone Glee Club. This evening a grand torchlight procession is in progress, which numbers more men than any similar demonstration ever held here. Business blocks and private dwellings are illuminated, fire-works are abundant, and the town is wild with enthusiasm, betokening the deep interest of our citizens in the success of the party of freedom and honesty.

THE REPUBLICANS OF WASHINGTON COUNTY—AN IMMENSE GATHERING IN WHITEHALL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WHITEHALL, Nov. 3.—An immense Republican gathering was held here this evening, at Hall's Opera-house. Before 6 o'clock the steamer W. B. Eddy arrived, bringing delegates from the towns of Putnam, Dresden, and along the lake shore. At 7 o'clock crowds began to assemble, and long before 8 o'clock the house was filled to overflowing. Senator Prince was first introduced, and made a very eloquent speech. During his discourse a torchlight procession of nearly two hundred citizens from the town of Ticonderoga, arrived on the steamer Burden, which was kindly furnished by the owner, Hon. H. G. Burleigh. Their arrival was greeted by storms of applause. After quiet was restored Senator Prince finished, and the Whitehall Glee Club then entertained the audience with some fine vocal music. Hon. A. W. Tenney then addressed the assemblage, numbering nearly two thousand. He was frequently cheered, and his address has had a good effect, as he discoursed on all the important topics. The Republicans in Washington County are greatly aroused, and will work to increase the majorities next Tuesday.

THE OFFICERS OF THE MEETING WERE ALL UNION SOLDIERS—THE BOYS IN BLUE AT NEWBURG.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEWBURG, Nov. 3.—The last Republican meeting of the campaign, in this city, took place this evening under the auspices of the Boys in Blue. A large detachment of veterans met Gen. Daniel E. Sickles at Fishkill, and escorted him to this city. The attendance at the Opera-house this evening was immense, the meeting being by far the largest and most enthusiastic of the campaign. Gen. Sickles received a very hearty welcome. The officers of the meeting were all Union soldiers. Col. William D. Dickey presided. Resolutions were adopted indorsing the Republican platform and ticket, and pledging the Boys in Blue to spend next Tuesday in the service of their country at the polls. Speeches were made by Gen. Sickles and others.

GREAT DEMONSTRATION IN KEESEVILLE—SPEECHES BY JUDGE HALE AND STATE SENATOR PRINCE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

KEESEVILLE, Nov. 3.—A great Republican demonstration was held here yesterday. A large afternoon out-door meeting was addressed by Judge Hale, who lucidly discussed the financial question. There was a torchlight procession of one thousand, two hundred of whom were on horseback. The meeting in the evening, though commencing at 9:30 o'clock, was crowded throughout, to hear an admirable speech by Senator Prince. His clear exposure of Tilden's pretended tax reductions were specially valuable here, as refuting recent Democratic speeches. Our citizens entertained the Boys in Blue handsomely.

REPUBLICAN EARNESTNESS IN LIVINGSTON COUNTY—THE FEELING IN GENESEE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

GENESEE, Nov. 3.—The closing hours of the campaign are full of activity. Courage is not wanting; enthusiasm and earnestness abound among all Republicans. Hon. E. G. Lapham made an excellent and effective speech to a large audience at Daneville last night. John Morey, our popular candidate for member of the Assembly, speaks at East Avon to-night. Gen. L. W. Thayer speaks at Mount Morris on Monday evening. Hon. Anson S. Wood and Gen. Thayer are down for speeches at this place to-morrow night. Extensive arrangements have been made for a grand turnout. Our boys are thoroughly awake, and our majority will reach 1,000.

NEWARK, N. Y., AROUSED—A GATHERING OF 4,000 PERSONS—WAYNE COUNTY WIDE AWAKE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEWARK, N. Y., Nov. 2.—A grand Republican meeting was held here to-night. Four thousand persons were present. The largest torchlight procession ever held in Wayne County paraded the streets. Hon. George W. Hoxie, of Brooklyn, spoke to a crowded house amid great enthusiasm. Col. Albert D. Shaw, of Jefferson County, also spoke to over three thousand from the balcony of Corinthian Hall. The utmost enthusiasm prevailed, and both speeches were worthy of the grand rally. Wayne County is wide awake, and will roll up a splendid majority for our ticket.

AN IMMENSE MEETING IN KINGSTON—SPEECHES BY HON. SHERMAN S. ROGERS AND GEN. SHERIDAN.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

KINGSTON, Nov. 3.—An immense Republican mass-meeting was held here to-day. Gen. Sheridan and Sherman S. Rogers were the speakers. Music Hall was packed to overflowing. To-night there was a splendid torchlight procession. A steamer came down from Saugerties loaded with uniformed organizations, bearing torches. There were fire-works, flags, &c.

A PROCESSION OF REPUBLICANS OVER A MILE AND A HALF LONG.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NYACK, Nov. 3.—A grand torchlight procession, the largest in this county during the campaign, took place in our village this evening. The line of Republicans was over a mile and a half in length.

FAILURE OF HON. S. S. COX TO KEEP AN APPOINTMENT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TROY, Nov. 3.—A fortnight ago the Democrats announced a great speech by "Sunset" Cox, as an offset to Mr. Blaine. It was to have been delivered to-night in the Opera-house. Mr. Cox failed to appear. Local speakers made a tame meeting.

THE WALL STREET RALLY.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING THIS AFTERNOON IN FRONT OF THE SUB-TREASURY.

The arrangements for the meeting to take place at 1 o'clock this afternoon in front of the Sub-Treasury building in Wall street, under the auspices of the Republican Reform Club, are of such a nature that it will doubtless be one of the most important of the campaign. Its main object is to give to the country the truth in relation to the deplorable financial and political results that would ensue in the event of the success of the Democratic national ticket. Ex-Judge Emott, Chairman of the Republican Reform Club, will call the meeting to order and make a few appropriate introductory remarks. Hon. Theodore Roosevelt will preside, and the list of Vice Presidents and Secretaries, nearly one hundred and fifty in number, will include such business men as Messrs. John Jacob Astor, J. H. Van Alen, Levi P. Morton, and David Dows. The principal speaker will be Hon. Lot M. Morrill, Secretary of the Treasury, who will discuss the financial situation and the Southern question in relation to their bearings on the result of the national contest. A platform will be erected in front of the Sub-Treasury Building for the accommodation of the speakers and representatives of the press, and the building and platform will be tastefully decorated.

THE MERCHANTS OF DETROIT.

THE BUSINESS MEN OF DETROIT—PERSONAL EFFORTS TO BE MADE FOR REPUBLICAN SUCCESS—A BEAUTIFUL DISPLAY OF ENTHUSIASM ON THE RIVER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

DETROIT, Nov. 3.—The business men of Detroit, like those of their sister cities, have aroused to a full appreciation of the gravity of the political crisis which is upon us, and to-day a paper has been circulated and extensively signed by our wholesale merchants, pledging themselves to close their establishments on election day, and give their time to personal efforts for the success of the Republican cause. The names appended to this document include those of about all the heavy jobbing establishments of this city, and among them are Allen, Sheldon & Co., J. J. Bagley & Co., H. P. Baldwin & Co., Edson, Moore & Co., A. C. McGraw & Co., R. W. King, Jacob S. Farrand, Standart Brothers, Buhl, Ducharme & Co., Buhl, Newland & Co., Charles Root & Co., Crowl Brothers, D. M. Ferry & Co., Michigan Car Company, John Stephens & Co., Chauncey Hurlbut, and Rothschild & Brothers.

No previous campaign has ever called out as significant a demonstration or a document of this kind as influentially signed. This evening both parties are holding their closing demonstrations here. The Tilden men are having the usual torchlight procession, with about fifteen hundred torch-bearers in line, but the Republicans are giving a grand vessel parade on the river, which is the event of the campaign here, and is being witnessed by tens of thousands of people, crowding the docks along the river front. A large three-master, with her rigging decorated with Chinese and other lanterns, and a piece of artillery on board, is anchored in the middle of the river, and is used as a flag-ship. Five large steamers, four of our most capacious ferry-boats, a score of tugs, and many minor crafts, decorated with lights, and bearing companies of torch-bearers, are moving up and down the river past the city front and along the Canadian shore, amid hearty cheers and a constant discharge of fireworks. The night is still and dark, and the spectacle is one as beautiful as it is novel. No political demonstration in this region has ever surpassed it in effectiveness.

THE CAMPAIGN IN NEW-JERSEY.

A ROUSING MEETING IN PASSAIC—SPEECHES BY HON. ALFRED MILLS, HON. JOHN HILL, AND OTHERS—THE PROMISES OF THE DEMOCRACY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PASSAIC, Nov. 3.—A rousing meeting of Republicans filled Rettenger's Hall this evening to overflowing. Hon. Alfred Mills, candidate for Representative in Congress, first addressed the meeting. He charged the Democratic Party with false dealing on every hand and every occasion. "How else," he asked, "can we judge what they will do in the future than by looking at their past history, and yet they cry let bygones be bygones. Tilden's Kent letter in 1860, McClellan's platform in 1864, pronouncing the war a failure, Seymour in 1868, and the election frauds in New-York that year, and after the THE NEW YORK TIMES exposed Tweed's frauds, and the Grand Jury had indicted him, the Democratic Party, under the lead of Tilden, clung to him and elected him State Senator all these things prove that Tilden cannot be trusted with power now. Two years ago, Gov. Bedell promised good times in New-Jersey. Have they come? A working man when told the Republicans had run the country in debt, said to-day: "No, be jabers; it's the payment of the funeral expenses of the Democratic Party that makes the debt."

Hon. John Hill, ex-member of Congress, then said: "Two years ago the Democratic Party promised reform in the lower house at Washington. What have they done to redeem the promise? Not a single thing to benefit the working-men. These investigations have been blood-hounds marked: 'Smell out only Republicans that have done wrong;' and when they summoned John Roach, the ship-builder, only to learn that he once paid $500 to 'Sunset' Cox, of New-York, for electioneering purposes, they did not enter the fact in the minutes. They represent John Kelly and John Morrissey as angels of light, who would give us an earthly paradise. False in trust when in control of the lower house, what will they not do if they control the President and the Congress too? They cry reform, but I have yet to learn whom, or what, or how, they will reform. If the colored men South are allowed to vote for whom they choose, as the colored men before me can, there will be no solid South. Who has a better right to shake the bloody shirt than Rutherford B. Hayes, who came by his honestly on the battle-field, and who we shall elect to the White House on Tuesday next? To-day Boonton had a rousing out-door mass-meeting, and all places of business were closed, and Morris County is good for the entire Republican ticket."

Both speakers discussed the issues at length, and at times the applause knew no bounds. The meeting adjourned at a late hour, with three times three cheers for Hayes and Wheeler. The Democrats tried to keep their rank and file from these influences of honest truth by holding a meeting in Whitehead's Lyceum Hall but it was a failure and adjourned early.

SENATOR MORRILL AND MR. BELMONT.

THE FORMER TO REVIEW THE ADDRESS MADE BY THE LATTER—THE DEMOCRATS AND THE PUBLIC DEBT—THE WISDOM AND ECONOMY OF THE REPUBLICAN ADMINISTRATION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Secretary Morrill, in his speech in New-York to-morrow, will review the address made on Monday night last by Mr. Belmont, and will notice particularly that portion of Mr. Belmont's speech in which he denied the statement made by Judge Taft in reference to the cost of negotiating the loan of Feb., 1861. Mr. Belmont asserted that that loan was borrowed at six and one-half per cent., and not twelve per cent., as stated by Judge Taft. The records show that Judge Taft was right. The act of Feb. 4, 1861, authorized a loan of $25,000,000 for the purpose of providing for a deficiency in the income of the Government. Mr. Belmont might have devoted himself to explaining why a deficiency occurred in a time of profound peace, and why the public debt, which was less than twenty-nine million dollars when Buchanan was inaugurated, was increased to over ninety millions at the close of his term of office. Twenty-five millions was the maximum amount authorized to be borrowed by the act of Congress, and here is where Mr. Belmont makes his mistake. He worked out his six and one-half per cent. upon the basis of $25,000,000, but Mr. Belmont must have known that the Government only issued $18,415,000 in that loan, or he should have known it before proceeding publicly to criticise and correct a statement made by a public officer. To negotiate the amount borrowed cost the Government $2,019,776, and that amount is eleven per cent. of the amount actually issued, and over eight per cent., instead of six and one-half of the amount authorized, as stated by Mr. Belmont. Taking the net amount of money actually received by the Government from the sale of the bonds, which was $16,395,224, the rate paid for negotiation was over twelve per cent. To place eighteen million dollars at six per cent cost a Democratic Administration $2,000,000. To place $500,000,000 at five per cent. cost a Republican Administration $2,250,000. The difference between these figures is the difference in favor of the wisdom and economy of Republican administration.

CONNECTICUT FOR HAYES.

VICTORY WITHIN REACH OF THE REPUBLICANS—THE DEMOCRATS SERIOUSLY ALARMED—WHAT PRESENT PROSPECTS INDICATE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Nov. 3.—The Republicans of Connecticut have victory within their grasp by getting in an early and full vote next Tuesday. I have undoubted information that the Democratic State Committee is seriously alarmed in consequence of the state of the vote as made up by a revised census. In one locality especially, which need not be named here, a manifest deficiency of two thousand votes has been discovered, and in that locality the strongest hopes of Democratic success were centered. The most active efforts have been made within a few days past to repair damages, but it is found to be impossible, and now the committee has turned in desperation to other places, and no doubt money will be poured out like water, if it can be had, to change the current. But the outlook is none the less discouraging. The present prospect is that the State will be sure for Hayes, and, also, that the Democratic State ticket will suffer a worse defeat than Tilden. Moreover the Democratic managers are very anxious about the Legislature, notwithstanding the fact that they had last Spring a majority on joint ballot of nearly one hundred. The great discouragement which has possessed the party leaders is kept profoundly quiet, and the newspapers cover it up by an appearance of confidence which is not at all felt. For prudential reasons I do not disclose the weak points, but it may be thoroughly relied upon that defeat stares the Democracy of Connecticut in the face, and the vote of next Tuesday will prove the truth of this.

COL. JOHN MOSBY'S DEFAMERS.

A CAUSTIC REPLY TO SLANDERS PERSISTENTLY ADHERED TO—A MORE LOYAL MAN THAN TILDEN—BAD ADVISERS OF THE SOUTH.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Col. John S. Mosby has written the following caustic letter in reply to slanders persistently adhered to by the Democratic press, and orators of that party, notwithstanding his specific denial of the same charges in a previous letter, published in THE TIMES and other journals:

WARRENTON, Va., Nov. 2, 1876.

Col. James B. O'Neil, Philadelphia:

DEAR SIR: I have just received your letter of the 30th inst. informing me that a Democratic orator in Philadelphia had stated that Gen. Grant had appointed me to some office. I am glad that you denounced the statement as a lie. The charge originated with the Tilden Bureau, and was pronounced by me to be false in a letter published several weeks ago. They still continue to circulate this with other lies about me. I have never received in any shape the slightest favor or benefit of any kind from Gen. Grant's Administration, although I was his cordial supporter. The few ex-Confederates he has appointed to office in the South were just as loyal to the Government during the war as Tilden was, and are much more so now. I am unable to account for the ferocity with which I have been pursued by the Tilden organs, unless it be that they think that their candidate has some claim upon me for my support in consideration of the messages of sympathy and cheer which I received from him during the unhappy period when I was fighting for the overthrow of the Union. But for the advice of such men as Tilden at the North, the South would never have plunged into the disastrous war of secession, or launched her fortunes on

"That perfidious bark,
Built in the eclipse, and rigged with curses dark."

In haste, very truly, JOHN S. MOSBY.

THE TRUE STATE OF AFFAIRS IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

A STATEMENT OF FACTS BY A CIRCUIT JUDGE—DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INSTITUTED FROM POLITICAL MOTIVES—GOV. CHAMBERLAIN'S ACTION INDORSED.

The following dispatch was received yesterday at the head-quarters of the National Republican Committee, in the Fifth Avenue Hotel:

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 3, 1876.

To Hon. Z. Chandler, Chairman National Committee:

The following statement has been received here to-day. Judge Wiggin is the Presiding Judge of the circuit which embraces the Counties of Aiken and Barnwell, specially included in my proclamation, and that of the President of the United States. Judge Wiggin has just visited the actual scene of the domestic violence and insurrection, and speaks from personal observation and examination:

AIKEN, S. C., Nov. 3, 1876.

Gov. D. H. Chamberlain:

DEAR SIR: Your communication requesting an expression of my views with regard to your proclamation is just received. In my judgment the condition of affairs in certain portions of Aiken and Barnwell Counties demanded just such action as your Excellency has taken. Domestic violence, instituted doubtless from political motives, certainly prevailed in those counties and to an extent beyond the control of the civil authorities, and I have no doubt that the stationing of troops there has prevented the killing of hundreds of unarmed and inoffensive colored citizens. Very respectfully,

P. L. WIGGIN,
Judge, Second Judicial Court.

I present this testimony to the country as that of the only Judge of this State who has any knowledge, personal or official, of facts stated by me in justification of my recent action.

D. H. CHAMBERLAIN,
Governor of South Carolina.

THE PHILADELPHIA PLOT.

EXAMINATION OF ONE OF THE WITNESSES—TRACING THE BOGUS PAPER—THE DEFENDANTS IN THE CASE BADLY FRIGHTENED—WHY WITNESSES CANNOT BE SECURED FROM NEW-YORK.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Friday, Nov. 3, 1876.

Ever since last Saturday night, when the plot to flood Pennsylvania with bogus tax receipts was discovered, the Democracy have been endeavoring to discount the bad effects the exposé had upon their organization, and their newspapers, notably the Philadelphia Times, have been studiously at work in the endeavor to show that this was a scheme concocted by the Republican managers, and that Democrats were chosen to carry it out. To show how fallacious this is, it must be borne in mind that one of the principals is George McGowan, a young man whose political record is yet to be made, and who is Chairman of the Democratic City Committee. The job was not managed by those persons commonly denominated "party hacks," and who would sell their party out, but by the head and front of the Democracy of the City of Philadelphia, in league with the managers of the Tilden Literary Bureau in New-York City. This afternoon the postponed hearing of the three defendants, Henry Marcus, Samuel Josephs, and George McGowan, took place. The first named of these men is badly scared, and possibly if put on the witness stand might reveal the entire facts in the case. It was remarked to him by a person in the court room, that he placed Gillen & Nagle in a bad light by driving in the direction of their printing establishment, when it is alleged that he replied, "Well, McGowan told me drive there."

The first witness examined to-day was John Gun, who stated that he knew A. M. Walker, and that Walker resided at the corner of Franklin and Vine streets, Philadelphia; that he was Secretary of the Knights of Birmingham, and did considerable traveling; Walker informed witness that he intended to leave the City on Friday, the 27th ult., and Gun met him afterward on Monday, the 30th ult., showing that he had returned. Since that time Walker has disappeared, and it is impossible to ascertain his whereabouts. A page of the register of the Merchants' Hotel, in New-York, was produced in evidence to show that Walker had stopped there, but Gun, who was well acquainted with Walker's hand-writing, failed to identify the signature, because he said that he had seen Walker write better than was shown on the page of the hotel book. He described Walker's personal appearance, which corresponded with that given in THE TIMES of last Monday, to show that Walker is the party who superintended the sending of the paper here. W. Z. Gibson, a baggage-master of the New York and Philadelphia New Line, stated that he received the two bundles on Saturday afternoon last, from a man answering Walker's description, and that he handed them over to W. H. Doll, another employe of the road, who received fifty cents to take care of them until they reached Philadelphia, where they were to be left, according to instructions, on the platform of the depot until some one called for them. Soon two persons came, inquiring for a bundle marked "A. M. Walker," and they were given to them by a baggage-master, but no one about the dépot can positively identify Josephs and McGowan. It is either that they took no particular notice of them, or else they do not desire to tell the truth. No other witnesses were called, because those parties who could complete the chain of evidence refused to come here. George Schenck, the brother of the proprietor of the Merchants' Hotel, New-York City, who is well acquainted with Walker, at first promised to come, but this afternoon changed his mind, although a liberal offer was made to send him back to New-York to-night. The other witnesses agreed to come, but about 1 o'clock they all flatly refused. The evidence shows where the paper came from, who took it to the hotel, and makes the connecting link, showing how great the conspiracy was. As there is no law in the matter to aid the Philadelphia authorities, it is not known what will be done. It is said that emissaries of Tilden have been to see some of the witnesses, and offered them inducements not to go to Philadelphia, because if they told the truth some of their own relations would be locked up for some months. Magistrate Carpenter committed the three defendants for the next term of Court, which commences on Monday, when it is probable that the case will be called up. District Attorney Sheppard, who is the Prosecuting Attorney for the county, and a Democrat, has made considerable of a show in the newspapers about his desire to have an opportunity to push these men at once to trial, but their prosecutors have determined not to allow Mr. Sheppard this opportunity to make cheap capital for his party; but have determined to try the case with their own private counsel.

Another important fact in connection with the case is the effort made by the adherents of Tilden to keep the witnesses at home. The only mode of causing their attendance would be to arrest all concerned in it. This the Chief of Police informed me he would have done but that it would be useless, because Gov. Tilden would throw his cloak of reform and protection around the witnesses, and refuse to grant a requisition, thus virtually giving his sanction to the commission of fraud, especially when it was intended to inure to his own benefit. The witness Gun, who was first examined, is the party who, if he would tell the truth, could unravel the whole affair, because it was from a conversation had between him and Josephs in a beer saloon on Sansom street, near Eleventh, that the first clue was obtained by a Republican politician who happened in there. It is alleged that he made the contract, and secured Walker to complete the rest of the work because he is a traveler, and was more skillful in managing such matters.

MR. LEVI P. MORTON FOR CONGRESS.

Influential citizens of the Eleventh Congressional District have issued the following circular to the voters of the district, asking their support in behalf of Mr. Levi P. Morton for Congress:

We most urgently bespeak your support, without distinction of party, for Mr. Levi P. Morton as a member of the next Congress.

Mr. Morton is a citizen of the highest character and intelligence, and well fitted for the discharge of the duties of the office. He has never sought or held any public position, but has now reluctantly, and at great personal sacrifice, accepted a nomination, forced upon him by his fellow-citizens, who desire to place their interests and those of the country, as administered in Congress, in safe and competent hands. His long and honorable career as a banker, and his intimate acquaintance with the history and necessities of the national finances, enable him to bring to the service of the country a sound judgment enriched by a large experience.

The people of the district ought not to lose the opportunity now offered them of being represented at Washington by a first-class business man, and should turn out in force to secure his election.

MURDER AND ARSON IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

AUGUSTA, Nov. 3.—A party of negroes broke into a residence six miles from Aiken, S. C., at midnight, and murdered Mr. Hausman and his nephew, named Postman, both Germans. After robbing the premises, the murderers fired the dwelling over the dead bodies.

THE GRAND PARADE.

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND REPUBLICANS IN LINE.

NO POLITICAL DEMONSTRATION TO EQUAL IT SINCE THE "WIDE-AWAKES" OF 1860—THE CITY ABLAZE WITH LIGHT—MERCHANTS, BANKERS, LAWYERS, LEADING MEN OF WEALTH AND INFLUENCE CARRYING TORCHES—ROUTE OF THE PROCESSION—SALUTES TO EX-GOV. MORGAN AND GEN. DIX, GEN. SICKLES, SENATOR BLAINE, AND GEN. SHERMAN.

The grand Republican parade that took place last evening, under the auspices of the Boys in Blue of the Department of New-York, was in every sense a remarkable demonstration, and was one of the finest affairs of the kind ever witnessed in this City. In point of numbers it was a great success, there being not less than twenty-five thousand persons in line, every one of whom is entitled to vote on Tuesday next. The demonstration was a remarkable one in many respects, noticeably so because of the entire absence of even the slightest sign of the rough element which on occasions of this kind, is almost certain to make itself seen or heard. Apart from the two Brigades of the Boys in Blue, numbering about five thousand men, numerous political associations took part in the parade and greatly swelled the ranks. The call issued to the merchants, bankers, and business men generally had its effect, and there were present large numbers, showing beyond a doubt how their sympathies lie. Another noticeable fact was the absence of boys who have of late taken such active part in the Democratic demonstrations. The route of the procession was from Fourteenth street through Fifth avenue to Fifty-second street, to Sixth avenue, to Twenty-third street, to Fourth avenue, to Seventeenth street, where it was dismissed. All along the entire route immense crowds of people congregated on the sidewalks, and frequently cheered the participants in the parade, the degree of enthusiasm manifested being extraordinary. Passing up Fifth avenue the column gave a marching salute to Gen. John A. Dix and Gen. J. C. Robinson and staff, and upon arriving at the residence of Gov. Edwin D. Morgan a military salute was given to that gentleman amid great cheering from the crowds of spectators. After the procession had passed the Governor's residence the crowd who had collected in the neighborhood became utterly wild with enthusiasm, and Gov. Morgan was compelled to deliver a brief address to them. A marching salute was also given to Gen. D. E. Sickles and the Republican National and State Committees. No torchlight procession has taken place in New-York since the "Wide Awakes" turned out for Abraham Lincoln in 1860, which can compare with the parade of last evening. It was larger, it was finer in appearance, it was beyond comparison more respectable than the Democratic procession of the evening before; and the enthusiasm of the thousands of people who lined the streets along which the procession passed was remarkable. When the Boys in Blue sang to the music of the accompanying bands those songs which grew out of the war and have become national hymns, the crowd, catching the enthusiasm of the hour, took up the refrain and the streets resounded with the thundering chorus of their voices. The scene was grandest when the procession, on its return, passed in review before the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Here, on the balcony, were the members of the State and National Committees, and a throng of distinguished gentlemen, among whom were Senator Blaine and Gen. Sherman.

THE FORMATION OF THE PARADE.

As early as 7 o'clock a crowd began to gather in Washington square and in the vicinity of the Brevoort House, where Gen. Graham and his aids assembled, and by the time the first detachment of the Boys in Blue made their appearance, at 7:30 o'clock, the parade ground was quite full. The first organization that made its appearance was the Lincoln Club, which was to have the right of line as a guard of honor. The cavalry assembled around the fountain, while the formation of the infantry was made on the north-east corner, along Waverley and University places. The entire club was under command of Col. Lewis W. Stevens. The cavalry wore Army overcoats and Alpine hats, and the infantry were attired in white capes and red caps. After formation the club marched to and down South Washington square to Sixth avenue, and thence to Fourteenth street, where it took the right of line. The Fourteenth Assembly District Association assembled in East Washington place, extending in a column of companies to Broadway. On the northwest corner of the square was the Second Regiment, comprising the Fifth, Ninth, and Thirteenth Assembly Districts, under command of Col. Ellis, with Lieut. Col. Meech, and Major Edwards as Field officers, and Adjutant Ross and Quartermaster Pullis, on his staff. The organizations included the Arion Artillery Company, 100 men, and two pieces and caissons, the men being attired in a uniform of navy blue, with the letter in German text on the bosom, knee breeches and white stockings; infantry, 1,000, about two-thirds of them were in the uniform of the Boys in Blue; a cavalry corps of 200; and a pioneer corps of fifty. The latter were uniformed in white, with bearskin shakos, and carried battle-axes and lanterns. The Eighth Assembly District Association assembled in the centre of the west half of the square. It comprised an infantry battalion of Boys in Blue, a body of citizens, and six open carriages containing its officers. Next to this body was the "Siedler" Guard of Jersey City Heights, an infantry organization, attired in white shirts and white navy caps, red sashes, and white gaiters. On the east side of the square were the First, Second, and Third Assembly District Associations, under command of Col. Edward Hill. In Eighth street, west of Fifth avenue, was the Howe Sewing-machine Company employes, numbering sixty, headed by a band. Next in line was the Dry Goods Merchants' Association. The head of the procession was at Fourteenth street, under command of Major Gen. Joshua T. Owen, accompanied by the following members of his staff:

George H. Sharpe (Brevet Major, General United States Volunteers) as Colonel and Chief of Staff.

Henry Fulton (private One Hundred and Forty-ninth New-York Volunteers) as Colonel and Chief Engineer.

Charles Treichel (Brevet Lieutenant Colonel United States Volunteers) as Colonel and Inspector General.

Morris J. Asch, M. D., (Lieutenant Colonel United States Army) as Colonel and Medical Director.

Frederick Vilmar, (Colonel Eleventh New-York Volunteers,) as Colonel and Quartermaster General.

Charles R. Coster, (Colonel United States Volunteers,) as Colonel and Commissary General.

Bankson T. Morgan, (Colonel United States Volunteers,) as Colonel and Paymaster General.

Anson G. McCook, (Brevet Brigadier General United States Army,) as Colonel and Judge Advocate.

James Milward, (Captain, Ninety-ninth New-York Volunteers,) as Major and Aide de Camp.

William G. Rankin, (Brevet Lieutenant Colonel United States Army,) as Captain and Aide de Camp.

Ivan Tailof, Major, (United States Volunteers,) as Captain and Aide de Camp.

Dwight A. Lawrence (private) One Hundred and Seventy-seventh New-York Volunteers, as Captain and Aide de Camp.

William Lindsay, (Captain, Seventy-ninth New-York State Militia, as Captain and Aide-deCamp.

A. M. C. Smith, Jr., Major Sixteenth New-York Artillery, as Captain and Aide de Camp.

M. E. Sharpe, Captain United States Volunteers, as Captain and Aide de Camp.

Lawrence Beattie, Lieutenant Colonel Eighty-fourth New-York Volunteers, as Captain and Aide de Camp.

John R. Shields, Lieutenant Ninth New-York Volunteers, as Captain and Aide de Camp.

Charles Appleby (Major Eightieth United States Colored Troop) as Captain and Aide-de-Camp.

N. D. H. Clark (Captain Seventy-ninth New-York Volunteers) as Captain and Aide-de-Camp.

William J. Kavanagh (Sergeant First New-York Volunteers) as Captain and Aide-de-Camp.

A. Hamilton Mulligan (One hundred and third United States Colored Troop) as Captain and Aide-de-Camp.

Next came the chief escort—Company B, Lincoln Club Boys in Blue; the Lincoln Club Cavalry; Company A; band, and lastly the remaining companies. Gen. A. P. Ketcham, commanding; Second Brigade, Gen Lloyd Aspinwall, commanding; the Dry-goods Merchants' Association; Howe Sewing Machine Company employes, and citizens.

PASSING THE FIFTH AVENUE HOTEL.

When the head of the procession reached the Twenty third-street side of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, on the return march, a large party of distinguished gentlemen left the head-quarters of the National Committee and went out upon the porch to greet it and review the grand army of voters. The party was headed by Secretary Chandler, who towered above his associates. As soon as he was seen by the crowds on the walk and the processionists, he was greeted with hearty cheers. Following him were Dr. Isaac I. Hayes, Commissioners Wheeler and Erhardt, ex-Commissioner Laimbeer, United States Naval Constructor Steele, and others of less note. Ex-Commissioner Laimbeer was the stentor of the party, and, as his enthusiasm was boundless, his voice was continually calling out resounding cheers from his associates and the men in the procession. Soon after reaching the porch two large flags were brought out to the party. One of these was grasped by Mr. Laimbeer, who, jumping on a pedestal at the right-hand side of the stoop, called lustily for cheers for "the solid men of the North." They were given with a will, and as they were echoed down the line, Mr. Laimbeer emphasized them with a sonorous "tiger." Another gentleman took the second flag and placed himself on the left of the stoop above the crowd. From these elevated positions the "Red, White and Blue" was waved over Secretary Chandler and his friends. As the several divisions passed they were greeted with wild applause led in every instance by Mr. Laimbeer and joined in enthusiastically by Secretary Chandler. The latter gentleman was particularly well pleased when the students of Columbia College and the Columbia Law School passed him. When the procession had partly gone by the Police cleared a path between the porch and the curb, and Col. DeKay stationed there two Boys in Blue to uphold a large flag so as to draw the attention of the men to the distinguished gentlemen reviewing them. At this time Gen. Sherman, who had just arrived, appeared at an upper window. He was not noticed, however, and when he was asked to make himself known by descending to the porch, he declined. He watched the pageant until it's end, and expressed surprise and wonder at the grand display. Battalion after battalion came and went, division after division passed by, some singing "Marching through Georgia," others trumpeting forth the stirring song, "We'll rally round the flag, boys." Though the procession gave no sign of ending, as it was growing very late, the fear that Senator Blaine would be too late to see the display was aroused, and a feeling of disappointment was expressed by Mr. Chandler and others. But, when the fear was strongest, Mr. Blaine appeared, having just returned from a meeting in Brooklyn. He looked in sturdy health, and his face glowed with pleasure. As soon as he was seen, the street resounded with cheers. Accompanied by Secretary Chandler, he went to the curb in front of which the two Boys in Blue stood, and with bared head saluted his countrymen and fellow-patriots in line.

The Secretary and Mr. Blaine remained at the curb until the last man of the last company had gone by, and every Republican that saw him uttered a hearty cheer for the Senator from Maine. When all was over he retired to the hotel, saying: "This is grand, but it's a pretty lively institution over in Brooklyn, too."

ALONG FIFTH AVENUE.

Turning their backs to the fire-works, which were discharged at fitful intervals from Madison square, the serried ranks of horse and foot proceeded rapidly up Fifth avenue with a firm and even tread. The houses along the route were illuminated, and dense rows of spectators lined the streets and covered sidewalks and stoops. At 10 P. M. the van of the procession came in front of ex-Gov. Morgan's residence, at Thirty-seventh street. The windows of this house as well as those of the surrounding residences were brightly lit up, and rows of faces lined every window fronting on the avenue. The scene at this point was a very brilliant one. The long rows of lighted torches made the vista seem like a solid mass of flame. The space on the sidewalk, in front of ex-Gov. Morgan's residence was cleared of spectators, but they were crowded as closely as possible, and much too close for comfort, on the sidewalks and in the streets round about. Sergeant Sinnock, of the Twenty-seventh Precinct, had charge of the police arrangements at this point, and he and his squad of fifteen men did their duty thoroughly and well, and withal very courteously. A flag was displayed from the roof of ex-Gov. Morgan's residence, and another large one was suspended in front of the house. The old war Governor himself stood on the stoop wrapped up in a long Ulster overcoat. He was surrounded by a number of prominent gentlemen, among whom were Hon. William E. Dodge, Hon. Thomas C. Acton, Postmaster James, Gen. Thomas Hillhouse, James Terwilliger, William F. Rowland, Gens. Chester A. Arthur and George H. Sharpe, Charles Stuart Welles, Dr. E. D. Morgan, Jr., and others. On the balconies, too, were quite a large number of ladies, who displayed quite earnest enthusiasm and waved their handkerchiefs at those marching by. Immediately in front of the house and at the curb stood two "Boys in Blue," in uniform, with caps and capes, who supported another American flag waving from a long pole. As the van of the procession appeared in front of the residence ex-Governor Morgan made his appearance, and he was greeted with hearty and prolonged applause. Loud cheers followed from the marching men, and further cheers were given in succession as each body of men passed in review. To all these demonstrations ex-Gov. Morgan responded by lifting his hat and bowing gracefully. The uniformed men passed by with a military salute followed with cheers. The ununiformed merchants, however, were not content with this, but gave cheer on cheer and waived their hats wildly. The ranks were very well preserved, and the excellence of the marching won many encomiums. The ex-Governor made a particularly deep obeisance as the wagon bearing the old Henry Clay banner of 1841 passed by. There was some variety in the cheering. Thus cheers were given for "ex-Gov. Morgan," for "E. D. Morgan," for "the old war Governor," for the "American flag," and for Hayes and Wheeler. The syllabic cheer of C-o-l-u-m-b-i-a of the Columbia men and the old Princeton College cheer were also heard. The presence of the ladies in the procession was also recognized by the ex-Governor, who made a most courteous response. Additional enthusiasm was manifested as the well-known strains of "Hold the Fort" came sonorously from the "Morgan Legion" band. The procession, by actual timing, took more than one hour and forty minutes in passing the residence. Toward the close some fire-works were discharged by the men in line. As the column proceeded further up Fifth avenue, and past the residence of Hon. Levi P. Morton, cheers were given for that gentleman. After the procession had passed the residence of ex-Gov. Morgan the crowd of spectators gathered round about the house in a dense mass, and exhibited its enthusiasm in tumultuous cheers and cries of "Morgan, Morgan, speech, speech." This was kept up for nearly ten minutes after Mr. Morgan had retired to his parlor. The cries from the people were so earnest and persistent that ex-Governor Morgan, in response, again went out in front of his residence and bowed. His reappearance was made the occasion of the most tumultuous cheering, waving of handkerchiefs, and applause. Finally, order was in some degree restored and ex-Gov. Morgan stepping forward made a few remarks, in which he said it was very well that the people of the United States have the opportunity every four years to select their rulers. The opportunity was now before them and they could on Tuesday next save themselves from falling over the precipice at whose brink they were standing. He asked them all to do their duty then, and to cheer the hearts of the friends of liberty all over the country. Additional cheers and applause followed these remarks and after this came "three times three and a tiger." The gathering then dispersed peaceably, ex-Gov. Morgan and those present at his residence all expressed their extreme gratification at the remarkably fine display that had been made.

THE FIRST BRIGADE.

To say that the First Brigade of the Boys in Blue, which numbered at least five thousand men, elicited much enthusiasm along the route of the procession would be but a poor way of expressing the feeling created among the immense crowds that lined the sidewalks and filled the stoops. The brigade was composed of the First, Second and Third Regiments, largely made up of colored Republicans, who evoked a remarkable degree of enthusiasm, and did great credit to the officers commanding them by their excellent marching. This brigade took its place in the column immediately behind the Lincoln Club Regiment, at Sixth avenue and Fourteenth street, and as it defiled into Fifth avenue was cheered to the echo by the throngs on the sidewalks. First came Brig. Gen. A. P. Ketchum, the Commanding officer, who was assisted by Capt. Henry C. Perley, Senior Aid, and First Lieuts. F. E. Farmer, John D. Terry, Robert J. Clyde, and Benjamin F. Finley. These gentlemen, all of whom were mounted, were followed by a large body of citizens of the Eleventh Assembly District, who marched fifteen files front. Then came the First Regiment, Col. James B. Kiddoo commanding, headed by two files of pioneers carrying axes, and composed of the Eleventh Assembly District Boys in Blue. Several handsome banners were displayed by this regiment, which also bore a number of transparencies bearing the names of the National and State candidates, and the motto "We vote as we shot." Next came the Lincoln Hayes and Wheeler Campaign Club, 150 strong, all colored men, bearing torches and transparencies with portraits of Hayes and Wheeler. These were followed by the Second Regiment, under command of Col. Samuel Mennies, and composed of the Boys in Blue of the Fifteenth Assembly District, and the Gen. Kilburn Knox Association of colored men, 200 strong. Several banners were displayed by this regiment, which bore the names of Hayes and Wheeler, Morgan and Rogers, and one bore the motto, "We vote for those who pay their income tax; not for those who live by it." At the end of the regiment came a square of men drawing a cannon. The Third Regiment, Col. Thomas B. O'Dell, commanding, was composed of the Boys in Blue and a large number of citizens of the Seventeenth Assembly District, and a detachment of the old volunteer fire department, wearing red shirts and fire-helmets, the latter decorated with the names of Hayes and Wheeler. The absence of boys from the ranks of this brigade was very noticeable, the entire body being composed of voters.

THE SECOND BRIGADE.

The spectacle preceded by the Second Brigade Boys in Blue, under command of Gen. Lloyd Aspinwall, has never been equaled in its way in New-York. The brigade consisted of five full regiments of ten companies each, beside three or four independent battalions and companies, and not a boy could be found anywhere in the ranks. every torch there represented a voter who will deposit his paper bullet for Hayes and Wheeler next Tuesday with as steady a hand and as unerring an aim as he used to direct the leaden messenger or wield the glittering sabre during the days of the rebellion. On one of their transparencies was inscribed the sentiment:

"We licked the solid South once,
We'll do it again"

And next Tuesday will show that this is no idle boast.

At the head of the column rode Gen. Aspinwall on a magnificent horse, in the full panoply of military equipments, and followed by a staff consisting of:

Brvt. Brig. Gen. C. A. Carleton, Assistant Adjutant General.
Col. William Treechel, Inspector.
Capt. John A. Dowley, Quartermaster.
Capt. Henry E. Howland, Judge Advocate.
Major Willard Parker, Jr., Surgeon.
Col. Ed. Gebhard, Aide de Camp.
Capt. John Crawford, Aide de Camp.
Capt. Charles A. Benedict, Aide de Camp.
Lieut. Wm. H. Aspinwall, Aide de Camp.

The First Regiment—the Lincoln Club—under command of Col. Charles S. Strong, was detached from the brigade early in the evening, and given the post of honor—the right of the line—because it was, numerically, the strongest organization in the procession, numbering, all told, 950 men. The Second Regiment, therefore, headed the Second Brigade. It was commanded by Col. E. W. Ehlen, and numbered 875 men. Behind the second came the mounted troop, 200 strong, under Capt. O'Brien; the Staten Island Battalion, 350 strong, and commanded by Major Cameron; the Third Regiment, (colored,) 850 strong, and commanded by Col. James B. Lee; the Fourth Regiment, 800 strong, under Col. Edward Hill; and the Fifth Regiment, 500 strong, commanded by Col. J. H. Brady; making an aggregate of 4,700 men. When it is understood that every man was in uniform and carried a torch, and that the various regiments and companies marched with the steady tread and military bearing of veteran soldiers—as most of them were—some idea may be had of the imposing spectacle presented. Indeed, the blare of silver-tongued bugles, the steady roll of numberless drums, the soul-stirring strains of a score of bands, the thrilling notes of "Marching Through Georgia" and "Rally 'Round the Flag Boys," which echoed from 5,000 throats; the countless silken banners that kissed the soft breezes of the night; the neighing of gayly-caparisoned chargers, who impatiently champed their bits and pawed the ground—all, all threw about the scene a glamour of the never-to-be-forgotten days when a "solid South" reared its impious hand against the nation, and endeavored to do with the bullet what it could not accomplish with the ballot. Gen. Aspinwall should be proud of his gallant Second Brigade, and if they vote next Tuesday as well as they marched last night, and as well as they used to shoot, the whole country will be proud of them too.

THE MERCANTILE BRIGADE.

The most impressive portion of the parade was the procession of the merchants and business men of New-York. It was a sight, the like of which was never before witnessed in this City. There were nearly two thousand gentlemen, including some of the wealthiest and most thoroughly representative merchants in New-York. The effect of such a procession upon the voters of New-York and of other cities will be beyond calculation. In accordance with the orders of the Grand Marshal the business men formed in line off Fifth avenue in Eighth and Tenth streets, and waited patiently their place in the parade, The dry goods men were the most numerous, numbering over a thousand. They were commanded by Gen. J. H. Liebenau, who was aided by Messrs. John F. Plummer, of Pomeroy & Plummer; Marville N. Cooper, of Whittemore, Peet, Post & Co.; S. W. Coe, of W. L. Strong & Co.; William E. Webb, of Dunham, Buckley & Co.; F. R. Townsend, of Townsend & Yale; J. G. Dudley, George C. Colburn, and William H. Marvine. Immediately behind Grafulla's Band, which headed the dry goods men, a large transparency was borne, bearing the legend, "The Dry Goods Merchants' Republican Club." At the rear of the procession was a six-horse team, loaded with dry goods boxes, and bearing a calcium light, which illuminated the procession brilliantly. Another load of dry goods boxes followed, all of which were marked as if for shipping. One of them bore the address, "Hayes and Wheeler, Washington, D. C.," and another was marked "E. D. Morgan, Albany." Nearly every important dry goods house in the City was represented, among others being the firms of Whittemore, Peet, Post & Co., Pomeroy & Plummer, Dunham, Buckley & Co., Walker & Hammond, Townsend & Yale, Banendahl & Co., N. Sullivan & Co., Wendel, Hutchinsons & Co., Goodwin, Smith & Co., Lewis Brothers & Co., H. B. Claflin & Co., Halsted, Haines & Co., Low, Harriman & Co., William L. Strong & Co., Harbison, Shiner & Co., Chase, Stewart & Co., William Trumbull & Co., Coffin, Otheman & Spaulding, and J. M. Wentz & Co. The men were formed in platoons of eight, and most of them carried small flags with pictures of Hayes and Wheeler. There were several transparencies. One bore the inscription, "We want honest money, honest reform, and loyal men." The dry goods men were formed, in the first place, at the Union League Club-house. They met there at 7 o'clock, and from there marched to the waiting position assigned them on Tenth street. It was 10:30 o'clock before they moved. For three and a half hours they were kept waiting, But there was no complaining of any sort. Heads of firms and gentlemen occupying subordinate positions mingled together in perfect equality. They were all animated by the same purpose. What that purpose was is illustrated by the remark of one of New-York's leading merchants. "I have lived in New-York," he said, "twenty-six years, and this is the first time I ever appeared in a procession of this kind. And what I say of myself I can say of hundreds of others whom I recognize. They never did this thing before. But I tell you this is a great crisis, and if the knowledge that I was here will help the Republican Party one vote I'll wait here all night."

By some error, the dry goods men got into the procession ahead of the place assigned them, and Gen. Graham's division of business men not distinctively connected with the dry-goods trade, was left behind. Gen. Graham's division was to have lead the column of business men, he having been selected as the marshal of the column. His division was made up of such men as H. K. Thurber, L. S. Stockwell, C. W. Burton, Fletcher Harper, R. I. Wells, Justice Kasmire, J. Gallinger, Barnard N. Judd, Commissioner Disbecker. His aids were Thomas L. James, George M. Van Nort, A. B. Cornell, B. F. Manierre, Thomas E. Stewart, Gen. John Cochrane, Weeks W. Culver, Gen. Alexander Shaler, Gen. J. J. Bartlett, Gen. Anson G. McCook, Col. Hamlin Babcock, Gen. Thomas W. Hillhouse, Thomas C. Acton, Charles A. Peabody, George Opdyke, George W. Blunt, Gen. Joseph C. Jackson, Gen. F. R. Cruger, Gen. J. H. Liebenau, John I. Davenport, James T. Hale, Gen. George H. Sharpe, Col. Drake De Kay, Major W. S. Dodge, Col. George F. Hopper, Col. F. E. Howe, Dwight A. Lawrence, Major J. M. Bundy, A. M. Palmer, Abraham Disbecker, Gen. H. E. Tremain, Isaac Henderson, Jr., Hon. Thomas Murphy, Gen. C. A. Arthur, Hon. G. E. Kasmire, Hon. B. T. Morgan, Sheridan Shook, G. N. Hale, C. A. Seward, D. D. Conover, H. R. Wells, L. P. Morton, Major G. W. Corney, ex-Gov. E. W. Salomon, Robert H. Strahan, and George W. Betts.

The separation of the two divisions of the business men was regretted by the Marshal and other officials of the procession, but it did not at all lessen the effect upon the spectators. It was rather an advantage to have had the dry goods merchants apart from the others, for it gave a better idea of their numbers than could have been had if all had marched together. The progress of the business men up Fifth avenue was attended with a continuous round of cheers and salutes of various kinds. Men and women joined in expressing their most hearty appreciation of the service which the business men of New-York were doing their country in joining in the procession.

UNATTACHED AND VISITING COMPANIES.

The Lincoln Battalion of the Fifteenth Ward, unattached, formed an escort to Major Gen. Owen, and numbered 800 men. They looked to good advantage in their blue capes and army regulation caps, and marched in splendid order. Col. Stevens commanded the battalion, and his subordinates were; Capt. Noble, Company A; Capt. Wallace, Company B; Capt. O'Brien, Company C; Capt. Parker, Company D; Capt. Van Cott, Comprny E; Capt. Warfiel, Company F; and Capt. Harris, Company G. Col. Stevens' Staff were: James A. Carroll, Adjutant; William Terhund, Quartermaster; Dr. J. H. Dorn, Surgeon; Lieut. Col. Jacob Gilier; Rev. Henry Highland Garnett, Chaplain.

The visiting companies were the Hoboken Boys in Blue; First Lieutenant, F. Brandies; Second Lieutenant, W. Mahon; the Orient Battery, Jersey City, commanded by Lieuts. Dowd and Oelrich, numbering 150 men, and having in their ranks pieces of artillery and one piece of field artillery belonging to the war of 1812. They wore blue shirts with the letter O on the breast, white leggings, and blue caps with white band. They were a fine body of men and were much admired by the spectators. Also the Crocker Battery, of Jersey City, numbering 130 men, in light blue shirts with red trimmings and fatigue caps and leggings, commanded by Capt. Abernethy and Lieut. Paine.

THE CROWDS IN THE STREETS.

Even in the lower portions of the City, at points where different bodies of those who were to take part in the parade were to pass, the streets were lined and great enthusiasm shown. Judging from the crowds in the Bowery, Third avenue, and other of the principal thoroughfares, one would suppose that these were on the line of the route; but would be easily undeceived on approaching the rendezvous in Washington square, where the crowd was so dense that it was almost impossible to make way through it. Fifth avenue, from Washington square to Fifty-second street, where the procession turned into Sixth avenue, with the exception of the roadway, was literally without standing room, and, as seen from an elevation, presented a sea of fire, lined on either side by a wall of blackness. The lower part of the avenue is at present undergoing repairs, and the piles of cobble-stones afforded an especially favorable position for sight-seeing, and as a consequence every foothold was occupied. Passing up the avenue, it would seem that every residence on it had been temporarily leased for the time being, for every stoop, balcony, and railing was fully occupied—made public property by those who could not gain a good view from the sidewalk. The windows of the various club-rooms, and the door-steps as well, were crowded, fully evincing the great interest felt in the demonstration. Along the avenue there was little attempt at illumination but most of the prominent hotels were lighted up, and thus added to the occasion. From some of the residences there was quite a display of flags, and from time to time, as the procession passed, a flood of fireworks. Through Fifty-second street, Sixth avenue, Twenty-third street, and Fourth avenue, it was the same, and it was the oft-repeated remark, heard on every side, that never had such crowds been gathered in the streets of New-York. At various places on Sixth avenue colored fires were constantly burned while the procession was passing, making the scene one of peculiar brilliancy. A particular occasion of remark was the great number of ladies that were present everywhere along the route. As the various division passed along they were received with hearty cheers—cheers which did not grow less in volume, despite their number. Not a single instance of disorder was noticed throughout, everything passing off without incident of remark.

FLASHES FROM THE TORCHES.

The Hoboken Boys in Blue made a very good showing in the procession last night.

The students from Columbia College Law School were among those who took part.

The Cuban Republican Club turned out 400 strong, and were commanded by A. Yarca.

Several cannon drawn by Boys in Blue formed in squares attracted a great deal of attention.

Small detachments of the old Fire Department were also a very noticeable feature of the parade.

The Mutual Base-ball Club, of Hoboken, in their neat uniform, elicited much applause from the admiring crowds.

Many members of the Seventh Regiment in civic dress took part in the demonstration and set off rockets and roman candles by the score.

Fifty members of the Produce Exchange and a large delegation from the Cotton Exchange, and from the Stock and Gold Boards were in the procession.

The body of men that made its appearance in the parade under the banners of the Ninth Assembly District predicts the sure success of the Republican ticket on Tuesday.

The colored division of the Boys in Blue had two companies of artillery bringing up their rear. They were commanded by Capt. Andrew Parker, and turned out 200 strong.

A sail-boat under full sail and a banner bearing the inscription, "We vote for those who pay their income tax, and not for those who live by it," were among the interesting features of the procession.

The dry-goods merchants made a very fine display, and were loudly applauded along the line of march. They had 600 men in line, and were commanded by Gen. J. H. Liebenau and Adjutant W. H. Marvin.

The Sheridan Shook Battalion of the Sixteenth Assembly District, turned out in large numbers and presented a very fine appearance. They marched with military precision, and looked picturesque in their handsome military costumes. They carried several banners bearing devices of an appropriate character, and they attracted much attention by their numbers and soldierly bearing.

The crowds that congregated along the line of the procession were no less demonstrative in their patriotic ardor than those who composed the line of the procession. It was a thoroughly cosmopolitan crowd, representing all shades of politics and intelligence, but all welded together in truly democratic fashion by the inspiriting sympathy of a common cause. The native-born American element, the German and Irish adopted citizens, were all there combined in one harmonious body, bearing willing testimony to the popularity of the procession and the motives which guided the men who marched in the ranks.

A DEPUTY MARSHAL STABBED.

Last evening, John J. Mead, a United States Deputy Marshal, residing at No. 265 West Houston street, while standing on the corner of Bleecker and Jones streets, was stabbed in the left shoulder and on the head by Samuel Tere, aged nineteen years, of No. 81 Horatio street. The stabbing originated in Tere being, as Mead alleges, accidentally tripped by the latter, whom Tere charged with intentionally impeding his progress. Tere was arrested, and the wounded man was sent to the New-York Hospital.

MR. BLAINE IN BROOKLYN.

THE LAST GRAND MASS-MEETING OF THE CAMPAIGN.

BROOKLYN'S CITIZENS TURN OUT IN VAST NUMBERS IN FAVOR OF HAYES AND WHEELER—HON. JAMES G. BLAINE ON THE SITUATION—PARADE OF THE BOYS IN BLUE.

The last grand mass-meeting of the campaign in Kings County was held last evening by the Republicans of Brooklyn in the Rink, on Clermont avenue. The vast structure, which has a seating capacity of six thousand, was at an early hour in the evening densely crowded. Immense throngs sought admission in vain after 7:30 o'clock, and for an hour after the cars going in the direction of the Rink were overloaded. An audience so large and so respectable has rarely been brought together, either in New-York or Brooklyn. Among the prominent men on the platform were S. B. Chittenden, Samuel McLean, Franklin Woodruff, A. B. Thorn, Silas B. Dutcher, B. D. Silliman, J. S. T. Stranahan, Gen. Jourdan, Charles R. Fellows, Major George D. Weeks, A. J. Perry, Demas Barnes, John French, ex-Mayor Booth, George L. Nichols, Dwight Johnson, Mayor Schroeder, David Williams, W. L. B. Steers, Isadore M. Bon, D. O. Tatrem and Henry W. Sage.

The meeting was called to order by Major George D. Weeks, who introduced Gen. Isaac S. Catlin, the one-legged veteran of the war, as Chairman. Gen. Catlin was cordially received. He returned thanks in a graceful address, and predicted that if the Republican Party stand firmly in line on Tuesday—if the men who stood by Lincoln and the Union stand together—then the result will be a grand victory. He believed they would stand firmly together. In 1861 a solid South made a solid North, and to-day the people are as thoroughly aroused as they were in the war times. It was not so sure that there would be a solid South. Uncle Sam had something to say about it. A few gentlemen in blue had gone quietly down into these belligerent States, and they would see that the holy right to vote was accorded to all citizens. He believed that many of these States would vote with the Republicans. But whether they did or not, the result would be the same. Mr. Tilden would be elected to stay at home, where he would have time to write a book entitled, "A Bachelor Seeking for the Presidency, instead of a Wife," or he might occupy his leisure in telling the people how he defrauded the Government in its hour of peril of his income tax.

The list of Vice Presidents, containing the names of some of the most prominent men in Brooklyn, was read, at the conclusion of Gen Catlin's speech. Hon. Silas B. Dutcher read the resolutions, as follows:

Resolved, That, as American citizens, impressed with a due sense of our obligations, we feel that the elevation of the Democratic candidates for National and State offices would be a practical abandonment of our finances to the control of quacks and tricksters—would continue for an indefinite period the "hard times" which are eating up the vitals of our community—and would be a shameful surrender on the part of the people who preserved the Union to the rebels who sought to destroy it, while in our judgment the election of the Republican candidates would strengthen the national credit, would quicken into life the thousand industries by which our people earn their daily bread, and would be an emphatic pledge that the blood of heroes, so freely given to their country in its need, had not been shed in vain.

Resolved, That while the vast national interests involved in the coming election cannot be overestimated, the one-man power which has controlled the Democratic Party of Brooklyn should not be overlooked, and the crimes of the local Democratic Ring should not be forgotten. Between the one and the other there has been a continuous partnership of guilt; public offices have been prostituted; the public good has been sacrificed without one moment's hesitation; the enrichment of private individuals has been accomplished at the cost of thousands of innocent tax-payers and laboring men, and every principle of public morals, as well as every instinct of self-preservation, requires that the perpetrators of such crimes be brought to justice, and subjected to the condemnation of the people they have wronged.

Resolved, That as one means to the accomplishment of these ends, this meeting commends to the voters of this city and county the joint ticket put forth by both the Republican and Reform Democratic Conventions, in the confident expectation that a resolute support will be crowned with an overwhelming victory.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted, after which Corp. Tanner, who left both his legs on the battle-field fighting for the Union, was introduced. The cheering lasted for several minutes, and, when it subsided, it was renewed again and again. Corp. Tanner said that he thanked them from the bottom of an overcharged heart for the warmth of their reception. He was a candidate for a local office, but he proposed to discuss briefly the national issues. He had been advised by a Democratic friend, that in view of the fact that he was a candidate for office he had better not speak. He was of a different opinion, however. He was for Rutherford B. Hayes because Mr. Hayes had not to go out and look for a certificate of character when he sought the votes of his fellow-citizens to elect him to the Presidency. Mr. Tanner dwelt on the danger of electing Mr. Tilden, in view of the immense Southern claims, and closed with an earnest appeal to Republicans to work expressly for the success of the Presidential, State, and local tickets.

Mr. Blaine being unavoidably delayed, Hon. S. B. Chittenden, who was present on the platform, was next introduced. He said the second great contest for the unity and integrity of the United States was to occur on Tuesday next. It was well to understand the true character of the opponents in the struggle. He was willing to say deliberately that the present House of Representatives of the United States is and has been for the past eight months in the control of men who forfeited their lives to their country. The real issue was whether these men shall govern the country. The pivot upon which the Democratic campaign turns was the cry for change. It was a cry full of insincerity. They propose to remove from power the party that saved the Union, and they are as sensible as one who would advise a great mercantile establishment to turn out all the employes, because one had proved unfaithful. Yet that is precisely what the cry of change means. The Democrats propose to elect Mr. Tilden President on the promise that he will turn out 100,000 men who understand the business of the country, and replace them by fresh men, entirely ignorant of the methods of conducting the Government.

While the band was playing after the conclusion of Mr. Chittenden's address, the coming of the speaker of the evening was announced. Such a scene of enthusiasm as followed the entrance of Mr. Blaine passes all description. The audience cheered again and again, the men standing up on their seats, and the ladies, of whom there were hundreds present, waved their handkerchiefs and clapped their hands. Mr. Blaine said he was sorry he could not appear before so magnificent an audience with his natural voice. He had made sixty speeches, and only the night before his voice broke down. He was glad it was in a good cause. If that cause was only opposed by an honest vote there would be no contest in the United States. The Democrats were practicing crime and brutality at one end of the country and a sort of petty larceny at the other end. Mr. Blaine said the issues of the campaign were many, but his voice would not allow him to present them. Before all other issues were two. They were trite and well known. Those issues were that the loyal men who saved the Government shall continue to rule it, and that it sectionalism is to rule let it be the section that saved the country. The Republican Party have no proscriptive right to rule this country, but they have the right to rule it until an honest majority of votes legally cast decides that they shall not rule it. It had taken centuries to educate the Anglo-Saxon race to a belief that a majority, even of one, if it be honest, shall rule. The Republican Party is not even accused of a fraud at the ballot-box. They say that intimidation is being used in the South, but there is not an intelligent person who believes that the Army will prevent one man from voting for Wade Hampton. If the Republican Party is beaten, it goes down with an unstained banner, bearing on it all the stars that represent the Union. The Democrats tell us that they carry the solid South. The speaker said there were six States in the South if left to a free vote that are as Republican as the State of Maine. When the Democrats claim a solid South they proclaim their own shame. The election in the State of Mississippi last year gives a good idea of what the Democrats call a fair election. In that election, in which the Democrats claim to have recovered the State by a rightful majority, there were more men murdered, and murdered in connection with the election, than have been murdered in all the election fights that have taken place over the whole country in a year. There have been more men murdered since the war, for political opinion in the South, than were murdered at any three battles of the war. Democrats sneer at these facts and call the relation of them shaking the "bloody shirt," but such outrages, such tragedies, cannot be tolerated as long as God Almighty is just. It is a mistake for any man however high to imagine that he can trample on the rights of another, no matter how humble, without ultimate danger to himself. The three last amendments to the Constitution must be enforced or repealed. The one thing that cannot be permitted is that those amendments be allowed to remain a dead letter. These amendments were of as much importance to foreign-born citizens as to the colored men. Before the fourteenth amendment was passed there was nothing in the Constitution to guarantee the right of citizenship outside of the State in which that citizenship was obtained. Thomas A. Hendricks, the Democratic candidate for Vice President, voted against that amendment. Mr. Blaine said the omens were good. He had just returned from an extended tour and he had cheerful news. If there was a solid South for the Democracy he could say there was a solid West for Hayes and Wheeler. Mr. Blaine concluded by promising that New-England, with the possible exception of Connecticut, would be solid for the Republicans. Addresses were also made by Hon. Silas B. Dutcher, Hon. Eugene D. Berri, and others.

PARADE OF THE BOYS IN BLUE.

To the casual observer, perhaps, all torch-light processions may look precisely alike; and certain it is that they do present many of the same characteristics. But a close inspection is always sure to develop many features that are both new and interesting. And so, as a matter of fact, the monster parade of the Republican Boys in Blue in Brooklyn last night in honor of Hayes and Wheeler, and to welcome United States Senator Blaine to the Brooklyn Rink on Clermont avenue, was a notable demonstration, and one which far surpassed anything of the kind ever witnessed in that city. It was the last parade of the "Boys" during the campaign which has now so nearly come to a close, hence, there was an enthusiasm and a vim about the whole affair, and a desire to appear well and to do well, which served to render the parade very imposing, very pleasing, and very successful. As early as 7 o'clock the entire city was ablaze with torches, as the various companies hurried to the rendezvous on Bedford avenue, near Clymer street, where the division was to form; while the sound of fife and drum and bugle, the glare of transparencies, and the shouts of the crowds which everywhere greeted the various clubs, created a picture at once animated and beautiful. The column when formed consisted of six regiments, and these were commanded respectively by Col. William De Lacy, Col. A. C. Tate, Col. George W. Stillwell, Col. Henry Dawson, Jr., Col. Noah L. Cochen, and Col. John P. Short. There were about ten thousand men in line, and every one was a voter, while probably a majority were of those who fought gallantly to uphold their country's flag in the dark days of treason and rebellion. The line of march was from Bedford avenue through Clymer street, Washington avenue, Greene avenue, and Gates avenue, to Fulton street, to Hanson place, to Atlantic avenue, to Clinton street, to Schermerhorn street, to Myrtle avenue, and up Myrtle avenue to Clermont avenue, where the entire procession passed in review before Hon. James G. Blaine, while at the corner of Clermont and Willoughby avenues the marching column was reviewed by Major Gen. E. B. Fowler, the commander of the Boys in Blue. Every street and avenue through which the procession passed was literally packed with spectators, among whom those in sympathy with the Republicans largely predominated, and who cheered enthusiastically as company after company tramped by; and as a further mark of sympathy with the cause which the torch-bearers represented, very many of the private residences along the line of march were brilliantly illuminated, while flags innumerable floated out upon the night air, Chinese lanterns hung in bright festoons here and there, and rockets and roman candles screeched and blazed in every direction. The Old Guard of the Twenty-first Ward, under command of Capt. Wells, acted as escort to Commanding Gen. Fowler, and Messrs. John Cowan, William Friday, and C. J. Worthing comprised his staff, with Gen. James L. Farley as Adjutant.

The scenes and incidents along the route of the procession were numerous, and the gay uniforms of the Boys in Blue, consisting of blue caps, blue capes with red collars, and red capes, blue caps, and white collars, and all lit up with flaming torches, transparencies, and rockets, mingling with the music of the bands and the cheering of the thousands of people who packed the sidewalks on either side of the street, composed a scene well worth beholding. The procession marched in files of ten, stretching nearly from curb to curb, very compact, and without halting, nearly an hour was occupied in passing a given point.

A PLEA FOR TILDEN.

DAVID A. WELLS ADVOCATES A RESTORATION OF DEMOCRATIC RULES—HIS ATTACK ON THE REPUBLICAN PARTY POORLY RECEIVED.

The final meeting of the Tilden and Hendricks Central Campaign Club, at the Cooper Institute, last evening, was opened by Hon. David A. Wells. Samuel D. Babcock presided, and several Democratic "merchants," including large delegations of gin mill proprietors, and other exclusively Democratic branches of the commercial community, were in attendance. A brass band played for about a quarter of an hour, and then Thomas Cooper Campbell announced that Howard Potter would take the chair. Mr. Potter, after attempting to be very funny over Mr. Evarts' recent speech, and failing lamentably, went on to complain of the tyrannical conduct of the Government in seizing the books of merchants charged with smuggling. This, Mr. Howard thought, was the most odious feature of Republican administration at the North, but there was something worse than this, if possible, at the South. In the latter section every power of the National Government was being put forth to further tyrannize over the white inhabitants and continue in power the corrupt "carpet-bag" State Governments that had already exhausted the patience of the people. Mr. Wells was then introduced, and proceeded to read, from manuscript, a long address on the effect of a Democratic victory upon the business interests of the country. The times, he thought, were out of joint, but it was not owing to scarcity. The crops of the country and its mineral productions were never greater than during the past three years, but the movements of all these products were restrained by the lack of confidence in the business community. He would not say that the present stagnation was entirely due to the Administration, but he thought that a very large share of the distress could have been averted by wise and timely action. He read several long extracts from the letters of a Herald correspondent to prove that the Republicans were responsible for the disturbed condition of affairs at the South. It would be better for the North to pay the entire amount of the Southern claims than to allow this hostility between the two sections of the country to continue. Mr. Wells had not one word to say in regard to the murder and intimidation practiced by the Democrats in Mississippi and South Carolina, but he frequently took occasion to sneer at the "bloody shirt," and throughout his speech represented the white population of that section as a peaceable, hard-working, God-fearing class, who were only too glad to toil on in peace, if unmolested by the terribly corrupt and extravagant negroes. From the condition of the South, the orator turned his attention to the expenditures of the National Government. The Republicans, he said, deserved no credit for the decreased loss in disbursements under their rule. There was always so much stolen, whether the disbursements were large or small. There had been very little honesty at Washington since 1868, [the period at which Mr. Wells went out of office,] and the principal employment of the Treasury Department had apparently been to plunder, harass, and annoy the merchants and business men of the country. Mr. Wells described several of these heart-rending cases, and then turned his attention to the subject of "wool." This, under his manipulation, proved so exceedingly dry that a considerable portion of the "business men" present left the hall for the purpose of refreshment—mainly of a liquid character. The case of Phelps, Dodge & Co. was referred to by Mr. Wells as a prominent instance of the manner in which the present Administration robbed private individuals. In that case although the amount of undervaluation had been only $1,660, covering a period of several years, the Government had exacted the enormous penalty of $270,000, a large portion of which went to the informer. The state of things by which an honorable and long-established house had been swindled out of this immense sum was shameful, and would not be permitted to exist under a Democratic Administration. The expenditures of the National Government during recent years had been vastly in excess of the $125,000,000 to which Mr. Garfield, four years ago, had predicted they would be reduced in 1876, and the Republican Party had neither the intelligence nor the honesty to cut down the taxation to the necessary point. In Mr. Tilden, however, he had perfect confidence. It was an excellent thing for the State of New-York that Tilden was elected over Dix in 1874, and it would be an equally good thing for the nation it Tilden should be elected over Hayes. Another outrage by the present Administration was the commencement of a suit against Frank Leslie, for frauds on the revenue, which suit, Mr. Wells hinted, was instituted because Mr. Leslie's illustrated paper had caricatured Grant and other Republican leaders. In conclusion, the speaker predicted a sweeping Democratic triumph, and thought that it would be an excellent thing for the whole country. It was somewhat of a reflection upon his presumably "intelligent" audience, that many of his most damaging admissions were applauded to the echo and some of his best points passed over in silence. Mr. Wells was succeeded by James S. Thayer, who talked the rapidly thinning throng out of the house at a much faster rate than had been induced by his predecessor's figures on the "wool" business.

ASSEMBLP NOMINATIONS.

Mr. James Turner who was nominated by the Republicans of the Fifteenth District for Assembly, has declined to run, and Mr. William N. Loew, on Thursday night was unanimously nominated in his place.

Gen. Francis B. Spinola, was last evening nominated for Assembly by the Sixteenth Assembly District Tammany Hall and Anti-Tammany Conventions.

Wright, Receiver of the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railway Company, which has been pending before Judge Drummond, in the United States Circuit Court, for the past four days, terminated to-day, by the withdrawal of all charges whatever against the Receiver.

THE PEACE OF EUROPE.

THE FRENCH MINISTER'S STATEMENT TO THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES—TURKISH OUTRAGES IN BOSNIA—THE HOUSE OF THE AUSTRIAN CONSUL SET ON FIRE.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day the Duke Decazes, Minister of Foreign Affairs, made a statement in regard to the policy of the French Government in the East. He dwelt principally on the country's need of peace, and concluded as follows: "If, contrary to the expectations of the Government, complications should arise, we shall never ask you to compromise the honor and safety of France in a struggle which does not involve her essential interests. Thus having used our best endeavors to maintain the peace of Europe we shall at least be sure of being able to maintain it for ourselves."

Reuter's telegram from Ragusa states that in consequence of the conclusion of the armistice the Consular Commission at Mostar for the pacification of the insurgent provinces has been dissolved.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—A special dispatch to the Standard from Serajevo, the capital of Bosnia, reports that the residence of the Austrian Consul in that town has been set on fire, it is said by the Turks, and the troops who were summoned to extinguish the flames plundered the house.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Vienna correspondent of the Times announces that Montenegro has accepted the armistice on the same terms as Servia. The Daily News' dispatch from Vienna reports that the Austrian Ambassador at St. Petersburg has been ordered to proceed to Livadia. It is rumored that the Grand Vizier will shortly go thither also on a confidential mission. A Belgrade telegram to the Times confirms the statement that the armistice as accepted by the Porte is unconditional.

The Marquis of Hartington, addressing a public meeting at Keighley yesterday, said however much he might question the policy of some of the Government's measures relative to the Eastern question, he was not prepared to say that the objects the Government had aimed at had not been such as would generally commend themselves to the good opinion of the English people.

THE FRENCH COMMUNISTS.

THE QUESTION OF THEIR PROSECUTION—THE MATTER UNDER DISCUSSION IN THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Standard's Paris dispatch says: M. Gatineau's bill for the cessation of the prosecutions against the Communists was introduced in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday by M. Lisbonne. After a debate, during which M. Dufaure opposed, and M. Gambetta supported the measure, the House by an overwhelming majority decided to proceed to debate on the clauses of the bill.

The Standard's correspondent remarks that this defeat of M. Dufaure ought to show the Government the necessity of doing something in the matter. The Times yesterday published a letter from Paris on the subject, of which the following is the substance: M. Gatineau's proposition is that no new prosecutions for participation in the Commune be begun, and all old prosecutions be quashed except those directed against instigators or principals in assassinations, incendiarism, or robbery; and that all trials of parties in contumaciam be before the Court of Assizes, instead of military tribunals as heretofore. This provision would prolong the trials ten years, as between three thousand or four thousand cases remain to be heard, while the Court of Assizes could only try three hundred or four hundred yearly.

On June 28, President MacMahon, yielding to the Cabinet's desire to quiet agitation on this subject, published a letter in the Journal Officiel ordering that no more prosecutions be instituted except in contumaciam, or upon the initiative of the Cabinet. This was meant to be a compensation to the Extreme Left for the rejection of a general amnesty. Gatineau's proposition would permit all self-exiled Communist leaders to return to France in safety. The Cabinet has determined not to accept any larger measure of amnesty than that conceded in the President's letter, leaving individual cases subject to executive clemency. If the cabinet now accepts the passage of Gatineau's motion by the lower house, even though certain of its defeat in the Senate, it joins in an aggressive and distrustful vote against President MacMahon. If the measure is adopted by a combination of the Left and Right, the Cabinet's majority is destroyed; and either way the Cabinet must resign.

The Paris dispatch to the Daily News says yesterday's proceedings in the Chamber of Deputies are equivalent to the adoption of the Gatineau bill in principle. The debate was adjourned until to-morrow. The Chamber will probably pass the bill in an amended shape against the wishes of the Ministry, and the Senate will reject it. This will probably be the commencement of a serious conflict.

THE ENGLISH COTTON MARKET.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Liverpool Post to-day says: "Yesterday was the most excited day the cotton market has experienced for a year, and the enormous sale has thrown business altogether out of gear. Yarn prices are raised all around. There are large offers at about ¼d. advance, but they are mostly declined, so little business results. Exports of yarn are more active, and show, in most cases, a larger advance. Business in cloth is at a stand-still. Buyers do not follow the upward movement eagerly, and sellers dare not go on, even at recent fullest quotations, without further instructions from their principals."

The Liverpool Courier says: "For some days the Turko-Servian armistice, now announced, has been confidently expected, and the Manchester market for goods and yarns, as well as our cotton market, has been perceptibly regaining its tone. Only upon one occasion—upon the eve of the American civil war—have the sales reached such a figure as announced yesterday, and at Manchester, with advancing prices, business was active and transactions large."

The circular of the Liverpool Cotton Brokers' Association, in its review of the week ending last evening, says: "Cotton continues in extensive demand and prices have advanced considerably for almost every description. American has been extraordinarily active, but freely offered. Prices have advanced 3-16d. to ¼d., the lower qualities being exceptionally scarce. For Sea Island there has been a moderate inquiry, but prices are unchanged. In futures the transactions continue large, and prices have advanced 5-16d."

THE FOREIGN GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 3.—A leading grain circular says: "With continued fine weather favoring the labors of husbandry the British grain markets are still scantily supplied with wheat, the value of which remains unaltered. Foreign trade is, at the same time, more steady, after the recent slight depression and activity has been partially resumed. It is now understood that, an armistice having been agreed upon by Turkey and Servia, the influence of war anticipations will not have the effect, as of late, of exciting speculation, but as stock taking at the close of the month shows that the short supplies coming since Sept. 1, have resulted in a material reduction in the quantities in granary, there appears a fair element for steadiness at current rates. At Liverpool we have 204,000 quarters less in store now than on Aug. 31, and our local consumption, with outgoings to the interior and elsewhere, makes an average in the interval of 70,000 quarters per week. With a moderate attendance of country millers at to-day's market, trade has not been active, but sellers of wheat show much firmness. A tolerably fair business in the aggregate has been done at the rates current on Tuesday. Flour was steady at quotations. Corn was slow and the request dull. Holders would willingly make a concession of sixpence to effect sales."

HORSE RACING AT WASHINGTON.

THIRD AND LAST DAY OF THE FALL MEETING—A SMALL ATTENDANCE, AND THREE TAME RACES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—This was the third and last day of the Fall running meeting of the National Jockey Club. The weather was cold and partly cloudy, with a chilly north-west wind blowing. A rain-storm at an early hour in the morning made the track a little heavy. The attendance was the smallest during the meeting. The first race was a consolation purse, for horses that have run and not won during the meeting, one and one-quarter miles. Horses beaten once were allowed 5 pounds; beaten twice, 10 pounds; $150 to the first; $50 to the second. The following horses started: Fadladeen, Leamington Second, Burgoo, Moorhen, and First Chance. Burgoo sold as favorite. At the start Fadladeen took the lead, with Burgoo second, First Chance third, Leamington Second fourth, and Moorhen last. Burgoo went to the front and, passing the first quarter, led by a length, with Fadladeen second, First Chance third, Leamington Second fourth, and Moorhen well in the rear. Passing the half-mile pole, Burgoo led; First Chance had gone to the second, Leamington Second to the third, and Fadladeen had fallen to the fourth place, while Moorhen still kept the rear. Leamington Second pushed forward, and took the second place, Fadladeen third, and First Chance fell to the rear. Passing the three-quarter pole, Burgoo led, with Leamington Second second, Fadladeen third, Moorhen fourth, and First Chance last. There were no changes of position at the mile, but coming down the homestretch Leamington Second made a length and lapped Burgoo, but Burgoo lengthened his stride and came in a winner by two lengths, Leamington Second second, First Chance third, Fadladeen fourth, and Moorhen well in the rear. Time—2:14.

In the second race, two-mile heats, for all ages, for a purse of $500, $100 to the second horse, the following named horses started: Kenny, Hatteras, Rose, Inspiration, Wateree, Tom O'Neil, and Courier. Inspiration was favorite. Rose led in the first heat, with Inspiration second, Wateree third, Kenny fourth, Hatteras fifth, Courier sixth, and Tom O'Neil seventh. Inspiration came in first, with Tom O'Neil second, Kenny third, Courier fourth, Hatteras fifth, and Wateree and Rose distanced. Time—3:41¾.

The second heat and race was won by Inspiration, with Courier second, Hatteras third, Kenny fourth, and O'Neil last. Time—3:45.

Third and last race was mile heats, over four hurdles, for a purse of $300, of which $50 to the second horse; welter weights; the winner of the hurdle-race on the first day to carry ten pounds extra. The starters were Paladin, Derby, Bayrum, Capt. Hammer, Risk, and Jack Trigg. Derby was the favorite. Bayrum won the first heat, with Risk second, Capt. Hammer third, Paladin fourth, Derby fifth, and Jack Trigg last. There was no time taken. The second heat was won by Risk, with Paladin second, Bayrum third, Capt. Hammer fourth, Derby fifth, and Jack Trigg distanced. Time—1:56½. The third heat and race was won by Bayrum. Time—2:00. In leaping the fourth hurdle Risk fell, throwing his rider, and Bayrum came home alone.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—A number of the members of the Diplomatic Corps, who were absent during the Summer, have returned to Washington. Among them Senor Mantilla, the Spanish Minister, who has recently received from his sovereign the Grand Cross of the Order of Charles III.

Treasury officials state that there has been for nearly three months past an active demand for money at Hong Kong, which has been met by shipments of silver from San Francisco, both on home and European account. The price of silver at San Francisco during this time has ranged above the London rate. Formerly silver was shipped to China by way of London. Should the China demand for silver continue, importations of that metal to New-York will probably be made from Europe.

Selah Mead has been appointed Store keeper and Ganger in the Fourth District of Indiana. Alfred R. Moore has been appointed Store keeper in the Twenty-third District of Pennsylvania.

Hon. R. H. Duell, Commissioner of Patents, and Hon. J. Q. Smith, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, started for their respective homes last night, to remain until after the election; S. A. Galpin, Chief Clerk of the Indian Bureau, will leave Washington for Connecticut on Sunday night; Assistant Secretary of the Interior Gorham, and Gen. Williamson, Commissioner of the Land Office, will be the only officials of note remaining on duty at the department. At the Post Office Department, Postmaster General Tyner, Second Assistant Postmaster General Brady, and Third Assistant Postmaster General Barber are all away. First Assistant Postmaster General Marshall, who votes in Virginia, will be absent only on the day of the election. Sixth Auditor McGrew will leave for Ohio on Sunday evening; Secretary Morrill, of the Treasury, and Attorney General Taft both left the city to-day, and other heads of bureaus in the Treasury Department will leave to-night and to-morrow. A careful estimate shows that fully two-fifths of the clerks in the departments have gone home or will go to-morrow. Those remaining are from districts which are overwhelmingly Republican.

The receipts from Internal Revenue to-day were $414,555, and from Customs, $317,344. National bank notes received to-day for redemption, $586,748.

Capt. Garrick Mallory, First Infantry, is granted leave of absence for six months, on a surgeon's certificate of disability. Capt. F. E. Decourcy is ordered to resume his station after the completion of his orders of the 24th of October.

DEMOCRATIC BRAGGING.

Mr. Abram S. Hewitt, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, has issued another proclamation, addressed to the people of the United States. He informs them that the great contest between "the office-holders and the people is now drawing to a close;" that the evidence is all in, and the country is to pass upon the issue. But the verdict is already placed beyond doubt. The corrupt minions of an odious oligarchy will be driven from power and place next Tuesday in riotous and dire confusion. His committee knows this from information (exclusively) in its possession. On this information he says:

"We are justified in claiming as sure for the cause of 'Reform,' embodied in the National Democratic ticket, 200 electoral votes—a clear majority of the whole number. In this estimate we do not include the electoral vote of South Carolina or Louisiana, which, if accorded an election free from military interference, will undoubtedly cast fifteen additional votes for the cause of good government. Besides these votes, we have every reason to expect seventy-one votes from States regarded as doubtful, which, if cast for Tilden and Hendricks, will give them over two-thirds of the Electoral College. In this estimate we do not include the State of Ohio, from which, however, we have assurances of victory. On the other hand," adds Mr. Hewitt, "our estimate concedes to the Republican office-holders every State in which, by their power of patronage and their reckless use of illegal expedients, they have any reasonable ground for claiming success."

No wonder that, inspired by such cheering and exclusive information as these modest claims are based upon, "the committee feel that the day of redemption draws nigh." The committee also exhort their fellow-citizens "to use all possible precautions to prevent frauds in the election," which is certainly refreshing.

CLOSING DAYS OF THE CENTENNIAL.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—Though the Exhibition will close on Friday, the United States Centennial Commission, in executive session, on Thursday, passed a resolution continuing the usual fee of fifty cents for admissions until Saturday evening, the 18th inst. The committee of the commission having in charge the ceremonies of closing day, to-day finally agreed upon the principal features of the exercises proposed to commemorate the event. They provide for salutes to be fired at sunrise and noon of the 10th instant, by a battery stationed on George's Hill; the first of thirteen guns in honor of the thirteen original States, and the latter of forty-seven guns, one for each State and Territory of the present day. Both salutes will be repeated by the United States steamer Plymouth, Captain Barrett, at her moorings, on the Delaware River. The oratorical feature will consist of brief remarks by the following gentlemen in the order named: Hon. D. J. Morrell, Chairman of the Executive Committee; Hon. John Welsh, President of the Centennial Board of Finance; Hon. A. T. Goshorn, Director General, and Gen. J. R. Hawley, President of the United States Centennial Commission. The orchestral and choral music will be under the direction of Theodore Thomas. Among the distinguished invited guests are the President of the United States, and members of his Cabinet, Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Diplomatic Corps, the General of the Army, members of Congress, foreign Commissioners, Governors of States and Territories, Mayors of principal cities, and the Fairmount Park Commission. At the request of the United States Centennial Commissioners the President of the United States has consented to be present, and will discharge, in his official capacity, the duty of finally and formally closing the International Exhibition of 1876.

THE DEMOCRATIC RECORD.

HON. E. W. STOUGHTON AT PROVIDENCE.

THE IDENTITY OF MR. TILDEN'S AND MR. BUCHANAN'S VIEWS—DOCTRINES WHICH THE AMERICAN PEOPLE DO NOT WANT—THIS IS A NATION, NOT A CONFEDERACY, AND MR. TILDEN CANNOT BE ITS PRESIDENT.

Hon. E. W. Stoughton spoke in Music Hall, Providence, last evening, on the issues of the campaign. Following is a large part of his speech—portions in which he treats of important questions for voters to consider.

MR. STOUGHTON'S SPEECH.

We are so near a contest which is to decide the fate of this Republic for many years to come, and such prodigious consequences depend upon the result, that I am filled with anxiety as I address you. I have faith that we shall prevail, for I believe that a wise and merciful God cares for this people, and that he will not permit the fruits of treasure expended, of blood poured out, of families desolated and of graves filled during the late war, to be wrested from us by the very men who made these terrible sacrifices necessary. But in the confidence with which this faith inspires us, we must not forget that we are to use the energies and the intelligence with which we are endowed to avert this calamity. The will of the people can be expressed in but one way for this purpose, and that is through the ballot-box; and to that all must resort if they would avert the catastrophe with which we are now threatened. It has been often said that history repeats itself—a great truth which so few bear in mind that nations fail to remember and profit by it. To-day the admonition it conveys, written in blood, is before us to warn and to instruct. Shall we profit by its teaching, or disregard the voices which cry aloud unto us from the recent past? It is but a few years since the Democratic Party succeeded in placing Mr. Buchanan in the Presidential chair, and in command of the Armies and Navies of the United States. Our people then well knew that it was the purpose of the men who controlled the South to dissolve the Union and establish a Southern Confederacy, and it was no secret that this purpose was based upon the carefully taught and very generally accepted doctrine that the United States was but a confederacy of States, united together by contract only, to be severed at the pleasure of either. The majority of the Democratic Party in Congress was composed of Southern men, who entertained this doctrine, and they had long controlled the party. Finally, the pretext for dissolving the Union was found in the election of Mr. Lincoln, and the work of treason immediately commenced. Mr. Buchanan, his Attorney General, and most of the leaders of the Democratic Party at the North were disciples of this doctrine, and under its influence it was resolved by the Chief Magistrate of the nation and his adviser that the Constitution did not authorize him to employ force to preserve the Union, but that any State which saw fit to withdraw might do so and depart in peace; and this doctrine he announced in his last annual Message. I believe Mr. Black has never recanted the opinion thus entertained, and perhaps assumes that any lawyer who should question it has failed to understand the most vital portion of the Constitution.

THE UNITED STATES A NATION.

Long before the commencement of Mr. Buchanan's administration no constitutional proposition was more firmly settled than that the United States was a nation, and not a confederation of States, and that our National Government had not only the power, but that it was its duty, to enforce obedience to the Constitution and laws of the Union, by the employment of all its civil and military force, and especially that it was bound to subdue rebellion by its armies if necessary. In other words, that the nation was armed with the power and clothed with the duty of self-preservation, which, at all hazards and at all times, it was bound to exercise for that purpose. It was the purpose of the Southern leaders, who controlled Mr. Buchanan, to induce him to adopt the doctrine that the Union was a confederacy, each State of which might secede at pleasure; and their plan was to have him promulgate this to the world in the most formal and solemn manner possible, which was by a Message to the Congress of the United States, founded upon the opinion of its Attorney General. This opinion was carefully prepared by Mr. Black. It was the most important paper to which an Attorney General ever signed his name, for it committed this great nation to the mercy of those who had planned and organized the rebellion, and were preparing to execute their purpose by subordinating to their will those to whom the dearest interest of our people were committed. That opinion was all they required. It declared that when there are within the States of the Union no Judges willing to administer its laws, and no officers to execute them, the President was powerless to act except to appoint others; and he also stated—

"If it be true [as he had attempted to establish] that war cannot be declared, nor a general system of hostilities be carried on by the Central Government against a State, then it seems to follow that an attempt to do so would be ipso facto an expulsion of such State from the Union. Being treated as an alien and an enemy, she would be compelled to act accordingly, and if Congress shall break up the present Union by unconstitutionally putting strife and enmity, and armed hostilities between different sections of the country, instead of domestic tranquility which the Constitution was meant to insure, will not all the States be absolved from their Federal obligations? Is any portion of the people bound to contribute their money or their blood to carry on a contest like that?"

And he added that the right to protect the property of the Government against direct and positive aggression was not denied, but that this was a totally different thing from an offensive war to punish the people for the misdeeds of their State Government. Acting upon this opinion, that the power of the General Government was limited to the protection of its property within rebellious States, and did not extend to the enforcement of the laws of the Union, Mr. Buchanan, in his annual Message to Congress, declared that:

"Without descending to particulars, it may be safely asserted that the power to make war against a State is at variance with the whole spirit and intent of the Constitution. Congress possess many means of preserving the Union by conciliation, but the sword was not placed in their hands to preserve it by force. If it cannot live in the affections of the people it must one day perish."

And as means of conciliation he recommended the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution.

1. Expressly recognizing the right of property in slaves where it then existed, or might thereafter exist.

2. Imposing the duty of protecting this right in all the Territories, and also

3. The right to have fugitive slaves restored to their masters, notwithstanding any State law to the contrary.

To this loathsome proposition for conciliation did the doctrine propounded by Mr. Black and adopted by Mr. Buchanan lead, the latter to descend. It brought the blush of shame to the cheek of every honest man at the North, and was repudiated with disgust and indignation.

It has ever seemed to me fortunate for the country that foreign Governments did not, as they well might, upon this authority, immediately recognize the Southern Confederacy as one of the nations of the earth. Let us suppose, however, that secession and the formation of the Confederacy had occurred at the commencement of Mr. Buchanan's Administration. He would, acting upon the doctrine stated, which was distinctly avowed in his last annual Message—framed too in that respect upon the advice of his Attorney-General—have declined to employ force to compel submission by the South to the laws of the Union, but would have quietly submitted to the separation, and thus, until the close of his Administration, would the Confederacy, with slavery its corner-stone, as avowed by Mr. Stephens, its Vice President, have grown and strengthened for years—recognized by foreign Governments, perhaps forming alliances with them—until finally its power might have been so consolidated as to have made the restoration of the Union impossible. Now, this is no fancy sketch, but well illustrates the terrible mischief which may be accomplished by the rule of a party acting upon the fatal doctrine I have mentioned. Such was not the doctrine upon which Gen. Jackson acted when South Carolina attempted to assert the supremacy of State rights to which Mr. Buchanan so readily submitted. That State then found a President loyal to his high duty and determined to perform it. He at once invoked and asserted the power of the nation, and secession quailed before it. So would it have been had he occupied the place of Buchanan in 1860. Traitors would have been summarily seized and punished. The armies and navies of the nation, instead of being inadequately armed and equipped, and distributed so widely over land and sea as for a long time to be useless, would have been at hand and our country saved from those years of war, which, with its terrible consequences an accursed doctrine entailed upon us. What I have said illustrates how indispensable it is that our Government should be intrusted to those, and to those only, who accept as a cardinal element of their political faith the doctrine that we are a nation so compacted that when the Constitution speaks States and their people must obey. A terrible history, so recent that none can have forgotten it, thus instructs us; and remembering that history is prone to repeat itself, let us profit by the lesson it teaches and prevent the repetition. It may be urged that the spirit of secession has been driven from the South by Northern bayonets, never to revisit the hearts of its people. I doubt this. Put the question to their leaders whether they would prefer a separate confederacy, with freedom from constitutional restraint against domination over the black race—relief from contributing toward the payment of our national debt, incurred to subdue the rebellion—relief from the presence of Northern soldiers, sent into their midst to repress that domestic violence which their determination to prevent the exercise of rights of citizenship by that race has created, or with all these restraints upon them, prefer to remain in the Union; and who can doubt that the leaders of to-day—the men who fought for the Confederacy—who even now believe they battled for a sacred cause, would answer: Give us the Confederacy and utter separation from the North, unless, indeed, we can control both North and South in the halls of Congress. This control they intend to secure, and the spirit exhibited by them since they obtained it in the House of Representatives foretells what may be expected of them when they rule supreme over all departments of the nation. They would then realize, however, that such rule, even with the aid of their subservient Northern Democratic allies, could not be made permanent, but that ultimately a united patriotic North would arise and sweep them from their places. Years would elapse, however, before this could be accomplished, and during these, with the Government in the hands of men entertaining the fatal doctrine upon which Buchanan and his advisers acted, what preparations might not be securely made for Southern independence.

SHALL THE "CONFEDERACY" DOCTRINE BE ESTABLISHED?

Our people, with their eyes wide open, are in the midst of a conflict conducted by two parties led by men with whom and with whose antecedents they are perfectly acquainted. Mr. Tilden cannot conceal his own, nor can the friendly hands which have industriously attempted to screen them succeed in keeping them from the public view. He was a disciple and follower of the doctrines of Buchanan and of those who surrounded him when the nation, almost a wreck, and without chart or compass or friendly hand at the helm, drifting to destruction, was delivered over to the Republican Party. He was a pronounced secessionist in principle, and believed that to contemplate the sending of armed soldiers into the seceding States was to contemplate a gigantic trespass, which, if committed, would constitute causes of action in number and magnitude greater than ever before darkened the legal atmosphere. He looked forward to the election of Lincoln with a horror which probably would have been lessened could he have hoped to be employed as managing attorney in the vast array of suits, which, in his imagination, were brewing. In view of such election he declared in a letter written by him, and addressed to Judge Kent, in October, 1860:

"Elect Lincoln and we invite those perils which we cannot measure; we attempt in vain to conquer the submission of the South to an impracticable and intolerable policy. Our only hope must be that, as President, he will abandon the creed, the principles and pledges on which he shall have been elected."

That attempt which he declared would be in vain was made, and from the loyal North—and against the open and secret influence of Mr. Tilden and others like him—there went forth more than two millions of trespassers, over whom floated the flag which the men now his mainstay and support spat upon and defied; and finally, after filling the nation with the graves of these loyal men, and their once cheerful homes with mourners, the submission of the South to that impracticable and intolerable policy, as it was called by Mr. Tilden, was accomplished. In other words, the existence of a nation, and not of a mere confederacy of States, was proclaimed by the voices of cannon and of musketry, and its integrity guaranteed at the point of the bayonet; and the survivors of these "trespassers" are now asked to place him who denounces their sacred work in the seat of Washington and of Lincoln. The late rebels, we are assured, are of one mind on this subject, and only need the vomit of the slums of the great cities of the State of New-York, with a few votes more, to replace the dead Buchanan by the living Tilden. To show that the doctrines of the two are not discordant may be readily done and has been many times proved from the lips and pen of the latter. Follow this person's devious course wherever you will, from the time the rebellion was organized until the first gun was fired on Fort Sumter, and thence onward throughout the war, and we learn that he maintained a course of consistent hostility against its prosecution. The war ended—having enriched Mr. Tilden by making valuable the railway stocks and bonds which had been the price of his services in reorganizing broken-down companies, and fraternally uniting such as were strong enough to endure the embrace. Indeed, so rich a harvest did the railways reap from the transportation of Government troops, stores, and ammunitions of war, that Mr. Tilden, sharing in their prosperity, might have exclaimed with Falstaff: "God be praised for these wars, they offend none but the virtuous."

And what shall we say of that political morality and honor which could inspire in Mr. Tilden the hope that "Mr. Lincoln, as President, would abandon the creed, the principles, and pledges on which he was elected;" that Lincoln, following the example of Buchanan, would fold his arms and permit the Union to fall into fragments?

MR. TILDEN'S PERFORMANCES NOT COMMENSURATE WITH HIS CLAIMS.

I am not, I think, extravagant in saying, that for any patriotic service ever rendered to his country in her extremity, by word or act, Mr. Tilden cannot claim the affection, respect, or approval of his fellow-men; and he must, therefore, found his claim to their favor upon some other ground. He says he is a Reformer, and with a modesty quite equal to his other merits, declares in his letter of acceptance, that when he entered upon his duties as Governor of the State of New-York, it was "to consummate reforms to which he had already devoted several of the best years of his life." Much curiosity has been manifested to learn when and where and how these best years were spent, and what were the reforms to which they had been devoted. We know that, without much or any interruption, he has long resided in the City of New-York, and there has been intimately associated in political adventures with the leaders of the Democratic banditti, who have long made their home in that devoted city. In the height of his power this band flourished like the green bay-tree, spreading their potent influence to Albany and other portions of the State. If he impregnated his allies with the seed of reform, it fell upon stony ground, or did not contain the germs of life. He labored with them long and earnestly, however, and it was not until the Fall of 1871 that he abandoned them as hopeless, and even then his devoted friend, Mr. Havemeyer, was compelled to tear him from them by force.

Gliding from the state of probation during which his best years were spent, and remembering that in these he constantly enjoyed an advantage similar to that of the temperance lecturer, who, to give point and force to his words, invariably had with him a drunken brother as an awful example—we pass on in the life of the Reformer to the period when he commenced his official life as Governor of the State of New York. His first exploit, and indeed his only gallant effort at reform, is to be found in his adventurous assault on the Canal Ring, as it was called. When two contending Chinese armies meet, each strives to outdo and frighten the other by most violent noises, made upon strange instruments, and it is said that, if neither can overcome the other in this way, both usually retire from the field, the honor of each being preserved by calling it a drawn battle. In this way ammunition is saved, and surgeons become unnecessary. If, however, it happens in this warfare that one of the hostile parties does not respond to the music, the serenading party becomes surprised, and finally alarmed, and at length is quite apt to take to its heels, utterly incapable of comprehending the dangers of silence. Somewhat so was it in the conflict between Mr. Tilden and the Canal Ring. He opened fire upon its members along the whole line, and from the belching batteries of the entire press of the State. They did not reply—probably because that kind of music was not at their command. Finally, the fire and smoke from these batteries subsided, and finding the enemy still near, Mr. Tilden projected against them three several law suits, and although this was a quiet, and therefore not very satisfactory, demonstration of reform, it was continued gently in that way, because the press had become somewhat tired of making so much cry for so little wool.

The result is, I believe, that one of these law suits has been withdrawn—in one the defendant prevailed, and in the other Mr. Tilden was successful—thus, in substance, saving the honor of both antagonists by the equivalent of a drawn battle—a result not entirely unsatisfactory to the reformer, who, as I am told, found that some of the links of the Ring were composed of a metal suitable for his support.

I have always supposed until the word reform got into such bad company, that its meaning was quite different from what is attributed to it by Mr. Tilden and his admirers. By their dictionary, every official, every counsel who advises or assists in the prosecution of knaves or criminals for frauds perpetrated or crimes committed, thereby becomes a reformer, and in this sense only can Mr. Tilden be called one, for I am not aware that he has ever projected or accomplished great or any changes in the laws or institutions of the State or nation for the purpose of extirpating abuses or engrafting benefits.

WHAT WOULD COME WITH TILDEN'S ADMINISTRATION.

I do not think it safe to assume from the past history of Mr. Tilden that he is greatly needed for the high office he desires, except by the party which has adopted him, and whose purposes, judging by the past, are not calculated to promote the prosperity of our country. That party, as we all know, is led and controlled by those who organized, precipitated, and fought for the rebellion, and who are resolved, if possible, to put away the bitter fruits which the results of the war have forced to their lips. They are struggling to accomplish this by every means which at this time can be employed short of engaging in hostile collision with the power of the Government. This they will avoid, not from respect to the Constitution and laws, but through fear. We know what would happen were Mr. Tilden now the President and this were a canvass to determine whether his party should be continued in power. We know that in such case, no matter what domestic violence might prevail in the Southern States, produced by attempts of armed men to prevent colored citizens from going to the polls, he would not send Government aid to suppress, but would leave them to the mercy of their former masters. I say we know this, because the aid already sent there is denounced by Democratic speakers and its press, as an effort by a Republican Administration to coerce success at the point of the bayonet, and not as the performance of a high duty enjoined by the Constitution of the United States.

WHERE THE DEMOCRATS LEFT THE COUNTRY IN 1860.

It is well sometimes to generalize and to get at results by comparison. What was the condition of this country at the time the Republicans assumed control of its Government? It was on the verge of destruction. Its credit was so substantially gone that although its indebtedness at the close of Buchanan's Administration was but about seventy-five million, six per cent. bonds, made for the purpose of meeting it, sold at from twelve to seventeen per cent. discount. Mr. Belmont, in his recent speech, says that Mr. Buchanan's Government, just at its close, placed $800,000 of six per cent. bonds at from ninety and a quarter to ninety-six. He adds, however—what perhaps, in the hurry of reading or delivering the speech, he may not have measured the effect of—that after the war commenced, under Mr. Lincoln's Administration, and in July, 1861, $10,000,000 of these bonds were sold at par in gold; thus showing that when the gloomy horror of Buchanan's rule was replaced by the constitutional rule of Mr. Lincoln, the credit of the nation, even in the midst of war, immediately revived. Mr. Belmont adds that these bonds are now worth about one hundred and eighteen and a half—a high tribute to the value of Republican rule. The honor of the country, at home and abroad, was not only impaired, but had well-nigh departed. The head of the nation in the most solemn manner had declared that the Government had no power under the Constitution to enforce obedience to the laws of the Union in the seceding States; and acting upon that, he permitted State after State to secede; favored such a disposition of the Army and of the Navy of the United States that when they should be needed it would be substantially impossible to employ them until the confederacy to be newly established should have become consolidated, so as to summon powers of resistance to any force which the Government of the United States, under an incoming Administration, might send against it.

THE DEMOCRATIC FIGHT AGAINST THE AMENDMENTS.

The constitutional amendments were resisted by almost every Democratic member of the Congress of the United States, and means were resorted to for the purpose of preventing the adoption of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments of the most extraordinary character. They were adopted by barely a sufficient number of the States to make them parts of the Constitution; and for the purpose of destroying their validity, as soon as the States of Ohio and of New-Jersey came under Democratic rule, they, by their Legislatures, recalled the assent of those States to the fourteenth amendment, and this example was followed as to the fifteenth by the States of New-York and of Indiana, as soon as the Democrats obtained legislative power therein. And when, in 1870, in the House of Representatives, a resolution was offered declaring these three several amendments to be parts of the Constitution of the United States, and binding upon the people of the country, seventy-eight Democratic members voted against the resolution, 106 voting for it, only four of which number were Democrats. And when, nearly a year afterward, a resolution was there introduced declaring that the national legislation for the purpose of enforcing these amendments was constitutional and valid, some sixty-seven members of Congress, all Democrats, voted against the resolution, and not a Democrat voted for it.

PROSPERITY UNDER REPUBLICAN RULE.

It is well, sometimes, in view of the charges made against the Republican Party, to consider what has been the prosperity and increase of property under its rule. The expenditures made needful by the war were enormous. Thus, the entire expenditures of the Army from March 4, 1789, to June 30, 1860, were $552,534,462, while from 1860, the cost of the Army has been $3,575,284,220, almost the entire of which was caused by the rebellion. And yet, notwithstanding this vast expenditure, the wealth of the country in 1870, as compared with its wealth, including slaves, in 1860, was immense. In that year the value of the property of the country was $16,150,616,068, while in 1870 it had increased to $30,068,518,507, an advance, excluding slaves, of $13,918,902,439. Proceeding still further, we find that the value of the manufactured products of the country in 1860 was $876,893,377; while in 1870 their value was $4,208,824,971.

THE REBEL CLAIMS IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Bills for the purpose of obtaining compensation for the occupation of, and injuries to, property of Southern men during the rebellion by the armies of the Union have been introduced, which amount in the aggregate to probably nearly $2,500,000,000. These claims reposing, in the form of bills, among the records of that house, are now staring Mr. Tilden and his friends in the face, and they have attempted to meet the situation by his declaration that, should such bills pass the National Legislature, he will veto them. In view of his own authority, to be found set forth with great clearness in his letter of acceptance, it will be extremely dangerous to the country to accept this pledge either as sincere or as a guard to the Treasury of the nation. It is the offspring of fear, and comes so late as to enable us to perceive that he and his advisers had discovered that the canvass cast the shadow of a shroud over their hopes. He has plainly told us, however, in his letter of acceptance, to which I have referred, that experience has repeatedly exposed the futility of self-imposed restrictions by candidates for office or incumbents. This declaration was made upon an occasion of considerable solemnity, and at a time when he did not foresee the use which would be made of it; and it probably, therefore, was sincere. But we not only learn from him that such pledges are futile, but also that occasions may arise when it will become the duty of a President elected upon pledges previously made, to abandon the creed, the principles, and the pledges on which such election was made.

THE SPECIE RESUMPTION QUESTION.

It is well known that one of the great public purposes of the Republican Party—which has been incorporated into a law for that purpose—has been to provide means of resumption of specie payments as early as the 1st of January, 1879. That ample means for this purpose were provided for by the act requiring this resumption, no one who reads it can fail to see. Bonds of the United States Government were authorized to be sold for that purpose; and we have already learned that the credit of the Government is such—or at least was such until it began to suffer through fear that the Democratic Party might succeed—that the bonds of our Government paying four and one-half per cent. interest have readily sold at and above par for gold. With such a foundation for the resumption of specie payments, no one can doubt the ability of the Government to resume almost at will.

So far as the Democratic party could, it has already expressed by legislation its purpose to name no time for resumption; and has gone so far as to declare that to name a time would be a hindrance to it—a dishonest and disgraceful statement to incorporate into so solemn a public paper as the platform of a great party. "The proper time for resumption," says Mr. Tilden, "is the time when wise preparation shall have ripened into a perfect ability to accomplish the object with a certainty and ease that will inspire confidence and encourage the reviving of business." The time is as indefinite and unpromising as the means; and no one possessing directness of character, or entertaining an intention at an early day to accomplish that which honesty and fair dealing demands, could possibly have penned the two sentences to which I have called attention.

HOW DEMOCRATIC VICTORY WOULD AFFECT PUBLIC CREDIT.

And now I desire to say a few words as to the effect which the success of the Democratic Party would have, not only upon the prosperity of the country, but upon its financial credit at home and abroad. The national debt has already been reduced since 1865 more than $650,000,000, the annual interest more than $32,000,000, the annual expenditure more than $260,000,000, and the annual national taxation fully $200,000,000. The national credit was never so good, and all these general, yet grand, results have been attained under Republican rule. A wise man would say, make no change unless it is absolutely certain to be for the national benefit. Now, taking a fair general survey of the purposes of the two great parties struggling for national ascendency, and what do we learn. We know that the Republican Party is resolved to maintain and enforce the Constitution and its amendments. Judging by the past, we know that the leaders of the Democratic Party are bitterly hostile to the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, and struggled constantly and persistently to defeat them, and by their votes in Congress have denied their validity or the validity of the legislation passed to enforce them. We know that so vital are the provisions of the fourteenth amendment to the prosperity and credit of this nation that, should it be seriously questioned, a most painful doubt would be raised as to the binding obligation of our national debt, and that the peace of the country would be seriously disturbed by the fear that the citizenship of the colored race would be denied them. We know it is the fixed purpose of the Republican Party to oppose all legislation for the payment of Southern claims, more than two thousand millions of which are sought to be recovered out of the National Treasury by bills introduced for that purpose by Democratic members of the House of Representatives and we have nothing but the worthless pledges I have already examined to protect the nation against their ultimate payment should the Democratic Party attain legislative and executive power. We know, too, that it is the purpose of the Republican Party to resume specie payment at the time indicated for that purpose, and that it is the unalterable resolve of the Democratic Party to do this, if at all, only when it is quite convenient, and to fix no time when this shall be accomplished. We have from that party and its leaders nothing to give us in return for increasing the great dangers with which it threatens the nation, except its vague promises of reform—in what respects we are not very distinctly told. Now, in view of these striking contrasts between the history and purposes of the two parties, we have been lately told by Mr. August Belmont, to whom I have before alluded—chief clerk or agent in this country of the Rothschilds—that a change of Administration from the one to the other of these parties in this country would produce no more effect upon the credit of our nation or the value of its bonds abroad than would a change of Ministry in England upon its consols. It would be unreasonable to expect from Mr. Belmont, in view of his occupation, such a study and estimate of the relations of parties in the two countries as to enable him to discern the radical difference between the cases employed by him as an illustration. It is sufficient to say that the debt of Great Britain was not incurred to put down a rebellion led by either a Whig or Tory Ministry; and that the party led by neither has or could have such designs upon the National Treasury as to make it necessary for its leaders to promise to veto bills for that purpose should their followers succeed in getting them through Parliament. Nor has either party in that country an interest or a purpose to violate its Constitution. All these considerations Mr. Belmont's principals in Europe will doubtless take into consideration in estimating the probable effect of the change he desires upon the value of our funds, and they are quite as likely to be guided by their own judgment instead of his as would be our Secretary of the Treasury when considering the value of an opinion volunteered by his chief clerk.

A sufficient rebuke has been administered to the vanity of Mr. Belmont by the very decisive views expressed on this subject in opposition to his opinion by most of the leading capitalists and bankers of New-York, and published in THE TIMES of last Monday. In a letter published in that paper of a prior date, I ventured to express some views in reply to those of Mr. Belmont, and added that I was authorized to say upon the highest authority that the difficulties by me suggested which would result from a change of administration had already seriously interfered with the sale of our bonds abroad. Mr. Belmont, in his speech published in the Herald of Tuesday, suggests that the highest authority would be a letter from some banking-house in London connected with the Syndicate, or with the sale of our bonds abroad, and intimates that such letter cannot be produced. I differ with him as to what is the highest authority. The authority for what was stated in my letter was the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and I am expressly authorized by him now to state that the possibility of the election of Mr. Tilden has already impeded the sale of our bonds abroad, and that his election would doubtless defeat the placing of the present loan.

REFORM IN BROOKLYN.

ADDRESS TO THE CITIZENS IN FAVOR OF HONEST ADMINISTRATION IN MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

The following address was yesterday issued to the honest voters of Brooklyn by the Republicans and Independent Democrats of Brooklyn:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: We are on the eve of an election at which, for the first time in many years, we have the chance to vote for a ticket nominated in accordance with the highest and best principle in Municipal politics—local non-partisanship. Had obedience to this principle been the guiding motive in our home politics, those evils which have commanded universal attention could never have been developed in our city Government. Had we been true to this principle in the past, we would not to-day be obliged to confess with shame that Brooklyn has been one of the worst-governed cities in the Union. While honest and intelligent citizens have been neglecting their political duties, adroit politicians, banding with the worst elements in the community, have reduced to a science the means of dishonoring and defrauding the city and of enriching themselves at the expense of the industrious masses. We are to-day paying the price of our political folly and blind partisanship. A yearly interest account of nearly $3,000,000 upon our $40,000,000 of debt has to be paid through taxes and water rates. A mortgage equal to nearly one-fifth of its value has been forcibly imposed upon our real estate. The city has reaped almost no equivalent benefit for these enormous burdens. The prices charged for our public works have been fourfold, sometimes tenfold, the legitimate figure. Public money has been systematically used for private purposes, and organized fraud and corruption have for years been the governing forces in the administration of our public affairs. Even the ballot box, the fountain of power, the emblem of political purity, has been violated and outraged.

The men who have brought about and countenanced these evils have done all in their power to prevent the development and organization of a just public opinion, and have insisted most strenuously upon the binding obligations of party ties. But political partisanship in local affairs has not secured for us, and cannot secure for us, a good or even a tolerable government. We now have before us a ticket which is essentially a People's ticket, a ticket made up of the fittest men of all parties, upon the principle that honesty, capacity and integrity are the first and only things that are entitled to our suffrages. The agents and servants of a municipal corporation should no more be chosen for reasons of political partisanship than should those of a banking or railroad corporation. We do not administer our own medicines; we do not try our own law suits; we have our children taught by professed teachers; we have our armies led by experienced and scientific Generals. We do not choose our doctors, lawyers, teachers, Generals, because of their politics. In all the things of life, great and small, we rely upon men of special gifts and attainments. How, then, can we dispense with these advantages in the greatest and most difficult of all things, the art of government? We should choose the best men we can find, irrespective of party, to represent us, and then we should trust them. Otherwise power will remain where it has heretofore been, in the hands of unofficial and irresponsible leaders.

The present struggle is not a struggle for political leadership. It is an effort to administer a long-deserved rebuke to corrupt political machines and to unrighteous political methods. In advocating what is known as the "Coalition ticket," we know neither personal interest nor passion. Bent upon the extirpation of the Ring system, we have no ill-will toward the men who are its advocates, except in so far as they merit our condemnation for the evils they have done. We shall never have a better opportunity to free ourselves from the hateful system which we have suffered. War cannot be made with rose-water. Power can only be met with power, and the citizens of Brooklyn should take the matter in their own hands. Special care should be taken to make it impossible for the Ring to secure the incoming Board of Aldermen, that being the source of its patronage and its strength. A pure, firm and intelligent administration of our city Government is now within our reach. As tax-payers and citizens, forgetting our national politics, we call upon all good men to unite with us in discarding party ties in local affairs, and to vote against the Ring candidates and the Ring methods. These candidates are the representatives of a mischievous and intolerable system, and the system must be buried beyond all possibility of resurrection it our city is ever to return to peace and prosperity.

Let us defeat every man whom the Ring sufficiently trusts and relies upon to dishonor with its nomination.

GEORGE D. WEEKS,
Chairman Executive Committee Kings County Republican General Committee.
HENRY W. SLOCUM,
Chairman Executive Committee Kings County Democratic General Committee.
WILLIAM M. IVINS,

THE TRADES' SAVINGS BANK.

Samuel B. White, President of the Grocers' Bank of this City, was yesterday appointed Receiver of the Trades' Savings Bank—situated at No. 224 West Twenty-third street—by Judge Landon, of the Supreme Court. It will be remembered that the bank was closed on Aug. 26 last by an injunction obtained from Judge Landon, upon application of Superintendent Lamb. The order required the bank to show cause on Sept. 1 why it should not be placed in the hands of a Receiver. The recommendation upon which the order was granted asserted that an examination of the affairs of the bank had elicited the fact that two mortgages of $7,500 each on a house in Beach street, represented to be the property of Mr. A. M. Lesley, the President of the bank, and also a bond and mortgage of $6,000 on the house No. 237 Bedford avenue, which were placed on the books as assets were not recorded, and that the title to them could not be shown by the bank. The documents in question were produced subsequently however, and placed in the hands of the counsel of the bank, to be presented to Judge Landon when argument on the order for a receiver should be called. The bank officials at the time expressed their conviction that the production of this deed would demonstrate the stability of the institution and defeat the motion made by the Banking Department at Albany. As soon as the existence of the deeds became known to the depositors, a meeting was held and a paper drawn up and signed, praying that the Receiver be not appointed and that the bank be allowed to continue its business. This document was given to the counsel for the bank for presentation to the court. Nothing further was heard of the matter until the announcement of the appointment of Mr. White, yesterday. Inquiry at the bank elicited the reply that its affairs would immediately be placed in the Receiver's hands for settlement.

ATTEMPT TO DEFEAT THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

The New-York Chamber of Commerce received late yesterday afternoon the following communication from Willis Graham, Secretary of the Committee of "True Reform," accompanied by bundles of ballots left legible, but artfully canceled. The deposit of these ballots, instead of promoting, would defeat the proposed amendments. Let every voter carefully see that his ballot is not canceled:

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 2, 1876.

DEAR SIR: Can I request you, in the interest of free discussion, to distribute these circulars and ballots among your members, if your sympathies are with this movement in favor of a cheaper transportation; or at least, if your views tend otherwise, to leave them about your place of meeting, where all may read or use them freely. Yours, respectfully,
WILLIS GRAHAM, Secretary.

BARTERING AND PLEDGING THE VETO POWER FOR VOTES.

A LETTER CONSIDERED IN ITS TRUE LIGHT—A PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE "DICKERING" WITH THE PEOPLE—A NEW DEVICE FOR SECURING OFFICE—A POWERFUL ARRAIGNMENT OF THE SHAM REFORMER.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The reasons why Mr. Tilden's pledge, or rather proposed barter, of so much of the veto power as might be applicable to rebel claims, (for the purpose of securing votes and confidence in himself personally, after their loss by his party,) should not have that effect have been forcibly stated, and they appear to have been adopted by the public.

There is, however, another view of the subject, which, in reference to the future at least, is far more important, but which in the excitement of the times has been overlooked. I desire to present this in your columns. I shall consider Mr. Tilden's veto letter in its true light; as being a pledge to use the veto power in a particular manner, and as made to gain votes which his own reputation, and the platform, and history of his party put in peril.

Now, the President of the United States is made by the Constitution the head, or rather that officer embodies in himself all the powers, of the Executive Department of the Government. In its theory, there is a grand and nicely-balanced counterpoise between the Judicial, the Legislative, and the Executive Departments. Upon the preservation of the relative powers and independence of each, as originally constituted, depends the harmonious and safe action of the whole, as one Government for all the people of the United States. The writings of Madison and Hamilton, and others among the framers of our system, give frequent expression to their fears lest the Legislative Department should prove too strong for the Executive—a fear not without good cause, as the usurpation of a great portion of the appointing power by members of Congress has abundantly shown. It is that usurpation, and the further invasion of the Executive domain by partisan organizations, both aiming to dictate appointments to office, which give the most serious features to the problem of civil service reform.

So anxious were the members of the original Constitutional Convention to secure the necessary independence of the Executive that they were not willing he should be elected by any permanent body of officers, but required the vote of the whole people for a body of special electors. Mr. Hamilton says, in the Federalist: "They have not made the appointment of the President to depend on any pre-existing bodies of men, who might be tampered with beforehand to prostitute their votes; but they have referred it, in the first instance, to an immediate act of the people of America," &c.

It had evidently never occurred to Mr. Hamilton that dealings in the way of barter and exchange might be had directly between a Presidential candidate and the great mass of the people, through which, on the one side, the independence of the Executive was to be surrendered in advance, and through which, on the other side, the votes of portions of the people were to be secured as the price of such surrender, though the substitution of a body of electors between the people and the actual choice of a President may well be regarded as a further safe-guard against intrigues between Presidential candidates and the voters. As we all know, this device of a body of electors has not proved adequate, and Presidents are as actually elected by the people as if, like Governors, they were voted for directly by the people. And this fact makes Mr. Tilden's inauguration of a plan for gaining votes during a canvass by putting the Executive powers on sale in the political stock market all the more dangerous.

Let us consider, a little, the nature and probable effects of this new device for gaining votes for a candidate, which neither the character nor the platform of his party could command:

1. The President has several great powers. He may recommend measures to consideration, and bring the vast influence of his office and of all the Executive Departments to their support. He may veto any bill which has passed Congress, and unless two-thirds of each house shall sustain the bill, it will be defeated by the veto. He commands the Army and the Navy. He can grant reprieves and pardons for all offenses except those of impeachment. He can, with the advise and consent of the Senate, make all treaties. He can, with like advise and consent, appoint all Ambassadors, Ministers, Judges, and other high officers, &c. And with the President is the vast power of removal from office. The preservation of these powers, in their uncompromised and unbartered integrity and vigor, are the conditions of the reasonable strength and independence of the Executive Department. Take them away, and it would fall prostrate before Congress, and that organized partisanship of the country which inaugurated and has given such fatal power to the spoils system.

It is too plain for argument, that in the theory of the Constitution it was intended that each President, coming into his exalted position, should take it with all the powers in their integrity. He was not only to take them all, but during every hour of his office, he was to be at liberty, and to have resting upon him a solemn duty, to exercise them as the good of the nation might require at any moment when the question of their exercise might arise. It will be seen that these powers are very distinct, and that in terms and for a variety of objects, any one of them could be surrendered, or pledged, or exchanged to get votes, to please a party, or to conciliate a section. But can such surrender or pledge be constitutionally made—would it be morally right—does it befit the dignity of the office and the honor of the American people?

I venture to think that whatever promise a Presidential candidate may make to use or not to use any one of these powers, in a given way or at a given time, or in reference to any given subject, he will yet, if elected President, take his office bound, in the spirit of the Constitution, of the laws—and bound also in honor and duty—to exercise each of those powers as the welfare of the country may demand—or would of any other President in his place have demanded—at the moment when an occasion for their exercise may arise. How can an obligation of honor be created through an abuse of a public function, which shall be higher than the duty of faithfully discharging that function. These powers are not a mass of merchandise, or a collection of spoils, or the personal property of the President, to be traded away, pawned for votes, or used in political speculations of any kind during a canvass.

How can those who claim to be anxious to reform greater abuses of the civil service, which are the promising of offices to gain votes and partisan influence, justify the use of the public functions of the President for the same purposes?

2. It hardly needs to be pointed out that there is no difference in principle, nor in danger to the public safety, between pledging or selling the veto power and pledging or selling the power to recommend the passage of a given law, or to nominate to an office, or remove from, or to pardon a criminal. May a presidential candidate, in the heat of a campaign, to gain the votes of California, promise to support laws against Chinese immigration, and to gain those of Maine and Pennsylvania, pledge the veto power against any change in the Fishery or the Tariff laws? May a pledge of a veto of any bill to reduce salaries be used to gain the votes of the Army, or all those holding office?

If in any case a Presidential candidate may pledge the veto power to gain the votes of a section of the Union or a class of the people, why may he not do the same to gain the votes of members of Congress in case the election should devolve upon the House?

But where, it may be asked, is the evidence that Mr. Tilden pledged the veto power to gain votes? The case is too plain for detailed proof. His friends will not deny that his object was to gain votes. They justified his action as a shrewd move of an experienced politician, which is sure to have that result. The fact that they were mistaken only illustrates the forecast of the authors of the Federalist, where it says: "Talents for low intrigue and the little arts of popularity may alone suffice to elevate a man to the first honor in a single State, but it will require other talents and a different kind of merit to establish him in the esteem and confidence of the whole people of the Union, or of so considerable a portion of it as would be necessary to make him a successful candidate for the distinguished office of President of the United States."

No candid man will for a moment pretend the veto power would have been thus pledged had it been supposed that thereby votes would have been lost and not gained. Hence, not the welfare of the country, but the political prospects of a party candidate for office, was the occasion of putting an Executive function into power or abeyance for four years. Because there was not the needed confidence in the Democratic Party, its platform, or its candidates, those powers which the Constitution intended every President should have were put into the scale and weighed in favor of that candidate, against his duty and his unpopularity. In other words, he bargained, sold, and delivered—so far as he could—before he got his high office, a part of that sacred trust of discretion, authority, and duty which his oath of office will, if he shall be elected, call upon him to preserve, exercise, and defend day by day during his term of office.

I cannot see upon what principle or by what reasoning this pillage and sale of the powers of the Executive can be justified, which would not equally justify dealing in the same way with any other power and duty of the Presidential office. This would be an extension of the spoils system far beyond the mere power of appointment and removal, to which heretofore it has been mainly confined, so that it would embrace all the discretion and independence which are essential alike to purity in office and vigor in administration. And if a Presidential candidate may thus use his prospective authority to gain support, why may not a candidate for judicial office promise judgments, and for legislative office promise laws or refusal to repeal laws?

There is no end to the abuses and demoralizations to which the strange example of Mr. Tilden may not, and is likely to, lead, if not met by public rebuke.

3. If it be said that he has only promised not to do what ought never to be done, the answer is plain. He should have made no pledge on the subject. If his party could have commanded public confidence in its declaration, very well. Parties may declare their principles, and so may a Presidential candidate, and then the fair appeal is to public confidence. These principles may be, and are, changed in the light of more experience and under different circumstances. But such a pledge once made is unchangeable; and, if binding at all, must be kept at the cost of the public welfare. It was because it was believed that no declaration of purpose or principles would secure votes that the pledge was given. Faith was asked on the basis of an illegal and pernicious limitation of Executive power, which would not be commanded by the character or platform of the party or the candidate.

Now, if it is clear that it is right to thus limit the Executive authority on one subject, it may be done on any or all subjects. If the popular judgment shall sanction such an innovation upon the long-recognized proprieties of the Presidential canvass, then we may be prepared to see each candidate watching the campaign, as a spider watches flies upon his web, ready to pledge this veto or that recommendation; this pardon and that removal or appointment, as he may think will contribute most to secure the votes of sections and classes. The avowed principles of parties, their platforms, and the letters of acceptance of their candidates, will be only provisional, and at any moment, even up to the opening of the polls, will be liable to be amended, refuted, or repudiated. The vicious system of the candidate managing the details of his own canvass, which Mr. Tilden has inaugurated, will almost of necessity become the rule; for how else can a candidate know at what hour and on what subject to pledge a veto, pardon a convict, or put in power a promise to urge some new law.

We may be sure, also, that the moment this new extension of the spoils system shall come into use, interested sections and classes and jobbers in political influence generally, will be ready to demand such pledges and powers without limit, and thus a vast extension will be given to all the corrupt opportunities of our politics. I cannot think that Mr. Tilden sufficiently reflected upon the dangers which his unfortunate examples will not fail to produce, unless it shall be frowned down by the better public opinion. It may be conceded that he was put under great pressure and temptation. Still I cannot but think that, looking even no further than the issues of this canvass, he would have gained strength had he bravely answered in language something like this: "My principles and those of my party are before the country; our history and our aims are well known, and by them we ought to, and will, stand or fall. If I ever become President of the United States, I will enter that high office with all the powers the Constitution confers upon the officer, unpawned and unbartered. It shall never be said of me that, to gain votes, which neither my reputation nor that of my party could command, I put myself under bonds to exercise, or not to exercise, any power belonging to the President otherwise than as I might think right at the moment when its exercise should devolve upon me." And as to what will be the judgment of all thoughtful men, when this canvass is over, upon this first attempt to barter Executive functions for votes in the open market of politics, I think there can be but one opinion.

TILDEN'S WAR RECORD AGAIN.

HIS ENMITY TO THE SEVENTY-NINTH HIGHLAND REGIMENT—COL. LAING EXPOSES HIS FALSE PRETENSES—THE DISBANDMENT OF THE REGIMENT ORDERED BY GOV. TILDEN.

Joseph Laing, Colonel of the Seventy-ninth, Highland, Regiment, which did good work during the rebellion, has issued an address to all true-hearted "Brother Scots in America," to support Hayes and Wheeler in opposition to Samuel J. Tilden, the sham reformer, who was falsely accused by Mr. Manton Marble of having subscribed liberally to the fund for organizing the Highland Regiment in 1861, and of showing his interest in that regiment by attending the presentation of colors on Thursday, May 30, of that year. In THE TIMES of Aug. 24, this serious charge, imputing to Gov. Tilden disinterested interest in the cause for which thousands of Scotchmen fought and bled, was fully exposed. In the interest of truth, THE TIMES showed from records of the Scotch regiment and other trustworthy data that Tilden had never subscribed a cent; that he was invited, but refused to attend, as did many leading citizens, the presentation of colors by Lady Ewing, and that Mr. Tilden never afterward, in any way, aided the regiment. On the contrary, true to his abiding dislike of the gallant men who had aided in suppressing the rebellion, Mr. Tilden seems to have done all that lay in his power to cripple the regiment. The public are indebted to Col. Laing for this valuable piece of information, and the facts which that gentleman adduces "winna ding," even if such an expert financial juggler as Mr. Tilden applies his skill. Col. Laing, in his address, says:

"I appeal to the manhood of my countrymen to resent at the ballot-box, the insult given to the Scottish people in this country, by the disbandment of the Seventy-ninth Regiment, Highlanders, N. G. S. N. Y., the only representative military body of the Scottish people in this country. That insult was given by Samuel J. Tilden."

In another part of his address Col. Laing says:

"One of his acts in office was to disband the Seventy-ninth Highlanders under the plea of economy and reform. He, Gov. Tilden, retained one regiment no larger than the Seventy-ninth at an expense to the City and County of New-York, of $37,000 for rent and armorer's pay per annum, their Colonel and the majority of the men being Democrats. The expenses of the Seventy-ninth Highlanders per annum were only $11,000 for rent and armorer. If this is not sham economy and reform, in the name of common sense, what is? Still another well-known regiment, whose percentage of duty was less than the Seventy-ninth, were kept in service on account of being Democrats. To the credit of the officers and men of the Seventy-ninth Regiment, they never took part or interfered with any political matters. Still, when the country required our services we were always ready to do our duty. Gov. Tilden even ignored our petition and letter to him, treating us, in fact, with silent contempt, before the disbandment took place. Still he lately attempted to claim a share in the honor of presenting our colors and aiding the Seventy-ninth Regiment before our departure for the war. Need I say that he was not at the presentation of our colors, nor did he ever give a dollar to the regiment. All he ever did for us was to degrade us by disbandment."

This appeal to the remaining members of the regiment cannot but have its effect, but it will have a still wider influence among the Scotch residents, who never forget an injury to their fellow countrymen.

A PLEASANT PASTIME.

The Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer of the 1st inst. says: "A cavalry company was to have been organized last Saturday at Bethel Church, in this county, about twelve miles east of this city, but as the attendance was not full enough, no steps were taken. Another day, about the date of which we were not informed, has been appointed for a second meeting for a thorough organization, notwithstanding that some in the community are opposed to it upon several grounds. Some think that it would have a bad effect upon the colored people, tending to move them from the community, while others are of the opinion that it will interfere with the successful carrying on of farms, as many will neglect their work to attend or witness a drill. If judiciously managed, it will not harm the people in either of the ways mentioned, and, besides, it will be a pleasant pastime for the farmers, and especially the young men."

A QUIET CAMPAIGN IN A HOPELESS STATE.

The Smyrna (Del.) Times says: "For a quiet campaign, this one, so far as Delaware is concerned, caps the climax. There has been some activity in New-Castle County, but it has proved very tame compared with former elections. In Kent and Sussex it has not even been a 'still hunt;' it has been no hunt at all. With the result as sure as the Assessment laws can make it, the Republicans know it's no use, and consequently the Democrats have nothing to fight. With 1,400 voters left off the assessment lists in this county, a large majority of whom are colored men, 'black Republicans,' the Levy Court has succeeded in making a quiet campaign at the expense of the county revenues. More about this business, however, after the election."

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF MALPRACTICE.

THE DYING STATEMENT OF MARY HEINEMAN—ARREST OF THE WOMAN CHARGED WITH CAUSING HER DEATH.

On Thursday afternoon a request was received at the Coroner's office for the attendance of a Coroner at the Mount Sinai Hospital, where, it was stated, a young woman named Mary Heineman was dying, under circumstances which required investigation. Coroner Eickhoff assumed charge of the case, and, accompanied by his Deputy, Dr. Marsh, went to the institution for the purpose of taking the girl's ante-mortem statement. The officials found her in a very low condition, but nevertheless, strong enough to recite the following facts: She said her name was Mary Heineman, a native of Germany, aged twenty-three years, and during the eleven or twelve weeks immediately preceding her removal to the hospital was employed as a servant in the family of Rev. Dr. Mielziner, a Rabbi, of No. 160 East Sixtieth street. She was not married, but had been intimate with a man whose name she declined to divulge, and fearing that she would soon become a mother went to Mrs. White, of No. 207 Allen street, with the view of submitting to an operation at the hands of that person. She visited Mrs. White three times, and on each occasion either instruments or drugs were employed by the latter. In making this statement the girl minutely described the course of treatment. In less than half an hour after she had concluded death terminated her sufferings. Coroner Eickhoff at once issued a warrant for the arrest of the woman White, who was taken into custody by an officer of the Seventeenth Precinct, and she is now in the Tombs awaiting the result of the inquest. On May 22 last, Mrs. White was arrested on the charge of causing the death of Mrs. Matilda Barringer, of No. 419 East Fifty-second street, the wife of a wealthy manufacturer, under similar circumstances on May 17. When the case was submitted to the Grand Jury, the abortionist was indicted, but admitted to bail in the sum of $5,000, which was furnished by John Vetter, of No. 209 Allen street. Dr. Marsh yesterday morning made an autopsy of the body of her latest victim, and found that death was caused by utero-peritonitis, due to malpractice. The man who betrayed the girl is understood to be a steward on board a steam-ship now absent at sea.

THE WORK ON THE EAST RIVER BRIDGE.

The work of raising and fastening the great carrier cradle and other necessary wire ropes, which are stretched from tower to tower of the Brooklyn and New-York bridge, is being prosecuted with great vigor. There were up to yesterday six carrier and cradle ropes in position, and in a few weeks it is calculated by Mr. Martin that this part of the work will be completed. Yesterday the first foot-bridge rope was raised and fastened to its anchorage on this side of the river. Another foot-bridge rope is needed, and three more cradle ropes will complete this part of the work. The delay in fixing these ropes rests entirely with the manufacturers, who are understood to be employing all the men they can get in order to hurry on the work. The foot-bridge rope, which was raised and anchored yesterday, weighs twelve pounds to the foot, is 3,700 feet in length, and $2\frac{5}{8}$ inches in diameter. It is of similar make to the cradle and carrier ropes, although much heavier and stronger. The rope was anchored on the Brooklyn side on Thursday, and on the same afternoon it was successfully raised to the top of the tower. It was then fastened in the usual way to the running pulleys suspended from the carrier rope, and pulled half way across the river. This morning the work of bringing the rope over to the New-York tower, was safely accomplished. The end was made fast while preparations were being made for the stretching of the rope to its anchorage on this side of the river. The engine was set to work shortly after 1 o'clock, and in a very brief time the work was most successfully accomplished. Mr. Martin, the manager of the works, stated to a TIMES reporter, that he expected to have all the ropes up in about ten days. Work will be continued during the Winter, except when severe gales are blowing, and he is hopeful that by the Spring of 1877 all the cables will be ready for the great main cables, when the work of constructing the bridge proper will go on without interruption.

RIFLE NOTES.

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers of the American Bible Society was held at the Bible House, Astor place, on Thursday, Norman White Vice President, in the chair. Communications were made to the board from various correspondents in foreign lands, including letters from Dr. Bliss, of Constantinople; Mr. Milne, of Uruguay; Dr. Blodgett, of Peking; Mr. Bergne, of London, and from Dr. McGuirk, of Trinidad, who wrote respecting opportunities for circulating the Bible in the Republic of Venezuela. Liberal grants of Scriptures were made to the society's agents, and to various missionary bodies, auxiliary societies, and individuals, for sale and distribution; to the Southwestern Bible Society, at New-Orleans; the Memphis and Shelby County Bible Society, of Tennessee; the American Colonization Society, and the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, for work in Africa, the total grants including about eighteen thousand copies of Scriptures, more than half of which are designed for circulation abroad. Provision was made for extending the society's work in South America by the appointment as agent for Brazil of Rev. A. L. Blackford, who has been long engaged in the service of the Presbyterian Board as a missionary at Rio de Janeiro. The receipts for October were $36,701 83; copies of Scriptures issued 44,572.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT AT POISONING.

Richard Smith, residing at No. 115 Congress street, Brooklyn, a shoe-maker by occupation, caused the arrest of his wife and two sons, the latter named George and John, aged respectively nineteen and twenty-one years, on Thursday night, on a charge of attempting to poison him by putting laudanum in his tea. Smith and his sons occupy the lower part of the house as a shoe shop. They all sat down to supper together on Thursday evening, and the father, on attempting to drink from a cup of tea which his wife had prepared, noticed a peculiar taste and smell about it, and accused his wife and sons of attempting to poison him. This they denied, and he took the cup of tea and went with it to the nearest drug store, where he was informed that it contained laudanum. He then went to the Third Precinct Station-house, and caused the arrest of his wife and two sons on the charge of attempted poisoning. The prisoners were kept in the station-house until yesterday morning, when they were taken before Justice Delmar for trial. The husband, however, refused to make any charge against them, and they were released.

THE SINKING FUND COMMISSION.

The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund met yesterday in the Mayor's office. A resolution was adopted directing the Controller to draw a warrant in favor of the Chamberlain for $500,000, being the amount of interest on City stocks and bonds held by the sinking fund, the money to be deposited in the general fund for the redemption of the City debt.

An application from Mr. John McKesson to purchase the old station-house in Beekman street, and asking that it be sold by auction was laid over. Resolutions were then adopted authorizing the Controller to lease the following property for three years from Dec. 1: Nos. 91 and 21 Elizabeth street, No. 49 Leonard street, No. 71 Barrow street, and also property on Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth streets, between Third and Lexington avenues. The Board then transacted some unimportant business after which they adjourned.

COWARDLY ASSAULT ON A BOY.

On the night of Nov. 2, a lad, fifteen years of age, while crossing Forty-second street at Lexington avenue, was met by a crowd of about ten roughs who ordered him to get out of the way, at the same time using a volley of oaths. The lad paid no attention to them, but attempted to continue peaceably on his way, when the whole gang set upon him, striking him on the head and body with a lantern and their fists, knocking him down and rendering him almost unconscious, besides causing him to bleed profusely. The roughs robbed him of every thing valuable, even to his hat. The attack was so sudden that the victim was unable to identify them. The assailants were a detachment of the Democratic procession which took place on that night.

This morning THE DAILY TIMES consists of TEN PAGES. Every news-dealer is bound to deliver the paper in its complete form, and any failure to do so should be reported at the publication office.

There have been but two serious dangers in the way of Republican success in this State. The one was the over-confidence of Republican voters, and the other was the Democratic frauds contemplated in New-York and Kings. The first danger has ceased to exist. In City and country alike the members of our party are thoroughly awake to the necessity of steadfast, unfaltering effort, to be interrupted only at the close of the polls on election day. The second danger has been most effectively neutralized. Illegal voting will be found to be a very perilous game on Tuesday, and we feel perfectly assured that the vote will be as honest a one as has been polled in New-York and Brooklyn during the past few years. With these conditions secured, the result in the State is not doubtful. We have never committed ourselves to the certainty of a Republican triumph in New-York. We feel no hesitation in doing so now. We can discover no possible contingency which can defeat the Republican candidates in New-York on Tuesday. And as goes New-York, so goes the Union.

The certainty of victory in New-York is reinforced by the extreme probability of victory in Connecticut and New-Jersey. The tenor of our dispatch from Hartford is of a most encouraging character, and the most careful observers in New-Jersey express great confidence in the ability of the Republicans to carry that State. We have not been accustomed to reckon treachery or gross ignorance as among the dangers incident to Republican success. It is tolerably obvious that those who count upon the "Metropolitan States" for the Democracy must reckon on the existence of both within the Republican ranks. Let our voters and our election officers do their entire duty and the fight is won.

At this moment, thousands of men are visiting Philadelphia and New-York, with every appearance of an intention to be away from home next Tuesday. This City is thronged with people who ought to go home and vote. The majority of those who travel are Republicans. On a "Northern Central" train last Monday night, between Harrisburg and Philadelphia, a vote was taken, with this result: HAYES, 205; TILDEN, 66; COOPER, 20; SMITH, Prohibition, 2. On one of the trains between Philadelphia and New-York yesterday, a vote showed 309 for HAYES and 110 for TILDEN. These figures fairly indicate the politics of the traveling public. Close States cannot afford to have many such delegations absent next Tuesday. In behalf of the best interests of the country, we appeal to all absent voters to return to their places and cast their ballots.

There is something amusing in the trepidation with which the Democrats watch for the coming of TWEED and the approach of election day. If these two incidents could be separated, we should expect to see the Democracy perfectly tranquil so far as their former leader's advent is concerned. But the fact that he is overdue, and that he may turn State's evidence before the election, as they fear, seems to have thrown them into an agony of apprehension. Even the delay of the Franklin is seized upon by these panic-stricken partisans as being fraught with sinister meaning. Yesterday, two or three Tilden newspapers gave currency to the absurd report that the Franklin had been spoken at sea, "lagging along under short sail," and with the manifest purpose of deferring her arrival until after election. This yarn, which might be told to credulous marines, seemed too ridiculous to even its concoctors, who confessed that it "seemed improbable." Why, then, was it made a matter for comment and grave conjecture? One trembling editor assures his readers that a reward is offered for TWEED's reputed "confession," which reward will be paid, it is added, whether the document is used or not. Perhaps it is not generally known that Mr. TILDEN has intercepted the Franklin, and that the fat, bald-headed mariner from Vigo is at this moment locked up in the china-closet of a certain mansion in Gramercy Park, whence he will not be produced until next Wednesday, when he will emerge in a blaze of Roman candles and blue fire.

The Twenty-fourth Congressional District of this State is represented by WILLIAM H. BAKER, Republican, who is a candidate for re-election. Some time since the Democrats nominated CHARLES RHODES, who saw no chance for his election, and discreetly declined to run. There is a Prohibitionist candidate in the district, Mr. O. M. BOND, and the Democrats, after some cogitation, have nominated him, and will support him on their ticket. If there is one thing more than another that the representative Democrat professes to abhor and despise, it is an attempt to make and execute laws prohibiting the use of distilled spirits and malt liquors. And if there is one party more than another that has the ill-will of the Prohibitionists, it is the Democracy, though the Temperance men have uniformly played into the hands of that party. Yet here are both of these antagonistic elements united in the support of the same candidate. It is not likely that BOND will be elected, but if he should be, his election would be claimed as a "glorious Democratic victory," over which the usual amount of intoxication would be allowable.

Democrats are rejoicing over the continued antagonism which exists between the Republicans in the Thirty-first Congressional, or Niagara and Genesee, District. Mr. HOSKINS, who is the regular nominee, would be elected if the vote of the party were not divided. Mr. FLAGLER, whose friends persist in refusing to support Mr. HOSKINS, is practically yet in the field, though it is apparent that he cannot be elected. It is even said that, as election day draws near, and the fact that the contest is really narrowed to one between HOSKINS, Republican, and BENEDICT, Democrat, some of Mr. FLAGLER'S partisans have expressed a determination to support the Democratic nominee. This is almost incredible, and it shows that the hand of the Democratic managers has been busy fomenting this miserable quarrel. Mr. ALBERT D. SHAW, who went into the district at the instance of the State Central Committee, has partially composed the difficulty, and his address to the Republican electors very clearly places the responsibility for the possible defeat of Mr. HOSKINS where it will belong—with those who are willing to sacrifice national interests to merely personal considerations.

THE LAST DAYS OF THE CANVASS.

The issues of the Presidential contest are about to pass beyond the domain of newspaper and platform discussion. The arguments on both sides have been pretty well exhausted, and the man who complains that he has not had materials enough to assist him in reaching an intelligent conclusion must seek for the defect in himself rather than in the methods which have been employed for his instruction. A more reasonable complaint might be made of the superabundance of campaign material, and of the impossibility of any one absorbed in other business being able to sift from a huge mass of testimony and argument the materials for a satisfactory verdict. Fortunately, the issues to be voted on by the people of the United States on Tuesday next are few and simple. They are, indeed, susceptible of the most copious illustration, and it would be impossible to exaggerate the importance of their far-reaching consequences. But they can be understood by people who have little else to guide them save their natural mother-wit, and they can be intelligently decided by those who have paid little heed to the din of argument or the preliminary strife of parties.

The great issue to be decided next Tuesday is which candidate shall occupy the Presidential chair and which party shall administer the Government of the United States. It involves a question, first, of individual character, and, next, of party principle. The question of character affects the composition of the contending parties as well as the candidates whom they have nominated to represent them. The people must be satisfied not only that the party candidate is honest, able, and worthy of trust, but that the controlling element of the party behind him, is composed of men possessing similar qualities. The Democratic candidate breaks down under any such test as hopelessly as the Democratic Party. Had Mr. TILDEN been honest he would not have occupied the position which he does. Taking into account his opportunities, he could not by legitimate methods, have amassed the princely fortune which he possesses; but for that wealth he would hardly have been considered as a Presidential nominee; and but for his unscrupulous use of money he could not have been nominated. It needs but a very slight acquaintance with the history of the Presidential campaign to recognize the justice of these conclusions. There may be differences of opinion about Mr. TILDEN'S ability. Those who think that a strong dash of low cunning and a preference for associates of mean character and despicable talents are incompatible with a high order of ability, will certainly refuse Mr. TILDEN the title of an able man. There can be but one opinion about his untrustworthiness. In business transactions, he has disregarded his "sacred honor" for private gain, just as he has perjured himself to save a few thousand dollars of income tax. In his party relations he has been the associate of thieves when it suited his purpose, just as he has done the bidding of inflationists, whom he affects to oppose, when it suited his ambition. Whoever would estimate the personal characteristics of the masses of the Democratic Party has only to look around him. The slums of our great cities are peopled with them, they fill our alms-houses and penitentiaries. Even those who live neither in squalor nor in crime occupy, for the most part, the lowest level of the intelligence and education of our people. It is but five years ago since fifty-five thousand of them voted in this City for the candidate and associate of a convicted thief, and since they gave nineteen thousand votes to send that public plunderer to the State Senate. Lack of character has never prevented a man from controlling large masses of Democratic voters; a man may be a "boss" in that party long after he has come within the shadow of the Penitentiary. Have this party and its candidate character enough to be intrusted with the Government of the United States?

But suppose that no objection on the score of personal character could be urged against Mr. TILDEN or the party which supports him? Does he, or do they, represent such principles as the majority of this people would care to see predominate in the Executive and legislative councils of the nation? The results of the war are not so firmly secured that we can afford to intrust their protection to a man who declared that the Union was a mere voluntary compact, to be broken at the caprice of any of the parties to it; who denied the right of the North to coerce the South, and who sustained a resolution declaring the war a failure. The Democratic Party bases all its hopes of success on the votes of a "solid South." But the old slave States act together simply because they have now as they had half a generation ago, purposes and interests which are incompatible with the peace and prosperity of the rest of the Union. The Constitution as it is has never been accepted by two-thirds of what forms the effective force of the Democratic Party, otherwise we should not hear of a "solid South" at all. The vitality of the principles of secession is as clearly shown in the leadership of men like WADE HAMPTON, as is the vitality of the doctrines of inflation and repudiation in the nomination of THOMAS A. HENDRICKS. Does it need much argument to prove that principles whose supremacy threatens at once the foundation of our institutions, the stability of our credit, and the whole future of our development as a nation, should be voted down on Tuesday next?

The candidate, the party and the principle which stand in opposition to these are at least more in harmony with the demands of the intelligence and moral sense of the people. Gov. HAYES has passed through the ordeal of personal detraction unscathed; he has passed through a long experience of public life without a stain on his reputation, and he has been presented to the people as a candidate of whom the best elements of his party could thoroughly approve. During a long term of power, the public administration of that party has been far from blameless. It has tolerated men and approved of measures which history will remember to its discredit. But it has stopped far short of the crowning infamy of making evil its good. Its rank and file have been and are the sober, industrious and intelligent portion of the people; the main lines of its policy have been drawn with a steadfast regard to human rights, public honesty, and universal justice. It has never lacked the conscience to condemn wrongs done in its name, nor the independence to organize revolt against forces and tendencies which threatened to pervert its policy and corrupt its influence. Its candidates and its principles alike reveal the power of that spirit of intelligence and progress which still dominates it; its mission now is what it has always been, to protect the weak, to restrain the turbulent, and to deepen and widen the true foundations of national prosperity. Can there be a doubt as to its fitness to be intrusted with a fresh lease of power?

HAYES AS A CIVIL MAGISTRATE.

Gen. HAYES was inaugurated Governor of Ohio, Jan. 13, 1868, and continued in office until January, 1872. In October, 1874, he was the third time elected Governor, and in the following January resumed the duties of the important office he now fills. He is the only citizen of Ohio, since the origin of its existence as a State, who has had the honor of being chosen chief magistrate for a third time. Honest old JERREMIAH MORROW, the great orator CORWIN, the massive-minded CHASE, the clear-headed BROUGH and the accomplished COX, with all their honors were not honored in this way.

The first inaugural of Gov. HAYES, brief as it was, contained four valuable affirmative propositions. He laid down the general rule that every citizen ought to be taxed in proportion to the actual value of his property. He pointed out the great evil of excessive legislation. Condemning the unjust policy of making distinctions between citizens in civil and political rights, he urged that the organic law of the State be so amended "as to secure in Ohio, to all the governed, an equal voice in the Government." He declared that Ohio would "never consent" to the withdrawal of the ratification of the fourteenth amendment to the National Constitution, a withdrawal which the Democratic Legislature were then straining laboriously to effect. In his first annual Message, Gov HAYES recommends the removal of contradictions, imperfections, and inconsistencies in the laws relating to the assessment and taxation of property, the collection, safe-keeping, and disbursement of the revenues. In the interests of education he recommends the creation of County Superintendents of the common schools.

He argues the importance of providing for a thorough and comprehensive geological survey of the State. He presents as "the most important subject of legislation" the prevention of frauds upon the elective franchise. With truthful sincerity he says: "To corrupt the ballot-box is to destroy our free institutions. Let all good citizens, therefore, unite in enacting and enforcing laws which will secure honest elections.' Manifestly having in his mind what his present competitor for the Presidency had been doing in the early part of November, 1863, he added: "In the cities men called 'repeaters,' it is said, are paid wages according to the number of unlawful votes they succeed in casting at the same election." To remedy this ruinous evil he recommends stringent registration laws, and the representation of minorities in the boards of the Clerks and Judges of Elections.

In his second annual Message, Gov. HAYES urges the establishment of a Home for Soldiers' Orphans, in a slightly reproachful tone reminding the Democratic General Assembly that "the nation is saved, and the obligation to care for the orphans of the men who died to save it still remains to be fulfilled." To prevent the increase of local taxation, he recommends "definite and effectual limitations upon the power of County Commissioners, City Councils, and other local authorities to levy taxes and contract debts." All extraordinary expenditures should be submitted to a vote of the people, he argues, and lays down a political maxim worth millions annually to the people of this city, if regarded, that "all large expenditures should meet the approval of those who are to bear their burden." In the same Message he recommends the establishment of a State Agricultural College; better provision for the chronic insane; enlargement of the powers of the State Board of Charities; the ratification of the fifteenth amendment, and the restoration of the right of suffrage to asylum soldiers, college students, and all with a drop of African blood in their veins who had been robbed of that right by Democratic legislation. He returned to the subject of election frauds, and truthfully said: "All agree that a republican government will fail, unless the purity of elections is preserved."

A Democratic Legislature standing in the way of progress in the directions in which the progressive Governor was striving to advance, we pass to his second term, at the beginning of which he delivered the inaugural remarkable for its demanding, as a means of improving the civil service, an amendment to the fundamental law. In the same address he attacks the elective judiciary heresy, and advocates the appointment of the Judges for long terms with adequate salaries. Referring to the revision of the State Constitution, he utters opinions worthy the wisest statesman in the land when he says: "Convinced of the soundness of the maxim that that government is best which governs least, I would resist the tendency common to all systems to enlarge the functions of government. The law should touch the rights, the business, and the feelings of the citizen at as few points as is consistent with the preservation of order and the maintenance of justice."

In the annual Message of 1871, Gov. HAYES recurs to the subject of restraining local and municipal authorities from incurring debt and increasing taxation, and sensibly says: "The rule 'pay as you go' leads to economy in public as well as in private affairs; while the power to contract debts opens the door to wastefulness, extravagance, and corruption." In the Message of 1872 he returns a third time to the subject of the increase of local indebtedness, and urges that a practical prohibition be placed on local authorities in the matter of running into debt. He urges the investigation, prosecution, and exposure of official corruption and criminality, and refers with alarm to the causes "which, in the commercial metropolis of the country, recently lead to such extraordinary corruption in the government of that city." Referring to the encroachments of railway corporations, he asks that their legal rights and the rights of the State be closely inquired into. In his inaugural of 1875 he for the fourth time calls attention to the rapid increase of municipal and local expenditures, and sagaciously says: "In cities large debts and bad government go together. Cities which have the lightest taxes and smallest debts are apt also to have the purest and most satisfactory governments."

These are some of the reforms and improvements which Gov. HAYES labored to effect in his State. Here is a part of what he accomplished:

He secured the founding of a Soldiers' Orphans' Home.

He secured the establishment of a Reform School for Girls.

He had provision made for the care of the chronic insane.

Under his direction important prison reforms were introduced and continued.

He had the powers of the Board of State Charities enlarged.

He had completed a scientific geological survey of the State.

Under his direction the Agricultural and Mechanical College was put in successful operation.

Through his efforts the St. Clair papers and other valuable historical manuscripts were secured for the State.

He recommended and obtained minority representation on Election Boards.

Under his Executive authority the fifteenth amendment was ratified, and the Suffrage Amendment of Ohio was adopted.

The right to vote of the soldiers in the National Asylum at Dayton—taken from them by a Democratic Legislature—was restored.

The privilege taken from college students to vote where attending college, was again granted.

The infamous Visible Admixture law was wiped from the statute book.

Local taxation was diminished, and the State debt decreased over four millions during the five years of his administration.

Order and law have reigned everywhere in Ohio.

What the Republican candidate has uttered and what he has done best makes known his character as a civil magistrate. That he possesses executive and administrative abilities of the highest order is a demonstrated fact.

THE DEMOCRACY AND THE PUBLIC CREDIT.

The Democratic State Convention of Ohio which assembled at Columbus July 7, 1869, unanimously adopted these resolutions:

Resolved, That the exemption from tax of over two billion five hundred million dollars in Government bonds and securities is unjust to the people, and ought not to be tolerated; and that we are opposed to any appropriation for the payment of interest on the bonds until they are made subject to taxation.

Resolved, That the claims of the bondholders, that the bonds which were bought with greenbacks, and the principal of which is by law payable in currency, should nevertheless be paid in gold, is unjust and extortionate; and, if persisted in, will inevitably force upon the people the question of repudiation.

Observe that here are two distinctly stated propositions: first, that the Democratic Party of Ohio is opposed to paying interest on any issue of United States bonds, unless they are first taxed contrary to existing law, that is, contrary to law, as the law stood when the contract with the public creditor was entered into. For it must not be supposed that the leaders of this party in Ohio were ignorant of the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States had four times decided that United States securities could not be taxed, on the obvious principles that to tax would be to alter a contract without the consent of one of the parties to it, and that if the bonds could be taxed at all, they could be taxed out of existence. The Democracy resolved, then, to pay no interest until the securities were taxed contrary to law, and contrary to the Constitution; in other words, they resolved to repudiate the interest on the public debt.

The proposition in the second resolution is that to pay the principal of the public debt in real money is "unjust and extortionate," and will force the debt's repudiation. As the greenback is simply an overdue debt, a due bill, a broken promise to pay, of course, paying a debt with a debt was not paying it at all. It was only giving in exchange for a promise to pay, payable at a fixed date and bearing a fair rate of interest, another promise to pay bearing no interest and payable when the debtor saw fit. In short, it was repudiation if you do and repudiation if you don't.

Will Mr. BELMONT and his friends inform the public whether the bald proposition to repudiate the principal and the interest of the public debt made by his party in the third State in the Union, is likely to affect unfavorably the public credit? If not, will they explain the harmless character of these Ohio resolutions? Possibly, they may be able to show that such resolutions passed to-day in Ohio, Pennsylvania, or New-York would advance the price of United States bonds one or two per cent. at Frankfort or London. The men who passed these disgraceful resolutions, sacrificed THURMAN because he was not an inflationist, passed the wildest inflation resolutions at their State Convention in Cincinnati a few months ago, and are now solidly supporting Tilden and their special choice, Hendricks.

THE ARMISTICE.

The pressure which was recently brought to bear upon Turkey by the Russian Government, to induce her to sign the two months' armistice, needexcite no alarm. It was essential to the safety of Servia that a speedy truce should be made. Were the negotiations dragged out, a Turkish army might soon occupy Belgrade, and peace then would have quite different foundations than if made under the present conditions. Moreover, the utter prostration of Servia under the Porte might make peace less acceptable to the Muscovite masses. The Government of the Czar finds itself in the unusual position of being obliged to manage its own people. The feeling of the nation is for the first time in recent history not in entire accord with that of the Czar and his advisers. An utter defeat of the Sclavs of Servia might arouse such an excitement among the Sclavs of the North that no Administration could entirely control it. Speedy peace is therefore a necessity. The Ottoman is in that position in which a victory over his enemies would be his greatest misfortune. The Russian diplomatist knows, too, his craft. He understands that a little excitement and pressure on his part will stimulate Europe to support his demands. He can use adroitly the popular excitement at home to strengthen his own ambitious claims. In fact, the world will never know how far the present popular uprising in the Empire has been permitted or encouraged by the Czar to aid his European policy, and how far it has gone beyond his control. In either case, it furnishes another lever for Prince GORTSCHAKOFF to use in forcing the Turks from Europe.

The Sultan has, of course, accepted the armistice The recent proposal of the Czar to the Emperor of Austria to occupy his territory—though declined—has proved to him that an abyss of danger yawns before his rule in the European provinces. A joint Austro-Russian occupation of European Turkey would never permit it to return to the Sultan, as it was. The Turk would undoubtedly choose war before submitting to it, and hope for chances and the alliance of England. The next step must be a combined demand by the European powers for a new organization of Turkey, and a thorough reform of her administration in Europe. The Porte, in its present condition, will unquestionably grant, on paper, any reform which does not diminish the Empire and lessen taxation. There will be claimed by the powers an equality of Christians everywhere before the law, in the Army, in the courts, in provincial assemblies and in taxation.

To admit this, is to undermine Islamism from its foundations. No true follower of the Prophet can ever admit that such equality is right or proper, and, if forced upon him, it will always be resisted with the strong hand. Such a reform would never be accepted by the Ottomans of Bosnia and Herzegovina, unless forced upon them by the bayonet. Between them and the Christian races would be incessant struggle and warfare. If the European powers demand such a great reform, they must enforce it with Commissioners, and these officers must be backed up with troops. This means armed occupation. Again, the Bulgarians, after their recent experience of Turkish Administration, will appeal to Europe for protection against a repetition of the outrage, and will refuse any settlement which does not give her such protection. If the other powers decline, Russia must grant her request, and protection can come only by occupation. Servia, moreover, though beaten, will not submit to tribute, or the Turkish holding of fortresses, or the submission of her Prince to the Sultan. Russia will support her in this position.

It will be seen that the armistice affords no easy path to peace. There will be opportunities enough afforded by it for Russia to break off from the negotiations If, as many think, she is watching for this as her supreme opportunity to drive the Turks from Europe and win Constantinople, the time of these negotiations will be invaluable to her, and by Spring she will have 150,000 men, with all equipments of war, on the Danube. If, on the other hand, she follows the current of Sclavonic sympathies, and is determined to protect the Christians of Turkey without risking a great war, this will be the long-coveted time, and all Europe will aid her to enforce these claims on Turkey. It is not unlikely, as we have often intimated, that the final settlement will satisfy neither Turkey nor Russia, but will be, like the foundation of the Grecian Kingdom, the formation of a new Sclavonic State or confederacy, paying tribute to Turkey, but self-governing, free, with equal rights to all, and supported by the combined power of Europe.

JUSTICE TO STOVES.

This is the season when the rural householder brings forth the stove from its six months' imprisonment, and with fear and trembling undertakes the dangerous task of putting it up. Few fatal stove casualties have as yet been reported, but the sudden and enormous increase in the demand for arnica and divorces which is shown by the records of rural druggists and rural courts, is a sad proof of the danger which menaces the man who grapples with a large and violent stove.

There is a melancholy sameness in the manner in which the stove displays its unwillingness to be handled by man. Like the scorpion, which argues with its tail, the stove uses its articulated pipe as its instrument of attack and defense. So long as the householder confines himself to carrying the stove from place to place, it rarely attacks him; but no sooner does he meddle with its pipe than its fury is aroused. His first effort is to connect the lower joints of the pipe with one another, and here is he met by a determined obstinacy which is worthy of an independent and self-poised pig, or even of an experienced army mule. The joints refuse to come together, and bend all their energy toward gratifying a fiendish thirst for human fingers. Sometimes, after a long struggle, the wrong joints are forced together, and when the householder discovers his mistake, they refuse to be separated except at the price of more blood and additional scraps of cuticle. Nothing but cool bravery and determined perseverance will succeed in properly joining the three lower joints of a stove-pipe, and when this victory has been won, the worst of the battle is yet to come. It is not until the householder has mounted on a step-ladder and undertakes to place the upper "elbow" on the pipe and to insert it in the chimney that the strength, activity, and malignity of the stove-pipe is fully displayed. Its favorite feat is to release itself suddenly from the hands of its antagonist, strike his foot with its whole weight and its sharpest edge, and then to roll on the floor in evident convulsions of joy. Occasionally the upper "elbow" makes a vicious plunge for the householder's head, and instances are on record in which it has evidently torn his nose from its foundations, or driven its fangs deep into his skull. Efforts to subdue it with clubs or hammers are seldom effective. Usually, the more the pipe is pounded the more unruly it becomes, and the more resolutely it refuses to enter the chimney-hole or to adhere to the stove.

Startling as the assertion may seem, it is by no means certain that these terrible conflicts are necessary, or that mankind cannot live on peaceable terms with stoves and stove-pipes. It is an assumption, which is unsustained by satisfactory evidence, that the stove is necessarily untamable. BUFFON, it is true, asserted that "the stove possesses a fierce and indomitable nature, which cannot be tamed," and most subsequent naturalists have been content to adopt his opinion. Mr. HUXLEY, however, who, as an animal expert, is certainly at the head of his profession, disputes BUFFON'S assertion, and argues that inasmuch as the law recognizes the right of property in stoves, it therefore implies that they are not ferœ naturæ, and can therefore be tamed. He has never actually tamed a stove himself, for theory and not practice is his specialty, but his opinion is certainly entitled to respect, and is sufficient to show that the scientific world is not unanimous as to the alleged untamable nature of the stove.

There is good reason to believe that, were the stove treated kindly and intelligently, it would become as harmless as the grate or the furnace. Professional stove fanciers who deal in stoves never have any difficulty with them, and can always put up a stove without exciting it to the slightest demonstration of hostility. The average householder is probably to a very great extent responsible for the violence and bad temper of which he accuses his stove. He keeps it during the Summer in close confinement, where it mentally rusts and naturally grows morose. He does not make himself familiar with it and accustom it to be handled, but relies wholly upon his brute strength to keep it in subjection. Moreover, it must not be forgotten that when he mounts the step-ladder for the decisive struggle, he is almost invariably hot and excited. The presence of his wife, who stands near the foot of the ladder, expressing those wild and impracticable views as to the uses of the hammer, which are so characteristic of her sex and so well adapted to madden the other, has also its share in increasing his nervousness and in rendering him unfit to deal with his difficult task. In these circumstances he is apt to resort to harsh and violent treatment when it is not needed, and he ought not to wonder if he thereby excites the fear and resentment of which he subsequently complains. The mere fact that when a man is standing on a step-ladder with a stove-pipe in his arms he betrays a readiness to undervalue his wife's intellect, and to accuse her of "overlastingly chattering," speaks volumes as to his state of mind. The dinners that follow the season of putting up stoves are proofs, not of the wildness of the stoves, but of the irritability of husbands, and it may be safely asserted that an irritable man is unfit to deal with stoves or with any domestic animals.

Let us, then, instead of persistently treating the stove as though it were the inveterate enemy of the race, try the effect of kindness and gentleness. Weeks before the stove is to be put up, the pipe should be brought out and accustomed to the presence of the family. Its joints should be allowed to lie on the rug, or under the table, and from time to time they should be gently brought in contact, so as to accustom them to their approaching duty. When the hour for putting up the stove arrives, the house-holder should send his wife out of town, and after engaging a large Irishman with a club to remain within call in case of any extreme violence on the part of the stove, he should proceed to put it up alone. Possibly, this course of treatment might fail of securing the desired end, but at all events it is worth trying. The assumption that intelligent men cannot live in peace with stoves is simply disgraceful, and all humane persons should be anxious to prove its falsity without delay.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Gov. Tilden claims to have reduced the State tax for the current year by the sum of $5,677,506, which is just $322,494 less than the amount stolen from the sinking fund under the preceding Democratic Administration.

The single occasion on which Mr. Tilden voted on any important matter during his term as Assemblyman in 1872, was when the Committee of Seventy's charter was up for consideration. He made a speech which was universally understood to be in favor of the bill, and then voted against it.

Gentlemen who had been referred to in the complimentary terms in Gov. Tilden's Canal Messages were recently requested by the Governor's friends to meet them in New York. There was a meeting, though it was not largely attended. Two gentlemen, however, previously opponents of the Governor, came away from it convinced that the "old man was all right," and forthwith returned to Oswego County to work for Tilden and reform.

It is rather a good joke to hear it asserted that the colored voters of the South are dying to vote for Tilden, when we remember that it was Gov. Tilden who, during the war, in a speech made from the Delevan House balcony, at Albany, declared that negroes were nothing but monkeys without tails. There are old colored waiters in that hotel now who stood on the same balcony when Mr. Tilden was speaking. They are not dying to vote for him, by a long chalk.

Of the millions of bounty debt which the State once owed, there remained to be paid out of last year's taxes only $800,000. The debt being entirely liquidated, and the taxes to pay it being thereby removed, Gov. Tilden steps forward with a modest claim for the credit of the whole thing. Says he: "Mr. People, give me credit for that. You paid your debt last year, and through my economy and superior reform measures you have not to pay it this year."

The simple facts are that Gov. Hayes, though only fifty-four years old—eight years younger than Gov. Tilden—has spent eighteen years, or one-third of his life, in gaining official experience, judicial, civil, military, legislative, and executive. To equal that experience, Gov. Tilden would need to go and fight the rebels five years, to sit in Congress four years, to be Corporation Counsel of New-York three years, to be twice more elected Governor of New-York, and if he lived out his last term he would be close on to eighty.—From Mr. Dorman B. Eaton's Address.

If Mr. Tilden's pledge to veto Southern claims be as good as his pledges concerning canal contractors' bills, the country would be rather badly off in the event of a Democratic victory next Tuesday. The Governor devoted a large portion of his Canal Message to Willard Johnson's West Troy contract. It was, he said, a glaring example of contractors' frauds. Yet at the same session of the Legislature a bill to pay Johnson $55,000 on this contract was passed; and the Governor—well, he did not veto, nor did he sign the bill. But as Delos De Wolf, the influential leader in Oswego County, had bought Johnson's certificates, the Governor kept the bill the necessary ten days to make it become a law.

Let it not be forgotten that the last substantial reform in our City Government was fought through, not only without Mr. Tilden's assistance, but in face of his opposition. When in 1873 a number of able gentlemen and lawyers drew up the bill to turn out the infamous old Tammany Police Justices, (than whom a more depraved set of scoundrels never sat on a Judicial bench,) and to make the office of Justice appointive instead of elective, Mr. Tilden gave no assistance; nor did he lift a finger to aid the passage of the bill when his assistance would have been useful. But when at last it was passed, and was awaiting Gen. DIX's signature, he did unite with other politicians in a request to Senator Kernan to make an argument before the Governor for the veto of the measure.

As Governor of New-York in 1875, before he imagined his party would be dishonest enough to demand a repeal of the Resumption act, he had signed a bill providing that after Jan. 1, 1879, all taxes in the State of New-York should be "levied in gold, gold certificates, or national bank notes which are payable in gold on demand," and also that "every contract payable within this State," &c., after that date, shall be payable "in coin of the standard established by the United States." It seems almost incredible that any man seeking high office on the basis of statesmanship and honor, after having aided in placing the people of a great State under such an obligation, could turn around and insist that the national law, which alone would make the obligation tolerable, should be repealed.—From Dorman B. Eaton's address on "The Two Candidates."

No politically well-informed person can now be ignorant that Gov. Tilden's claim to the reduction of taxation in this State is false and hypocritical, and that the real credit is due to Republican votes and management; but it is not so well known as it ought to be that Gov. Hayes, though often thwarted by Democratic legislation, has succeeded in reducing the Ohio debt $2,773,406, and the State tax from 3.5 mills on the dollar to 2.9, with an annual saving of $914,593. He also reduced local taxation throughout the State more than $17,000,000, and procured the passage of laws forbidding municipalities to make any large expenditure without the sanction of a popular vote, or to incur debts beyond the amounts in their Treasuries. The credit selfishly and falsely claimed by Mr. Tilden is given to Gov. Hayes by the official records.

The World's one pet lamb is Belmont. If a hundred New-York bankers declare for Hayes, for the supremacy of the Union and maintenance of the nation's credit, the World sets up against them Belmont. If two hundred of the principal merchants warn the country of the peril the business interests are in from the possible election of Hendricks and Tilden, the relentless World overwhelms them with Belmont. If all classes of business men with notes of warning concerning the danger the Republic is in from the threatened supremacy of a solid South, the unfeeling World extinguishes them with a speech from Belmont. The beaming Belmont is the central sun around which the attendant World diurnally revolves. Like the diffident rooster who imagined that the sun rose every morning to hear him crow, this satellite imagines its august Belmont rises daily only to apply the needed lubricating oil to its axis.

When it became apparent that with all the talk about prosecution of fraudulent canal contractors and recovery of State moneys, there were no contractors to be prosecuted and no moneys would be recovered, Gov. Tilden's apologists had to fall back upon the claim that he had prevented frauds in the future by cutting off the "extraordinary repairs," in which the contractors found their richest placers. On this point it is well to remember that on the same day that Tilden was elected Governor of New-York, an amendment to the Constitution went into effect which read as follows: "Hereafter the expenditures for collections, superintendence, ordinary and extraordinary, repairs of the canals * * * shall not exceed in any one year their gross receipts for the previous year." This was a real, a substantial reform, which both parties were agreed must be made. Samuel J. Tilden had nothing to do with it but he has claimed the credit of doing it all.

THE REBEL WAR CLAIMS.

ADDRESS BY THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

THE INSINCERITY OF MR. TILDEN'S LETTER EXPOSED—DOUBLE DEALING WITH THE SOUTHERN LEADERS—MILLIONS OF CLAIMS COMING IN—ACTION OF SOUTHERN STATES.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE, FIFTH AVENUE HOTEL, NEW-YORK, Nov. 3, 1876.

The Republican National Committee calls the attention of the people of the United States to the extraordinary action of the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, and his party managers, regarding the rebel war claims, for the payment of which a grand raid upon the Treasury is contemplated in the event of Democratic success in the impending election.

Mr. Tilden, in a formal paper, under his own signature, promises and agrees to maintain, execute, and enforce the fourteenth amendment of the Federal Constitution, and to veto all bills for paying any "claims for any loss or damage incurred by disloyal persons arising from the late war."

An urgent appeal has also been made by Mr. Tilden to the Democratic leaders and State Committees of every Southern State, to join by telegraph in his promise, according to a prescribed form sent out by him, and to assert that the South does not expect the payment of such claims for loss or damage.

This remarkable action, on the part of Mr. Tilden and some of his Southern allies this committee does not hesitate to characterize as a virtual admission of the unsoundness of the Democratic Party with reference to the rebel war claims, which unsoundness is to be utterly destructive to Mr. Tilden's chances of election, unless new promises and desperate expedients can avert the otherwise inevitable result. The promise to veto the claims comes only after the hope of their payment and the policy of intimidation and murder have, he believes, made the Southern States sure for the Democratic Electoral ticket.

The promise to veto all claims of "disloyal persons" is to be evaded by accepting the doctrine that since the close of the war and complete amnesty there are no disloyal persons.

This is distinctly announced by Mr. G. C. Cabell, of Virginia, in his report in the House of Representatives of June 30, 1876, where he declares that proof by a claimant that he has received pardon or amnesty "is equivalent to affirmative proof that the party never gave aid or comfort to the rebellion." This favorite Democratic Southern idea that there are now no disloyal persons, is sustained by Mr. John Ritchie, of Maryland, in a speech of April 13, 1872; by the resolution of Mr. W. W. Wilshire, of Arkansas, in his bill, No. 553, for payment of claims for stores and supplies of all citizens of the United States; by the bills of Messrs. William M. Levy, of Louisiana, and F. H. Hurd, of Ohio, Nos. 1,674 and 1,883, opening the Court of Claims to claims for stores and supplies and use of property by all persons, without regard to loyalty; by bill No. 1,728, of Mr. J. F. Phillips, of Missouri; by bill No. 3,212, of Mr. Philip Cook, of Georgia; and by over one thousand similar bills, including No. 2,364, of Mr. H. Y. Riddle, of Tennessee, which provides for compensation "to all citizens of the United States for the use and occupation of their property during the late civil war by the United States Army or any part thereof."

Another contemplated evasion of the apparent promise not to pay rebel war claims is apparent from the language of Mr. Tilden and his Southern committees. His promise is only to veto bills for paying for "loss or damage." The Southern Democrats, according to Mr. Tilden's prescribed form, only say they have no hope of "payment for loss or damage to property."

These promises carefully reserve all claims for supplies furnished or taken, or for property captured, or for the use and occupation of property, which classes of claims cover more than four-fifths of the many millions of claims now pending before the House of Representatives.

The country can further judge of the possibility of stemming the current of rebel claims by Mr. Tilden's promise to enter into a conflict with his own party and veto its bills, by considering that many of the Southern States have already commenced auditing such claims, and issuing to their people therefor, in large sums, "rebel-claim greenbacks," payable by the States, whenever the same shall be allowed to the States by the United States.

The State of Missouri has received for audit 11,961 claims, of $4,844,362 29, as appears by Gov. Silas Woodson's Message of Jan. 6, 1875, and has presented to the United States Treasury for allowance such claims, amounting to $2,380,131 67, nearly one-half of which sum is for supplies furnished by rebels for the use of the Union armies. This total sum the State has audited and "allowed," and has issued certificates therefor, in form like the following:

No. 52.] [Seal of State of Missouri.] [$55 80.

It is hereby certified that the State of Missouri is indebted to Woodford M. Paris in the sum of fifty-five and 80-100 dollars on account of supplies furnished. This certificate is not payable by the State until after the claim of said Woodford M. Paris has been presented to the United States Government, and the amount allowed and paid to the State, and then only for the actual amount received from the United States Government.

CITY OF JEFFERSON, Mo., Sept. 8, 1874.
SILAS WOODSON, Governor of Missouri.
J. D. CRAFTON, Acting-Quartermaster General.
[Indorsement on back.]
WOODFORD M. PARIS.

Issued in accordance with the provisions of an act of the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, approved March 19, 1874.

These certificates are printed in the style of greenbacks, and have been put in circulation in Missouri, and many thousand dollars of them have been negotiated, and are now held in New-York City; and the undoubted object of their issue has been to create an irresistible public sentiment in favor of the payment of such claims by the United States.

The Missouri Democratic leaders have not yet responded to Mr. Tilden's appeal to them to promise, if he is elected, not to press claims for losses and damage. If they should so respond, and should even include these allowed claims for supplies, of what value are their or his promises in view of his letter of acceptance, wherein he declares that by the solemnity of legal and constitutional prohibitions alone, and not by the promises of men, can the people be guarded against Presidential corruptions in office, "experience having repeatedly exposed the futility of self-imposed restrictions by candidates or incumbents. Through this solemnity only can he be effectually delivered from his greatest temptation to misuse the power and patronage with which the Executive is necessarily charged."

Mr. Tilden's position, then, is that a constitutional amendment is necessary to protect the country against the corruptions incident to a President desirous of a second term, but that a promise before election to veto bills which his party is committed to pass, is a sufficient barrier against twenty-five hundred millions of dollars of rebel claims! And in this promise Mr. Hendricks does not join; while of the Southern Democratic Committees called to the rescue by Mr. Tilden, only five have promised not to press such claims if he is elected.

Z. CHANDLER, Chairman.

FLORIDA CERTAIN FOR THE REPUBLICANS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—In most of the estimates of the result of the Presidential contest made by Republicans, Florida is classified among the doubtful States, while all the Democratic estimates add Florida's four votes to the Tilden column. A well-informed citizen, who arrived here yesterday, states that Florida will certainly be carried by the Republicans. The Democrats of Florida concede the State to Gov. Hayes. Each party will elect one Congressman.
